U.K. Airliner Crashes Killing 95 on Board

By BORIS BOSKOVIC

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia (AP)—A British airliner carrying 127 persons on a vacation to Yugoslavia crashed and burned today as it came in for a landing and 95 persons were killed.

Officials here said 80 persons died when the plane plunged into a woods shortly after midnight Wednesday night in cloudy weather near the airport of this mountain city.

The other victims died in hospitals or on the way. Officials said that of the 32 survivors, two were in serious condition but the others were out of danger.

Rescue workers said those who survived had nearly all been seated in the back of the plane.

STUMBLING, WEEPING

When the first rescuers appeared, about a dozen survivors were stumbling about, weeping in shock and hysteria.

It was the worst air disaster in Yugoslav history.

Survivors were taken to Ljubljana hospitals, which issued an immediate appeal for blood donations.

Ljubljana police said 80 persons were killed in the crash, five others died en route to hospitals, and five others after admission to hospitals.

The airliner crashed shortly after midnight on a flight from Luton Airport, 30 miles north of London.

The plane had just cleared

Phone Operators On Strike

By DON McLEOD

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Long - distance communication lines throughout Newfoundland were crippled after a walkout of 160 operators at the vital Canadian National Telecommunications exchange in Gander.

A strike was already in progress at the province's other telephone company.

About 30 CNT telephone operators Thursday went out at Gander, apparently in sympathy with the nation-wide rail strike that has closed telegraph offices throughout Canada.

They stayed on the job for six days under a top-level union-management agreement to protect vital service, similar to one which is keeping the Newfoundland - Nova Scotia ferry service operating.

CNT supervisors tried to handle emergency traffic but many small communities in central Newfoundland and along the northeast coast were virtually cut off by lack of operators.

The strikebound Avalon Telephone Co. leases most of its long-distance lines on and off the island from CNT. It also has

Soldier Fires At Taxi Driver, Kills Woman

From AP-Reuters

SAIGON (CP) — A Vietnamese woman selling bread on a busy Saigon street was killed today when an American soldier took a shot at a taxi driver.

The shooting took place just before noon in a block crowded with bars, restaurants and American billets. Within minutes the area was swarming with American military police and Vietnamese policemen on the alert for Viet Cong violence aimed at disrupting the Sept. 11 election.

Three American privates were arrested.

An official said an American soldier got out of the taxi at the busy intersection and an argument with the driver took place.

One pistol shot was fired, hitting 33-year-old Dam Thi Mung, who was selling bread a few yards away, in the heart.

Her husband and children wept over her body as it lay beside laden food baskets.

Smallwood Denies Talks About Border

CORNER BROOK (CP)—Premier Smallwood denied flatly today that there have been any secret negotiations between Newfoundland and Quebec over the Labrador boundary.

In a statement issued here he said former Quebec premier Jean Lesage is "an unmitigated liar" if he said such a thing.

The volatile Newfoundland leader, now in the midst of a campaign for the Sept. 8 provincial election, said Churchill Falls "will run through all eternity without being developed rather than change one single inch of the Labrador-Quebec boundary."

Mr. Smallwood announced he has cancelled plans to fly to Labrador Sunday with a party of 120 for what was generally believed to be some sort of symbolic start on the projected power development at the falls.

He gave no reason for the cancellation.

U Thant Will Retire At Expiration of Term

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Thant announced today he will quit as United Nations secretary-general when his current five-year term expires Nov. 3 and will not seek re-election.

In a 1,000-word letter of resignation, Thant cited the UN's financial difficulties and the grave international situation, which he said he believed was remorselessly leading to major war.

He said the sufferings of the people of Viet Nam were "a constant reproach to the conscience of humanity" and that "tragic error" was being made in reliance on force in the "deceptive pursuit of peace."

An informant said Thant asked the Security Council to recommend a successor to the General Assembly.

The decision of the soft-spoken Burmese, taken despite heavy pressure from UN members — including the Russians and Americans — raised the prospect of an East-West clash later this year when the current five-year term expires Nov. 3 and will not seek re-election.

Thant also alluded to the ab-

Wants Neutral Viet Nam

By STEPHEN SOMERVILLE

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (Reuters)—President de Gaulle of France today urged the United States to agree to withdraw its forces from Viet Nam and accept internationally-guaranteed neutralization of the Indochina area.

In a major speech before 60,000 persons in Phnom Penh's vast Olympic Stadium, the French president declared the United States is so powerful and has such prestige that it could afford to give up an "expedition" in a faraway land that has no benefit or justification.

Acceptance of an international arrangement bringing peace to this important area would in no way finally injure American pride, thwart U.S. ideals or jeopardize its interests, he said.

De Gaulle said France is certain the Viet Nam war will lead to no military solution, "short of the universe moving toward catastrophe."

COMMUNIST VIEW

Associated Press correspondent David Mason said de Gaulle did not call for withdrawal of American forces as a prelude to negotiations—as North Viet Nam and its Communist supporters have demanded — he said:

"The possibility and even more, the opening of such a vast and difficult negotiation (to end the war) would obviously depend on the decisions and commitments which America would previously have chosen to take and enter into to repatriate its forces at an appropriate and fixed period of time."

De Gaulle took a gloomy view of the results if the U.S. does not follow the course he suggested.

"If this does not happen," he said, "no mediation will offer any prospect of success, and this is why France, for its part, has never envisioned and does not evision proposing any."

Government Pay Boost Offer to Railroaders Raised to 18 Per Cent

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP) — Two questions remained unanswered today as the government's bill to outlaw the railway strike headed into its final lap.

—Will the four leaders of the striking unions comply with a clause in the bill requiring them to call off the strike "forthwith?"

—How many of the 118,000 strikers will obey a companion clause ordering them back on the job immediately?

Prime Minister Pearson in a Commons reply to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said today he can't speak for the union leaders but that he has confidence on the law-abiding character of Canadians.

A government pledge Wednesday night to write an 18-per-cent wage increase into the law, an increase that cabinet members had argued was already implicit in the original draft, made little change in the situation.

W. J. Smith, president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, was seated in the Commons gallery with other labor leaders when the amendment was announced.

His immediate comment: "We're on strike for more than that."

R. C. Smith, who heads negotiators for the international non-operating unions, said the strik-

Rail Strikers Given First Of Two Pays

MONTREAL (CP)—The 118,000 railway employees on strike across the country should not feel any resulting economic pinch until mid-September at the earliest.

They received their pay this week for the work they did in the first two weeks of August.

On Sept. 15, they will be receiving more pay, but only for that part of the rest of August during which they were on their railroad jobs. They walked off the jobs Aug. 26.

The only one of the striking unions with a strike pay fund is the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, which represents 20,000 of the strikers.

The brotherhood fund provides for a maximum of $145 a month in strike pay, or slightly less than $5 a day. This is scaled down, in accordance with degree of need, to a little less than $4 a day for bachelors.

Members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen have been left idle as a result of the strike.

But they have been drawing strike pay from their unions.

One CBRT spokesman said the economic pinch of the stoppage may not be felt by the workers participants for as long as the next three weeks.

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — The Pearson government offered more money to striking railway workers Wednesday night and its revised back-to-work bill was expected to become law today.

The hyrsk in a fractious three-day Commons debate came at 10:50 p.m. EDT Wednesday when Labor Minister Nicholson announced an amendment to the strike legislation.

The government now proposes to grant an 18-per-cent wage increase over two years to the 118,000 striking employees, with provisions for further labor-management talks on wages and other issues.

The original bill introduced Monday set down a four-per-cent increase effective last Jan. 1 and another four per cent effective last July 1. Wage rates for 1967 were left to negotiation or arbitration.

The eight - per - cent interim settlement was denounced as totally inadequate by strike leaders and the Conservative and New Democratic parties. Threats were voiced that the workers would defy Parliament and remain on strike.

The cabinet met several times Wednesday and ministers began hinting at an 18-per-cent statutory wage boost.

MADE IT OFFICIAL

Mr. Nicholson made it official by reading an amendment providing for the new increases in 1967 —four per cent Jan. 1 and six per cent July 1.

The four-step adjustment was recommended a few weeks ago by two conciliation boards that investigated the rail dispute. Railway employees rejected the recommendations by heavy majorities.

Opposition spokesmen welcomed the government amendment but union leaders were reserved in their comments.

The Commons sat until 12:10 a.m. EDT today and agreed to resume at 10 a.m.—4½ hours earlier than usual—in a drive to pass the emergency legislation. Today's sitting was to continue without a break until the bill passed all stages.

Senate approval, royal assent and proclamation of the law by the Canada Gazette were due to follow quickly.

The massive rail and telegraph tieup, now entering the seventh day was provoking more and more industrial layoffs and other economic ills.

WILL THEY RETURN?

The big question was whether the strikers would obey the bill and return to work as soon as it became law.

The bill cleared a major hurdle Wednesday when it received second reading approval in principle—by a vote of 139-109.

The 122 Liberals backing the measure were joined by eight Creditistes, five Social Credit MPs, independents Maurice Allard (Sherbrooke) and J. A.

Lawyers Ask Easier Divorce

WINNIPEG (CP) — Sub-sections of the Canadian Bar Association endorsed a host of recommendations — among them resolutions calling for new grounds for divorce and a national law reform commission —as they reached the half-way point in annual convention Wednesday.

In an all-but-unanimous vote, the civil justice section sent to the resolutions committee a recommendation that desertion without just cause, voluntary separation of husband and wife for a three-year period, incurable unsoundness of mind or wilful refusal to consummate a marriage be added to adultery, rape, sodomy and bestiality as grounds for divorce.

And the administrative law section was solidly behind a resolution that a national law reform commission be established.

The divorce resolution is aimed at ensuring that children of broken marriages are protected when their parents part.

Under terms of the draft proposal no divorce decree would be issued unless the court was satisfied in respect to children under 16 that:

—Arrangements for the care and upbringing of the child had been made and were satisfactory or were the best that could be devised in the circumstances, or

—It was unpractical for the party or parties appearing before the court to make any such arrangements.

Heavy Industrial Layoffs Jolt Canada's Economy as Railway Strike Continues

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Heavy industrial layoffs jolt Canada's economy today, the country's sixth day without rail passenger service, while in Ottawa the Commons hastens to complete its study of the government's revised strike-ending legislation.

The government revamped its bill late Wednesday night as MPs began clause-by-clause study of the measure, by providing that the 118,000 striking railway workers get an interim wage increase of 18 per cent for 1966 and 1967.

This was the only amendment in the bill, which still calls on the strikers to go back to work and orders railway-management talks to resume under threat of compulsory arbitration.

The bill originally proposed an interim eight - per - cent pay increase for 1966 alone. It came under heavy fire both in and outside the Commons, and union leaders stressed repeatedly that the men were unlikely to resume work under such terms.

The strikers, members of 17 railway unions, walked off the job Friday in support of demands for wage increases of about 30 per cent and other benefits, in a two-year contract.

A major industrial shutdown set for today is that of McKinnon Industries Ltd., a supplier of engines and parts to General Motors of Canada. McKinnon has announced the layoff of about 5,300 men in St. Catharines, Ont., effective Sept. 6.

About 175 men of a work force of 1,018 have already been released at Wawa, Ont., where the giant Algoma Steel Corp. operates iron mines and a smelter, and Fiberglass Canada Ltd. at Sarnia has laid off 97.

Spokesman for industry estimate that more than 22,000 workers in various Ontario centres could be out of work within two weeks if the rail tieup continues.

In Saint John, N.B., the last woodworking run at the Atlantic Sugar Refineries plant ends today and a shutdown, affecting 350 to 400 workers, begins Friday.

Key industries in British Columbia say they can hold out for about two weeks, after which, as one executive put it, "many of us are going to be in trouble-bad trouble."

One of Nuns Expelled From China Dies

HONG KONG (Reuters) — A frail Irish nun, expelled with seven other nuns from Red China today in a Hong Kong hospital a few hours after they crossed the border.

At the bedside of 60-year-old Mary Sullivan, known as Sister Eamonn, were her seven colleagues. All were forced out of Peking convent-school last week by militant young Red Guards as part of China's "cultural revolution."

The Chinese government later charged the nuns with espionage.

When the nuns crossed the border Wednesday they said Red Guards forced them to stand with heavy packs while the young Chinese sang revolutionary songs and shouted slogans.

Later as they made their way to the China-Hong Kong border an estimated 700 youths shouted abuse and clenched their fists at the nuns.

Sister Eamonn fainted before entering Hong Kong. She was picked up on a stretcher by a cage cart by Chinese border guards, who then wheeled her to the border.

Once in Hong Kong, she was taken to hospital along with 75-year-old Mother Mary of the Cross, Canadian mother superior of the convent, who also fainted.

Mother Mary was the former Miss Margaret Duff of Frampton, Que. She left Quebec for China in 1918.

The nuns said armed guards were with them all the time on their three-day journey from Peking to Canton.

They added they had not slept for eight days, but were not physically maltreated.

China has charged that the convent—Peking's only foreign religious institution, which served as a school for about 200 children of foreign diplomats—was used as a cover for espionage.

The New China news agency said the nuns confined "with a number of counter-revolutionaries in the Catholic churches in Peking, Hopei, Shansi, Inner Mongolia, and Harbin."

The news agency added the nuns printed reactionary documents, master-minded counter-revolutionary plots, and committed acts of sabotage.

Alyea Wins Leave to Appeal Judge's Expropriation Order

COBOURG — Murray Township's apple grower Allyn Alyea yesterday stalled the plans of the Trenton Public Utilities Commission to expropriate 12 acres of his farm in an appearance at County Court here.

Alyea won leave to appeal Judge J. C. N. Currelly's decision of August 16. At the time the judge granted the P.U.C. entrance rights to Alyea's property and issued a restraining order against the 60-year-old farmer.

Judge Currelly said yesterday that "every litigant should have the right to appeal and I would have a natural repugnance to disagree" this appeal."

R.E. Nourse, Q.C., contended the commission's expropriation bylaws by claiming that they were premature and that the P.U.C. was never an official body. The appeal will probably be held at the end of October.

The dispute began when a joint application was filed by the P.U.C. and the town to take over 12 acres of Alyea's land to construct a 93,000,000 gallon water storage pond. The application was rejected by an Ontario Supreme Court justice earlier this month. A new expropriation by-law was passed and Alyea contested it.

For the present, at least, it is back to business for Alyea who will now concentrate on picking his apples.

New Northwest Territories Judge Going Back to Frontier Community Life He Enjoys

By RON MacDONALD

EDMONTON (CP) — When William Morrow goes to Yellowknife shortly to take up his appointment as judge of the Territorial Court of the Northwest Territories, he'll be returning to the kind of life he enjoys—life in a frontier community.

Edmonton was a frontier community when he grew up here in the 1920s and 1930s. He trapped rabbits in the bushland near his home and, as a teenager, watched bush planes take off for the North. Today, Edmonton is well south of the frontier.

Though Mr. Morrow declines to say anything about what he looks for in his new role as a judge, it is probably more than the desire to find a more congenial and challenging life in Yellowknife that is drawing him away from an established law practise here.

Mr. Morrow's acquaintances say he generally approaches a job with the intention of putting his ideas into effect with quiet diplomacy.

That would be a change from the approach of his predecessor, Judge J. H. Sissons, who retired last month after 11 years of battling against what he saw as arbitrary decisions of the "colonial bureaucracy" in the territorial affairs department.

PROTECTED RIGHTS

Judge Sissons tried to protect what he believes were the traditional law practices in the majority of Alberta, then almost immediately joined the navy for the Second World War.

He says his interest in the North dates from the time he watched the bush planes flying out of Edmonton. Curiously, he never actually went North until 1957, when his family took a motor trip through the Yukon to Alaska. Prior to that, he had worked on court cases from the Northwest Territories, which in those days could be heard in Alberta.

Since 1959, when he was admitted to the bar of the Northwest Territories, he has made four complete circuits of the territories with magistrates and Judge Sissons, acting always as defence counsel in the cases before the Territorial Court and defending in the one that went to the Supreme Court of Canada on appeal.

WILL GO ON CIRCUIT

He says that as a judge, he intends to continue the practise of taking justice to all the scattered northern communities on the circuit, rather than having those involved come to Yellowknife for hearings. Only in that way, he says, can justice be dispensed on the basis of an understanding of local conditions, customs and circumstances.

Among the cases in which Mr. Morrow acted as defence counsel were two involving the banning rights of Eskimos and Indians — the famous duck and musk-ox cases. In both, the issue was whether game ordinances applied to Indians and Eskimos, or the natives' traditional hunting rights outweighed the white man's regulations.

Judge Sissons acquitted in the two cases, but the acquittals were reversed in the Supreme Court of Canada.

Mr. Morrow has served as commission counsel for a 1956 inquiry into certain actions of the Alberta Social Credit government; a 1958 inquiry into the land dealings of Edmonton's then-mayor William Hawrelak; a 1965 inquiry into costs of Edmonton's centennial library, and this year's Rand inquiry into the actions of Mr. Justice Leo Landreville of the Ontario Supreme Court.

He is a member of the bar in Alberta, B.C., the Yukon and the Northwest Territories. He says he has almost no outside interests except his family—wife Genevieve and three sons and one daughter.

U.K. Airliner

the snow - covered peaks of north Yugoslavia's Julian Alps which rim this prosperous and modern capital of Slovenia. It was coming in for a normal landing when it crashed in a field near the runway.

The passengers were tourists coming to Yugoslavia for a late summer vacation.

Authorities in this city 80 miles northeast of Trieste sent an investigating commission to the crash site to seek the cause of the disaster.

In the confusion of the crash there were conflicting reports whether the plane crashed while landing or while taking off on a return flight. But authorities confirmed that the crash occurred as the plane was coming in from London, two hours and 30 minutes after takeoff.

The Britannia 102 plunged into a field near Ljubljana's Brnik Airport in the vicinity of the village of Modemosda.

Britannia Airways sent an emergency flight from Luton to bring company officials here.

COMPANY CHARTERS

Britannia Airways does charter work for British travel agencies. The company was formerly called Eucavia Limited.

The plane that crashed was a Britannia airliner of a type that used to be known as "the whispering giant." The plane and the airline have the same name by coincidence.

The last major crash involving a British - owned airliner was on Jan. 24, 1958, when Munich Overseas Airways Corp. Boeing 707 let crashed near Munich with the loss of 124 lives.

Britannias have a generally good safety record. The last one to crash, when a charter plane, came down in the mountains near Innsbruck, Austria, in February, 1964, killing 83 persons.

BOAC used to run a fleet of Britannias which are powered by four Bristol Siddeley turboprop engines. But the state-owned airline withdrew them from service when pure jet planes became available in large numbers.

The Ljubljana disaster was Britannia Airways' first accident since the company was formed five years ago.

Union Official Asks Workers To Obey Laws

OTTAWA (CP) — A former railway union official, Norman Fawcett, said in the Commons Wednesday that railway strikers should obey whatever bill is passed by Parliament to end the walkout.

"I do not in any way subscribe to a defiance of the law," he said amid applause. "I will implore the railroaders to obey the law regardless. There is a very thin line between democracy and anarchy."

Mr. Fawcett, freshman New Democratic MP for Nickel Belt and a CNR conductor with 18 years' experience, at the same time urged the government to amend its strike-ending bill to make it more acceptable to the strikers.

Railway workers were embittered at the railways' consistent refusal to negotiate wages in good faith. Employees had long experience and heavy responsibilities received outrageous wages.

spokesman said he knew of no factories in the area already laying off men. But production was bound to slow down soon and layoffs would follow quickly.

Concern for Canada's economy was expressed in the United States as well. How long, asked the Washington Post editorially, can Canada "stand a strike which paralyses transportation and is said to cost $15,000,000 a day?"

NOT ALL GLOOMY

All the strike news was not gloomy, however.

In Prince Edward Island, the CNR ferry service, disrupted since the rail walkout began, appeared to have returned to normal or near normal operation.

Air Canada said it had found that it has more than enough plane seats to accommodate extra passengers under rail strike conditions.

Planes were leaving airports across the country with empty seats because of double and triple bookings made by passengers who wanted to be sure of space.

The airline also announced partial suspension of embargoes imposed earlier on "live air freight," the technical term for animals. Live cargo shipments up to 200 pounds were to be accepted, and heavier ones also could be shipped provided advance arrangements had been made.

Residents in Canada's far north were reported to be suffering less than the rest of the country from the strike.

MAINTAIN MICROWAVE

The two railways serving the Yukon and the Northwest Territories are not on strike. Northern telegraph service has been halted, as in the rest of the country, but microwave communication lines are being manned by special arrangement. Supervisors are maintaining land telephone lines.

Inco Workers Vote to Strike Over Demands

SUDBURY (CP) — Members of the United Steelworkers of America voted overwhelmingly Wednesday in favor of strike action, if necessary, in their dispute over wages with the International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd.

The vote, announced by the union, was 91.4 per cent in favor of the strike. Of the 11,285 workers who voted, 10,298 were for the strike, 958 against and 29 ballots were spoiled.

The union has about 16,000 members.

A union spokesman said Wednesday night new meetings between Inco officials and union negotiators will begin today in Toronto and will be presided over by William Dickie, chief Ontario conciliation officer.

A conciliation board report released while the vote was in progress made no recommendations for settling the dispute.

The workers are seeking a wage increase of $1.20 an hour over two years and have turned down the company's latest offer of 63¼ cents over three years.

Provincial Police Take Over Frankford Law Enforcement

FRANKFORD — The Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police took over police duties in this village of 1,700 as of 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Reeve Ray Moran said late last night.

Chief Constable William Hockey finished duties here yesterday when his previously submitted resignation took effect. A new constable has not yet been appointed although the five-man council, assisted by Inspector F. J. Taylor, a member of the Ontario Police Commission, interviewed eight applicants for the job last week.

According to Reeve Moran the field has now been narrowed down to three men, two of whom are from the Toronto area. He said "we are waiting for further advice from Inspector Taylor before making a final decision."

It is understood that the O.P.P. in Belleville, 17 miles from the village, will maintain regular patrols in Frankford until further notice.

Wednesday, Aug. 31, 1966

The government revamped its bill to end the rail strike, promising a minimum wage increase of 18 per cent over two years.

Prime Minister Pearson said the change was being made because of misunderstandings about the wage increases contained in the original bill.

The original version only set two wage increases of four per cent effective during 1966.

The change came as the Commons sat through five hours of extra time in a drive to push the bill through.

The government got Creditiste and Social Credit support in two votes along the way.

The first defeated a Conservative amendment that would have scrapped the bill 138 to 110.

The second gave the bill approval in principle by a margin of 138 to 103.

The Commons then got down to the first five clauses of the bill before adjourning until 10 a.m. with a proviso to finish it at that sitting.

Union leaders earlier in the day sent Mr. Pearson a letter saying the original bill was unacceptable to the strikers.

Party leaders in the Commons paid tribute to Alexis Caron, Liberal MP for Hull, who died in hospital.

THURSDAY, Sept. 1

The Commons meets at 10 a.m. EDT to continue debate on the rail strike bill. The Senate meets at 11 a.m.

Three Remain Undefeated In Chess Play

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)—Three chess grand masters, two from New York City and one from Yugoslavia, were the only players to encounter with perfect five point records Wednesday at the halfway mark of the sixth Canadian open chess championship at Queen's University.

William Lombardy and Larry Evans, both of New York, and Borislav Ivkov of Yugoslavia, each defeated their opponents in fifth-round matches on of the 16 game, Swiss-style tournament. Sixth-round play begins today at 6 p.m. with 116 players in 111 competing.

William Sherwin, an American master from New York, and Laslo Witt of Montreal each defeated their opponents in the scoring system which gives one point for a win and a half-point for a draw.

Seven players are tied with four points each, including Pal Benko of New York, the only other grand master in the competition which ends Monday.

Of the four players driving to the tournament daily from Belleville, three had 3-2 scores. They are Robert Snefjella, a junior who is champion of the Belleville club, Terry Sidsbury of Toronto, former Belleville club champion, and Andrew Prenbourgers of Toronto. The fourth Belleville contestant, Rae Svansburg, has a 1-4 score. Snefjella, in his latest game, drew with Dr. G. Danilov of Kingston, who for many years held the Kingston club championship.

More Medical Manpower Said Needed

BATHURST, N.B. (CP) — Canada is heading toward medical care without enough medical manpower, the president of the Canadian Medical Association said Wednesday.

Speaking to the annual meeting of the New Brunswick Medical Society, Dr. R. K. C. Thomson of Edmonton, Alta., said the CMA has made its position on this problem clear.

"We had urged in our presentation to the royal commission on health services that it would be wiser to wait and build up our manpower before going into the financial side of medicare," he said.

While there had been an improvement in the ratio of doctors to population in Canada, the manpower supply remained inadequate to cope with the anticipated demands of medicare, scheduled to be introduced July 1, 1967. The ratio of doctors to population has improved from 1 to 989 people in 1961 to one for every 825 estimated for 1965.

DIVIDENDS GAIN

Dividend payments by Canadian companies for the first nine months of 1966 totalled a record $969,260,379 or a 13-per-cent gain over $854,188,814 for the same period last year, investment dealers J. R. Timmins and Co. reported Wednesday.

LOADING HIGHER

With a strike in sight, pressure on the railways increased during the seven days ended Aug. 21 and carloadings were 8.3 per cent higher than the previous week at 87,112 cars, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Wednesday. The total was 5.9 per cent more than a year earlier and did not include between 200 and 300 cars loaded by the CNR in the Toronto area, where an exact count was interrupted by a wildcat walkout of freight handlers.

Public Health Administration 'Changing of Guard' Marked

The new Hastings County Health Unit encompassing the county of Hastings and the city of Belleville officially came into being today.

With the birth of the new health program, members of the county health unit board and other officials met yesterday at an informal luncheon at the Hotel Quinte, to express appreciation to city board of health officials for their co-operation and assistance in launching the new organization.

Attending the luncheon besides county health unit officials were the new medical officer of health, director of nurses, and chief sanitary inspector, along with city officials, and representatives from the hospital board of governors and the hospital medical staff.

CHANGING OF GUARD

Marmora village Reeve William Shannon, chairman of the health unit organizing board, said the meeting was called to mark the "changing of the guard" and the beginning of an important new era in public health.

Health boards and county health units were both good he said, but the change to the new health unit system was being made for good reasons.

The county for many years had resisted the idea of a county health unit and it had remained for a visit by Dr. Matthew Dymond, provincial minister of health, to change council's way of thinking.

The minister, Reeve Shannon said, had congratulated the county for its co-operation with the city as joint owners of Belleville General Hospital, but at the same time had chided the county for not keeping in step with the provincial health unit program.

TRIBUTE TO MOH

Mr. John O'Flynn, chairman of the outgoing city board of health, welcomed the new medical officer of health and his staff members and at the same time paid tribute to Dr. McColl Metcalfe who he said had given "faithful and efficient service" in the city for 11 years as medical officer of health.

Major Jack Ellis said the transition from a medical health department to county health unit, although a "momentous occasion" was still but one more step in co-operation between the city and the county.

County Warden Clayton Hall expressed his appreciation to Reeve Shannon as unit board chairman and others who had brought about the health unit.

A McLean Haig, chairman of the Belleville General Hospital Board of Governors, also congratulated those who had made the health unit possible.

BLESSING TO HOSPITAL

He said that as far as the hospital was concerned, the county health unit would be a blessing that only generations still unborn could fully appreciate.

Others speaking briefly were Dr. C. R. Lenk, the new medical officer of health; city medical health officer Dr. McColl Metcalfe; Dr. A. Rota, president of the hospital medical staff; Mrs. Joan Hyatt, health unit director of nurses; and L. A. Ellenton, chief sanitary inspector.

Others attending the luncheon included City Clerk Adam Stalker, health unit board members Fred Beckett and Graham Mourck, and county clerk Carl Bateman, in his position as health unit secretary-treasurer, and Charles Plummer representing the Hospital Administrator's office.

Strike Situation

Hopes for a quick settlement of the rail strike have gone awry. Indeed, there was no reason to suppose a walkout of such magnitude could be solved simply by the introduction of emergency legislation.

Parliament itself seems in no hurry, judging by the amount of rhetoric as opposed to action which it has witnessed in the last day or two. Opposition leader Diefenbaker accused the government of "indecisiveness and ineptitude" in dealing with the strike. It was like the great defence hassle involving the Bomarc missile all over again. Mr. Diefenbaker was in the hot seat then and he got roasted by the Opposition in much the same terms he used himself the other day.

Meanwhile the strike continues, and with each passing day the prospects of economic disaster become more acute. The country's unemployment is already stalking the land, food supplies to outlying areas are threatened, and the public and industry denied a vital means of communication.

The railroaders have indicated they will not accept the government's offer of an interim 8 per cent wage increase, to be followed by compulsory arbitration if the railways and unions cannot make progress in collective bargaining by November 15.

But the alternatives to acceptance are bleak. As we have already indicated the consequences of a prolonged shutdown could be ruinous. As it is, the strikers ought to be satisfied in the long-run, if recommendations of Mr. Justice Munroe are accepted. These provide for increases totalling 18 per cent in a two-year contract.

College Street Bridge

With the construction of the new four-lane College Street bridge scheduled to begin next month, the Belleville public will be in for another (though necessary) trial of patience.

Council has amended the city's traffic by-law to provide a system of one-way streets for use during the construction of the new bridge.

From the public's point of view it is going to be Pinnacle Street all over again — enormous traffic snarls, short tempers, and rush hour bedlam. For one thing there will be no more snaking into the no-parking area outside the post office.

No vehicles, we are informed, will be allowed to stand on the east side of Front Street to a point 200 feet south from the Upper Bridge, and standing or parking will also be prohibited on either side of Pinnacle Street within 200 feet of Station Street.

That means the public must make other arrangements for melting their letters — like walking for example, or parking further afield. And just think what it is going to be like when the snow starts to fly and Christmas comes.

Still, it is going to be an interesting period. It will be a break in routine, bringing out the best — and the worst — in Belleville. Those overhead superintendents will be in their element, and when the bridge is completed it will make for improved communications in the city area.

Disillusionment

Canadians, when they think of the north country — the Northwest Territories and the Yukon — doubtless think of it as a land-peopled by lonely, wonderful characters in the real sourdough tradition.

Trappers and miners, Mounties and geologists, Indians and Eskimos all are part of the colorful pattern which tends to perpetuate this image of the north.

One of the color pictures advertising a well-known film manufacturer's product in druggists' windows these days shows two purposeful-looking fellows shouting the rapids in away-from-it-all country "north of the north. Just the sort of fellows one might expect to see in the Yukon and who in any test of canoeing prowess might be expected to leave teams from the "outside" standing, or stood on end, as we say out here.

But alas the image and the reality are far apart, for the Yukon crew in the 470-mile, seven-day race from Montreal to New York — the final practice run for next year's 3,500-mile centennial race — finished ninth and last for heaven's sake. And the Northwest Territories could manage only eight ahead of New Brunswick.

Manitoba was the winner, skippered by of all people, a chartered accountant, with British Columbia and Alberta second and third respectively, and then Saskatchewan, Ontario, Quebec and Nova Scotia.

Keep Off the Tracks

One of the hazards train crews face is that posed by youngsters loitering on or near the tracks.

With the strike now in progress the danger to the children of course does not exist.

When train service resumes, however, what then? Clearly this is a time when the youngsters should be discouraged from playing near the tracks alittle or no strike. If this is done now the threat to life and limb when service resumes will be minimal.

Glandular Trouble Rarely Cause of Fat

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am overweight. I don't eat very much but it could be heredity as my grandmother (mother's mom) is overweight, too. My dad said it could be glands. If it is glands what could be done to lose weight? I am 21 years old.—Olga

The reasons why some people get fat and others don't are very complicated, but they all come down to a single basic fact: if you eat more than you use up in energy, you get fat.

Why do some people eat more? Why do some use up less energy? Those are the questions to consider.

You say, my young friend, that you "don't eat very much." Are you sure? After all, you obviously do eat more than you need, or you wouldn't be overweight.

Heredity may play a slight part in eating habits. But most doctors (including me) believe that it is very slight when compared to the eating habits we acquire while young. Maybe your grandmother, being hefty herself, subtly taught you to like the things that make people fat—sweet stuff and starchy pulp is even more important those containing fats (more calories than sugar.) That's why pastry is so fattening. It contains both sugar and fat. A piece of fruit or some gelatin for dessert is much better for you.

Do you eat between meals? What about candy bars and pop? Do you raid the icebox? My advice is to eat three solid meals a day but to take a hard look at desserts and between-meals nibbling.

Now how about burning up the energy in your food? Usually the overweight person, perhaps just because he is too heavy, doesn't get much exercise. He'd rather sit. And sometimes he sits and sits! An hour or two of good brisk exercise every day can make a lot of difference.

Your father mentioned glands. It is true that glandular ailments sometimes are important. Sometimes! An experienced endocrinologist (glandular expert) will tell you that he sees a lot of heavy children whose parents think the condition may be the result of "glands." Actually, he said, it almost never is. If he can get the youngsters to change their eating habits, and get them going on vigorous daily exercise, he hardly ever finds that the glands need treating.

A metabolism test should come pretty close to settling the question of whether glands are involved. If that is the problem, then pills will help.

The real answer usually is to avoid the fancy desserts and candy, and to learn how much fun physical activity can be.

Dear Dr. Molner: I misplaced your article on hydrochloric acid and would like to know how much to dilute it. Does it make any difference if I buy it from a drug store or hardware store? — L. A. M.

First of all, don't consider it safe unless your doctor finds that you need it. If he does, he will prescribe the proper amount to be drugged. It has to be extremely dilute. At full strength this is a dangerous acid, and I don't want you to risk being burned by trying any do-it-yourself mixing.

Note to R. P. M.: No, bronchial asthma is not the same as emphysema. Emphysema means the lungs have lost some of their elasticity, so that breathing difficult. Bronchial asthma means spasm and congestion in the bronchial tubes, also making breathing difficult but for a different reason. Asthma, however, can make emphysema worse.

Strictly Personal

Personality and the Actor

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It is a well-known fact in speech therapy that stammerers don't stutter when they are placed on a stage to play a part. As soon as they divest themselves of their real personalities, the speech difficulty disappears.

A surprisingly large number of actors, performers and comedians have been stutterers in private life; but the second they step out in the role of the part wearing a professional mask, they become temporarily "cured."

In his interesting paper, "On Acting," Dr. Otto Fenichel, the psychiatrist, points out that it is a mistake to believe that a bad actor is one who does not "feel" his part. Indeed, Fenichel shows, when an actor identifies too closely with his part, he cannot play it effectively.

The stutterer's speech problem melts away when he becomes "another person" on the stage, to the same way, an actress who is cold, guarded and rigid in her private life can become warm and giving in a performance — provided that the role she is playing does not rub up against her personal difficulties.

I recently heard of a young man — a most talented actor — who took over the role of a troubled psychiatric patient in a play for a few weeks after he began playing the role, he was compelled to see a psychiatrist regularly. The man apparently, struck too close to home.

Another actress I know was forced to relinquish a juicy role in rehearsal, because the part disturbed her so much that she was unable to read her lines without breaking down. This confirms Fenichel's belief that acting represents a "conciliatment" of the personality, rather than a display of it.

John Barrymore intuitively understood this. In an interview many years ago, he said: "A man isn't an actor until he commands a technique which enables him to get an impression across into the heart of an audience without reference or relation to his own individuality.

"The better the actor, the more completely he is able to eliminate the personal equation."

And it was precisely Barrymore's professional tragedy that, as he became unhappier in his private life, he began playing his own personality more than the character on the stage — until, at the end, he was mocking himself with obscene parody.

Mystique of the Mountain

Hartford Courant

Serene and steadfast they stand against the horizon guarding the valleys and lowlands. At dawn as the sun lifts in the east, slanting rays paint a picture of soft hues when the light rays strike the evergreens mixed with the opening leaves of hardwood. Patches of fog lift slowly, as colors change from faint pastel hues to the familiar coloring in full light.

Millions of years ago these hills were kneaded and folded. They have known the brutal scourings of four great ice sheets. On them one can still see the marks where God's Great Plough sraped across the granite. When the last ice age ended some 15,000 years ago, trees and flowers returned, and now each hill has its zones. There are hardwoods and flowers at the base; then the belt of evergreens above. Near the top are the wind-tortured small trees in grotesque shapes. And on the summit are pockets of alpine flowers that live their life span in a few short weeks.

Why does man want to climb a high mountain? Because it is there and offers a challenge. Why do men in the valleys lift their eyes to the hills? Because the hills represent something enduring and certain, something in which a man can believe in an era when uncertainty and tension grip a world of nations still struggling to learn how to live together. Since ancient days when men first left shore surrounding terrian, men have spiritual comfort in the heights. It is not for all to climb above the valleys, but there are those who look upward and respond to the call of the hills.

Youth Parliament Lobbyist Gets the Bird From Judy

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Seems that just about everybody except State Secretary Judy LaMarsh, who killed it, has been mourning the premature death of the unborn Centennial Youth Parliament.

They just don't know from what strange fate LaJudy may have saved them—if indeed she has.

For while she has torpedoed plans for the Youth Parliament, she hasn't managed to submerge its seemingly unsinkable skipper, William Fair, who, at 27, has turned out to be simply and starkly the most formidable lobbyist the Capital ever has seen.

A deceptively mild-mannered innocent - eyed wispy blond bachelor, Bill Fair, with the unrelenting abrasiveness of a human-emery-wheel he mercilessly is under that soft bland exterior, had managed to wear down everybody on Parliament Hill — until he ran up against Bachelor Girl LaMarsh.

Until this fateful collision, Bill Fair, by his own cheerfully confident admission, was on his way to becoming Prime Minister in another 10 years.

But let's take it from the top, as they say on TV.

There he was, three years ago, out of Saskatoon Collegiate, down studying bassoon, sax and clarinet at the University of Michigan's Interlochen School of Music, when out of a clear blue sky, back in March of 1963, Prime Minister Diefenbaker packed him off to Paris and NATO as the "Representative Observer for Young Canadians."

POW

It was then it hit him that youth work—which had been only a leisure-time hobby and a music school vacation-time job could be his life-time career.

And so he zoomed straight from Paris to Ottawa and Parliament Hill hasn't been quite the same since.

There has been such a high-pressure campaign for the Centennial Youth Parliament as to leave any Hill resident or steam-rollered Prairie-flat, except, as it turned out, for the hard-as-a-rock LaMarsh.

Uninvited and often unwelcome, Bill Fair insinuated himself into the life of The Hill as no "outsider" ever had done.

He called on MPs and Senators in their offices.

Sometimes at home.

Incessantly.

He plopped himself down, unbidden, at their luncheon and dinner tables in the Parliamentary Restaurant.

He saw Prime Minister Pearson and each of the Cabinet Ministers, Conservative Leader Diefenbaker and his Opposition colleagues, and practically the "Spintire Party" leaders, the two Speakers, the Hill newspaper reporters, any of their editors who were careless enough to come within button-holing reach.

Talked to them over and over and over again.

He became what he unabashedly confessed was "a pest, perhaps even a bore."

But what did bow him down?

To shock the speed of a jet with the drop-at-nothing thrust of a tank.

If they dodged him — and some of them did — he only chased them that much harder.

Each time he grabbed one of them, willing or unwilling for his hard-sell pitch, he wrote the name down in what he called his "guest book."

He was working on Volume IV, containing more than 4,000 signatures — among them Pearson, Pickersgill, Martin and Company, and Diefenbaker, Churchill, Monteith, Starr and Associates — when La Judy, heiress gal that she must be, blew the whistle.

All and any deals there might have been now were off, she decreed by letter — cutting it from again confronting Bill Fair face to face — there would be no Youth Parliament and as to more "grants in assistance" like the $5,900 the Centennial Commission had given this young lobbyist extraordinaire.

Which, for the time being at least, seems to have taken care of the astonishing William Fair and the Youth Parliament, which, he was frank to tell you and all, he was counting on to provide him with a "basic 2,000,000 voters" in '76 when he figured on making it to the East Block and the Prime Minister's office.

The "basic 2,000,000 voters?" Those, he calculated, would be the number of Canadians between 15 and 20 who would be voting for the 265 young MPs of his Centennial Youth Parliament.

Meanwhile, he would be satisfied to be Deputy Minister of the new "Department of Youth" he was confident would be the almost astounding bureaucratic follow-up to the Youth Parliament.

Deputies rate as high as $27,000, which would do, he conceded, for "the next few years."

Then what?

"Give me another 10 years," he grinned and asked, "is there a 32 year-old Prime Minister — would 37 be too young?"

Guess who's 37 in 1976. And considered from who - knows what LaJudy may have delivered you.

That's just "may" have — for this Young-Man-Is-Hurry who works with a single-mindedness that can be frightening, has never heard of the word quit.

Frustrated!

I have decided that the dominant characteristic of the 20 million people who occupy this country (Canada) is fear—fear of life, fear of love, fear of being emotional and of expressing those emotions. Canadians are terrified of showing affection, warmth or joy or enthusiasm. What makes them that way, I suppose, is the political and economic and liberal and "educational" Establishment, whose sole purpose is to crush the human individuality and creativity and spontaneity out of them. The Canadian Establishment tries to turn men and women into grey little mice, and very largely succeeds.

Rave Reviews Greet Canadian Musicans

LONDON (CP)—Rave reviews from London music critics today greeted the European debut of Canada's National Youth Orchestra under conductor Walter Susskind.

Bouquets were heaped on 17-year-old pianist Nadine Macdonald of Toronto, soloist at Wednesday night's concert in suburban Croydon. The critics dubbed her performance of Ravel's Piano Concerto "astonishingly commanding and sophisticated," "impressive" and "superb."

The general reaction was summed up by Sydney Edwards of The Evening Standard.

"A splendid evening of stylish orchestra playing," he writes, adding that the 101-member orchestra should have made its debut to an audience of 6,000 in the Royal Albert Hall promenade concerts rather than in Croydon's 2,500-seat Fairfields Hall—packed to capacity Wednesday.

The musicians, aged between 16 and 24, "required no allowances for age," The Standard critic says. The youth orchestra showed a "distinctive musical personality," with the strings and particularly the cellos at its "chief glory."

Prince Edward Farmers on Way To Ask Greene for Assistance

PICTON — A bus-load of farmers left the market square here this morning at 7 o'clock to keep an appointment for an interview with the Minister of Agriculture, Hon. J. J. Greene in Ottawa. Their decision to travel to the capital followed a meeting held in Baxter's Hall in Bloomfield last Friday night when farmers gathered there for presentation.

Chairman of the Friday night meeting was Agricultural representative Ivan Bell. The resolutions seek drought assistance (Federal-Provincial) not only based on livestock, as was the case last year, but assistance to all those engaged in agriculture who were adversely affected by the drought (such as pea and grain growers, and those with orchards).

Requests include a three-year experimental trial of rain-making equipment and also a one-year suspension of the interest on government loans to farmers where the need is proven.

Algoma Talks On Contract To Be Extended

TORONTO (CP) — Talks between Algoma Steel Corp. of Sault Ste. Marie and Local 2251, United Steelworkers of America have been extended because of the ratification of a new contract by workers at Steel Company of Canada Ltd. in Hamilton Wednesday.

Judge H. C. Arrell 'd Hamilton, chairman of a three-man conciliation board appointed to resolve the Algoma contract dispute, made the announcement here Wednesday night. Earlier in the day, he said the talks, which began Monday, would end Wednesday night.

He said the non-monetary issues may be resolved today but the settlement between the USW and the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd., Hamilton, will probably influence monetary issues.

The 6,400 members of the local are asking for increased wages, an improved pension plan, extended vacations, supplemental unemployment benefits and a company-paid welfare scheme. The previous contract expired July 31.

It was announced Wednesday in Hamilton that USW workers at Stelco ratified a new three-year contract giving them a 70-cent-an-hour wage and benefit package.

In the final year of the new Stelco contract, wages will range from $2.51 hourly to $4.60.

Virus Attacks Cheese

A virus called bacteriophage, which hampers curding of cheese, has cost cheese producers in this area an unspecified amount of money, perhaps as much as one-half million dollars in 1966.

Henry Wild, office manager of the Ontario Cheese Producers Marketing Board, here, says the virus has put some cheese down in grade. It is difficult to estimate how much the lower grade has cost in dollars.

WINNIPEG (CP)—Many unhappy Manitoba vegetable growers are ignoring marketing regulations twice rejected in a referendum.

Some estimates say up to 50 per-cent of the 750 growers are defying the law which says they must sell their produce through the Manitoba Vegetable Marketing Commission.

It's a feud of long standing and the storm of controversy is expected to rage again this month when commission manager Bill Daman said a crackdown on the errant producers could be sought.

Producers who "insist on breaking a provincial law" could be fined a maximum of $500 or sentenced to three months in jail, he warned.

Rookie Agriculture Minister Harry Enns moved in, announcing formation of a commission of inquiry into operations of the commission. A referendum on the future of the commission was also promised, perhaps within a year.

"... It is reasonable that they should vote on whether they want this system continued," he said in a direct reversal from the stand taken by now - defeated agriculture minister George Hutton.

REFERENDUMS CRUX

The question of referendums has been the crux of the dispute since 1958 when the executive of the Vegetable Growers Association asked the provincial government for a marketing agency.

Growers in the 56,500,000-a-year industry rejected the suggestion by a four-per-cent margin in a mail-in referendum. Four years later, the proposal was revived and rejected by 40 votes in another mail-in.

But Mr. Daman says he has evidence there was something rotten in the referendum. Circulars sent to names on the referendum list resulted in an eight-inch-high pile returned because the names were unknown.

Agitation continued and from some quarters for controls on the sale of beets, cabbage, carrots, onions, parsnips, potatoes and turnips.

Mr. Hutton gave way and explained the reasoning to the Manitoba legislature this spring.

"Tremendous results" achieved by a potato marketing commission in the declining factor, he told the legislature. He added that a poll of growers contained 85 per-cent-of-vegetable acreage indicated 63.5 per cent were in favor of the agency.

COVER STORAGE

The new proposal would cover only storage vegetables while other plans covered the whole vegetable sphere. It would also represent the industry from grower to retailer while the earlier proposals called for a producer marketing board, run only by growers.

The new proposal would cover only storage vegetables while other plans covered the whole vegetable sphere. It would also represent the industry from grower to retailer while the earlier proposals called for a producer marketing board, run only by the growers.

With the new concept, the government went ahead over the protestations of a vocal group of growers and the provincial opposition.

Regulations gave the agency authority to pool and establish grades and, to determine when and where to sell and how much to charge.

It can sell or cancel growers' licences, inspect books and premises and search vehicles, set minimum and maximum prices and seize illegally sold goods and keep the proceeds.

Fines for violations are $25 to $500 for an individual, up to $1,000 for corporations. A Brandon grower caught selling for a restaurant was fined $25.

Mr. Enns, says most of the growers ignoring the law are the small producers but an estimated 100,000 bags of Manitoba's $4,500,000 potato crop is bypassing the commission control.

The vegetable producers association, a group formed to oppose the agency with about 300 members, says small growers are being forced to break the regulations or go out of business.

DESSERT FOR LABOR DAY

In June I made a Women's Editor's Apple Cake and was so taken with it I gave you the recipe. But I added a little promise to use the batter but to change the fruit to plums when that season rolled round. Now plum season is here—and I have made up the same batter into a plum cake using Red Lombards. It was a hit with our crowd and pretty too. It has an added dividend. It freezes perfectly.

I think it is an ideal dessert for Labor Day.

PLUMB GOOD (a variation of Women's Editor's Apple Cake June 23, 1966):

NOTE:

1) I am an enthused over the batter, for this cake I want our venturesome cooks to try it with other seasonal fruits. It is an easy and excellent basic batter. 2) This version is easier to make than the Apple Cake for plums are not peeled — they are simply pitted as you slice them.

¾ cup cooking oil
¾ cup sugar
3 eggs
1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 tsps. single-acting baking powder
½ tsp. salt
6 (1½" diam.) Red Lombard plums.
½ cup sugar (second amount)
2 tsps. cinnamon

Into your beater bowl measure the oil, sugar and eggs and beat until thoroughly blended. Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt and add all at once to the creamed mixture and beat for 2 min. Pour about 2/3 of the batter into well buttered 8 x 8" or 9 x 9" pan. (I used 9 x 9" teflon pan.) Cover batter with drained sliced ripe plums. Mix together the ½ cup sugar and the cinnamon and measure out 2 tbsps. and reserve them. Sprinkle remaining sugar-cinnamon mixture evenly over plums. Carefully cover with remaining batter. Sprinkle top with reserved sugar-cinnamon mixture. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 40 minutes. Test batter by lifting up a tiny section of crust with tip of knife at top center to be sure it is baked through before removing from oven. Serve warm (or cold) cut in squares. Some of our family put a spoonful of dairy sour cream on their servings. Others are it plain. You could add pouring cream or unsweetened whipped cream or even ice cream, I suppose.

Plan to make this Plumb Good for the holiday and add it to your dessert cake file.

Children's Clothing Rapidly Entering High-fashion Field

By MARGARET NESS

NEW YORK (CP) — School bells soon will summon the summer-dree bellies to classrooms and the youngest fry to their first taste of school.

The problem of what to wear for today's living has become as important to the school - age crowd as it is to their mothers. Children no longer wear pinafore versions of mother's wardrobe. They know what they like and what they want. They're acquiring an eye for styling and for color.

Their clothes are rapidly entering into the high-fashion field. Firms specializing in children's wear are even providing a theme for their semi-annual collections.

Helen Lee, for example, presented a woodland collection for fall, with her colors described in hunting language. Among them were red fox, gamekeeper blue (stronger than navy), mulled wine (a rather sophisticated name for a child's color and really a rosy violet), pink coat (red, naturally) and underbrush (a grey-brown-green mixture).

KNOW THEIR COLORS

Adults are gradually becoming aware that children, left to their own decisions, have an excellent eye for color. They like bright colors, but seem instinctively to know what bright ones go well together. The children's-wear firms are cashing in on this instinct and during the last few years children's clothes have become really gay.

Children also like and react to colors that once were considered suitable only for adults. Purple is a color in point. Even when it was in fashion, it was regarded as an adult color. This fall back in fashion and it's also appearing noticeably in children's clothes.

Little Craft based its entire presentation to the fashion press on plum shades. This was for children aged three to 13. Helen Lee's mulled wine is also in this category. Alyssa, with 200 styles in its fall collection, featured a deep purplish tone. And Joseph Love, whose children's clothes are also manufactured in Montreal, introduces a lovely burgundy.

For school, jumpers are still a top fashion, especially for the younger children. This fall many are their own blouses. Alyssa likes matching tones, such as a royal blue side-buttoning jumper with its blue-and-white striped blouse, its long sleeves flaring widely at the wrists.

Love also likes pillin color jumpers, teaming them with print blouses in matching colors. He fancies color contrasts, too. His Black Watch plaid jumper has a beige blouse. Little Craft introduces a swing corduroy jumper with brass-buttoned front and a chambray shirt with starchy white collar and cuffs for its long skinny sleeves.

SHOW MILITARY TOUCH

In Europe most schoolgirls wear uniforms, often a smock type. Smocked dresses are popular here, too, especially for younger children. Both plain, print and plaid dresses feature smocking at the neckline and on the cuffs of the newly important long sleeves.

Even older girls, from seven to 14, like smocked effects, as a chest shift in an evergreen fabric with its high round yoke and long-sleeved cuffs daintily smocked and ruffled. And a purplish - blue paisley was smocked with a white pique yoke and cuffs. A new idea in smocks is a vinyl coverall, introduced by Joseph Love, to be worn over a dress or a jumpsuit. This can easily be sponged clean.

There's also a military look in children's clothes for fall. The pea jacket is popular and even the guardsman's coat appears in miniature versions. Epaulets and brass buttons add an extra military touch.

One smart little tunic dress, front-panelled and cuffed in checks, was red - piped and brass - buttoned. Even some sweater dresses were decorated with brass buttons. Many sported tams knit to match.

There is a lot of interest in corduroy, too, for fall. Practical for school was Love's black and - white striped corduroy dress with a white vinyl, yoke and cuffs. He also showed a rosebud printed corduroy dress with a white knit turtleneck under a sleeveless cutaway printed jacket.

LONG SWEATER—This sweater dress by Alyssa, designed for back-to-school wear, is royal blue and features a turtle neck and low-placed sash. It was manufactured in Hong Kong. (CP Photo)

TUNIC DRESS — The military influence shows in this tunic dress by Love. The back-to-school costume is piped in red and has gold buttons to set off the piping. (CP Photo)

Tunic For Every Hour And Occasion Is Shown

By LUCIE NOEL

PARIS (AP) — Balenciaga opened the doors of his high-fashion salon to the press Tuesday and his collection not only appears to say the final word but wraps up fashion for the next six months at least.

One of his key fall-and-winter themes is the tunic for every hour and occasion, varying the length as he moves round the clock. Some fall to mid-calf and the longest are almost floor length, mostly in light colors.

He favors white and all the coffee and brown shades, tailoring them with flapped pockets and shoulder tabs for daytime, and winds up for evening in shimmering silver, pewter, flames, and metal-brocaded chiffons.

For an eccentric accent to his serious conceptions, Balenciaga has lots of fun with fur and feathers. Coq (rooster) and ostrich feathers are prime favorites. He does great cartwheel brims in coq feathers, in brown, white, black, coffee, and rose. They go with elegant matelasse ensembles.

Balenciaga opened his collection with three calf-length coats with 10-inch fur hemlines. They were for skiing and afterward. They toll the bell on the mini-skirt. One hemline was opposum, worn with coffee pants and a light tunic; the other brown civet and the third beige fox.

Draped jersey hoods and tailored tunics and ski boots told the winter tale.

Balenciaga's famous tailored suits are in the minority this season. Three grey ones in different fabrics show pressed and unpressed panel pleats, some in the back, others in the front or both back and front.

Little waist-length satin overblouses shaped in black or rose pink are charming. Jackets are velted, easily tailored with back belts and shirt collars.

One of his loveliest ensembles is for home entertaining is a spiral of pewter-colored metal brocade with its own floor-length coat worn with bright red baroucbe slippers.

Gifts of Jewellery Brighten Those Back-to-School Blues

Weddings May Suffer Due To Rail Strike

TORONTO (CP)—Girls with wedding plans may have difficulty getting the dresses of their choice for bride and bridesmaids if the rail strike is prolonged.

Tornado-made clothing is being stockpiled in shipping rooms because of transportation delays.

"We've been able to move dresses for last-minute weddings by air cargo, but the longer the strike lasts the harder it's going to be," said Phil Freedman, general manager of Highlite Fashions, makers of gowns.

Manufacturers who make bulky items like coats are worried about the amount of storage space that will be available for their production.

All manufacturers are concerned that large stores in Western Canada and the Maritimes may cancel orders and bring in clothing from other outlets, particularly American.

"We could ship 1,000 coats a day, but are lucky to get out 250 a day," said a representative of Apparel Originals.

"The hardest hit is the Maritimes because there seem to be so few trucks heading east."

Many manufacturers are sending small parcels by first-class mail rather than parcel post to ensure delivery. It adds about $2 to the cost of a 15 pound parcel.

And the additional shipping costs, said one manufacturer, will be added to the price tag.

Along with books, banners, and back-to-school clothes, best wishes to your favorite high school or college student may be warmly expressed with a thoughtful and meaningful memento — a lovely gift of jewelry, reports the U.S. Jewelry Industry Council.

Pierced ears or "The pierced earring look" are at such a popularity peak that there is virtually no limit to the designs, colors and types of earrings girls are wearing. With many young girls, the simple gold stud, the single pearl or brightly colored balls of coral or jade are most flattering, while their older sisters enjoy all-kinds of hoops in various widths and sizes.

To add a glamorous touch to the well-rounded back-to-school jewelry wardrobe, the well-groomed girl welcomes circle pins, whimsical animal pins, dramatic rings set with pearls, her birthstone and silver rings in handsome contemporary designs, as well as school emblem rings.

To bring a warm glow of pride to that special young man, the Council suggests a gift of a handsome modern watch. Today's new watches are practical as well as elegantly styled, and are sure to bring years of pleasure and precision performance.

The new rectangular and square shapes reflect the masculine liking for simplicity and boldness and come with attractively styled watchbands.

PITY POOR EXAMINER

DOUGLAS (CP)—Bill Shimmin, 61, the only driving examiner on the Isle of Man, has asked girls not to turn up for their tests in short skirts, because they distract him and his colleagues on the mainland. "Please, remember we are only human," he appeals.

CWL Against Broadening of Abortion Laws

HAMILTON (CP)—A resolution urging opposition to any attempt to broaden abortion laws was passed Wednesday, the final day of the 46th annual national convention of the Catholic Women's League of Canada.

The only discussion consisted of efforts to make the resolution stronger and include religious scruples.

The league's director, the Most Rev. Thomas J. McCarthy of St. Catharines, urged delegates to make themselves heard.

"If we don't stop abortion then in ten years it may be a matter of killing babies who have already been born."

The delegates also passed a motion urging government, labor and management to settle Canada's industrial economic problems.

Mrs. H. T. Donihee of Cornwall was elected president. Other officers include Mrs. Valanestine Fabris, Winnipeg, Ipholente Arsenault, Charlottetown, and Mrs. A. Boucher, Vancouver, vice-presidents; and Mrs. James MacDonald, Verdun, secretary-treasurer.

Mrs. Donihee succeeds Catherine Toal of London, Ont.

Gives Safety Pointers For Electrical Storms

DEAR DORIS — Would you please be so kind as to clear up a few misunderstandings about electrical storms?

1. How does one seek protection if they are caught out in the opening during a storm?
2. Is it dangerous to stand by an open window or in an open doorway during an electrical storm?
3. I have heard one should not use electrical appliances in the house (stove, iron, etc.) during a storm. Is this true?

—NEEDING ANSWERS.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR NEEDING — When you know more, you can do more. Here are your answers:

1. Run for a metal or metal frame building; or any building. Avoid a tree or a hilltop; dive for a ditch; or lie flat on the ground. A motorist should stay in his car and park it low and in the open. A swimmer or boater should leave the water — fast!
2. Yes. A draft could carry the charge.
3. Yes. The National Safety League of Canada says stay away from any good conductors, such as electrical wires or pipes or radiators.

And here's an additional fact: Artificial respiration could often revive a victim, whose nerves and muscles may only be paralyzed by the lightning bolt.

CONFIDENTIAL TO KITTY — Hold it, Pussycat! Many a Dulcitella has married an old-line Canadian and had a wonderful life — but at 16 you are in no state to know your own mind, let alone oppose a whole family.

Play the field. If this has the makings of a love match, it will keep; and when you develop the poise that comes with growing up, it's my guess that you can win the family over.

CONFIDENTIAL TO TROUBLED — At 15 one heartpalpitating line is no sign of lifelong devotion. If he "likes another girl just a little bit too" he is a normal Canadian boy. Take the sugar he dishes out with a grain of salt.

Find Process For Frozen Stuffed Apples

SUMMERLAND, B.C. (CP)—Federal researchers have found a process to provide the housewife with frozen stuffed apples ready to heat and eat.

The method was developed at the agriculture department's research station here. Most suitable apples for the process are blemish-free Rome, Winesap and Spartan varieties.

The core is removed from the fresh apple which then undergoes treatment both in a vacuum and in hot water for brief periods to prevent browning or loss of flavor during freezing and storage.

Core cavities are filled with raisins, chopped dates or other stuffing. The apples may also be covered with syrup made from cane sugar or honey and apple juice concentrate.

Then they are frozen.

To serve them the housewife just heats in an oven for 25 to 30 minutes at 400 degrees.

Parents Have Duty To Curb Carelessness

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — A three-year-old boy rode his tricycle down a driveway into the street and was crushed to death under the wheels of my brother's truck.

The parents of the child were in the yard at the time. They saw the boy ride into the street many times but did nothing to stop him. Those parents are as guilty as my brother yet the driver is the one who must carry the burden. Although exonerated of any negligence or violation of the law, my brother became despondent. His health broke and he committed suicide.

I am a mother, too, and I know how the parents of that small child must feel, but why, don't they realize it is their responsibility to keep an eye on children who are too young to exercise mature judgment?

Traffic has only one place to run — in the street. Children have many places to play — their own yards, the city parks, playgrounds. No driver wants to hurt a child. Truck-drivers are the most cautious of all. But a child can run faster than a truck can stop. Please Ann, print my letter and add a plea of your own to parents of young children to watch them and teach them to say out of the streets. — BROKEN HEARTED SISTER.

DEAR SISTER — I can add nothing to your powerful and eloquent letter. Thank you for writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — You said in your column a few weeks ago that you are sick of complaints about teen-agers' hair and I don't blame you But I hope you will print just one more.

Our 16-year-old son, Keith, plays the drums in a musical group. My husband and I both approve since we can think of worse things for a teenager to do with him time Keith says he needs long hair for the act. We don't like it but we've gone along.

Last week I noticed that the boy has been swiping my hair curlers. Also the can of hair-spray I bought a few days ago is half empty. I told my husband about it and he thought it was funny. I am not amused.

Should I ignore the whole thing and hope it will pass or what? — PERPLEXED.

DEAR PER. — For now say nothing. He'll probably get tired of it when the novelty wears off. But please don't wife to me in six months. If Keith is still fooling around with the curlers and hair-spray, I'll suggest some action.

husband to keep their mouth shut? Some women insist that if husbands to keep their mouth shut? Some women insist that if their husbands are unfaithful they would want to know about it. They are either kidding themselves or they are masochists.

The husband who confesses all is trying to ease his guilty conscience at the expense of his wife's peace of mind. It may make him feel better but it won't do much for her — except make her heartsick, depressed and suspicious forever after. I speak from experience because I've — BEEN THERE.

DEAR BEEN — I agree a contrite husband should keep his mouth shut and dedicate himself to better conduct in the future.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper ,enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

U.S. Caught in Middle Of a Marriage Squeeze

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The United States is caught in the middle of a marriage squeeze.

It looks as if 500,000 or more young girls are going to have to postpone their first marriage, or get hooked to somebody they would have passed up in normal times, or — worst of fates—not get married at all.

"The cause is the baby boom that followed the Second World War. The babies are grown up now and the girls are looking for husbands.

The trouble is that gals get hitched younger — than guys — ages 18 to 22 for females versus 20 to 24 for males. And most of the guys who were born during the baby boom aren't old enough, statistically speaking, to march to the altar. ,

It was all described to the American Sociological Association convention by two men from the U.S. census bureau, Paul C. Glick and Robert Parke Jr. In a paper they said:

"Generally speaking, the squeeze can be resolved in any or all of several ways:

"By the boys marrying for the first time at younger ages.

"Or by the girls marrying for the first time at older ages.

"Or by the girls marrying older widowed and divorced men, or older single men who might otherwise have never married.

"Or"—and here the paper let out the brutal news—"it is possible that more girls will ultimately not marry at all."

NOT ENOUGH MEN

The hard facts are that in the late 1950s there were 99 marriageable young men for every 100 marriage-ready girls. But in the early 1960s, the figure dropped to 94 guys for every 100 gals. Now it is down to 93 fellows for every 100 females.

In the cautious phrases of the scientist, Glick and Parke struck a statistical blow for the American male:

"The evidence so far suggests that in the first part of the 1960s, the marriage squeeze was relieved in large part by changes in the marriage patterns of the women, and not by alteration of the trend of ages at first marriage for men. . . .

"The young men have been successfully warding off the pressure from the mounting numbers of marriageable young women."

If the pattern continues, the sociologists said, more than "a half-million women will have to postpone getting married."

But the young bachelors had better enjoy it while they can. In the 1970s, the ratio will return to 99 guys to 100 gals.

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD BRYAN TYRER

Tyrer – Bonter

Bridge Street United Church, Belleville was the setting on Saturday, August 27, 1966, at 3.30 p.m., when Beverley Anne Bonter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold G. Bonter, Belleville was united in marriage to Richard Bryan Tyrer, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Thomas Tyrer, Lindsay. Rev. Harry M. Davis officiated at the ceremony and wedding music was rendered by organist, Mr. Alec Gordon, who also accompanied the soloist Mr. Kenneth Graham.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length gown of pure silk organza. The bodice featured a scalloped neckline of lace with bell-shape sleeves fashioned from a wide ruffle of lace and tiptured bow. The skirt was highlighted with appliqued lace medallions with the back dipping into a slight chapel train; caught to a tailored bow at waist. A bouffant veil of tulle illusion flowed from a pearl crown and she carried a cascade of stephanotis and lily.

Miss Mary Gibson of Milton, Ontario as maid of honor wore a burnt orange shade floor length Empire styled gown of peau de soie with matching wedding cap of lace and carried a bouquet of white mums. The bridesmaids Miss Heather Durno of Belleville, Miss Violet Collier, Belleville and the junior bridesmaid Miss Patricia Noyes, Oshawa, niece of the bride were dressed identically to the maid of honor. The little flower girl was Miss Cheryl McGee of Frankford, niece of the bride, who wore a floor-length gown of orange flowered shantung, burnt orange wedding ring headdress, and she carried a tiny basket of white pom pom 'mums.

Mr. Thomas Adam Tait of Sarnia was groomsman, while Mr. John Miller of Belleville and Mr. David Tyrer of Lindsay, brother of the bridegroom were the ushers.

For the wedding reception at Club Canara the bride's mother received the guests wearing a two-piece beige French lace dress with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. The bridegroom's mother assisted and wore an Italian design dress and jacket of pale pink imported cotton brocade, shaded pink accessories and a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses.

Leaving on a honeymoon trip to points west, the bride chose a three-piece cherry red double knit suit with white accessories and a corsage of white feathered carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. Tyrer will reside at the Diplomat Apartments in Milton, Ontario.

BOTTLE ART

From the interest in your letters about bleach bottle art, a basic tip or two concerning the mechanics of working with this tough plastic might just be in order:

Don't ruin your good sewing scissors. If you use them for shaping bleach and detergent bottles they'll be too dull for cutting cloth.

Use an old pair of kitchen ones and keep them especially for cutting paper and plastic.

It's a wise idea to file or sandpaper the edges of the cut plastic until smooth. The finished product looks better and all danger of anyone hurting themselves, even a little bit, is removed.

About that pungent bleach odor lurking inside. Remove it easily. Fill the bottle with water and a bit of vinegar, and leave standing a few hours. Wash out with hot sudsy water.

A razor blade is a fine precision cutting tool for intricate designs, but we'll add our word of warning one more time. Cover the top two thirds of the blade with adhesive tape to protect your fingers.

By the way, have you heard that the Dwight sisters are working on a new type of airplane designed from bleach bottles? — Susanna

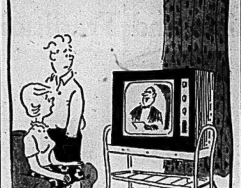
U.C.W. Meetings

FOXBORO U.C.W.

The regular meeting of Foxboro United Church Women was held on Thursday evening in the Sunday School Hall. The president, Mrs. S. Hayton, was in charge.



The worship service was conducted by Mrs. D. Dafoe and Mrs. F. Dudley. The scripture was read by Mrs. N. Collier and comments were given by Mrs. B. Hollinger. Mrs. W. Hornbough sang a solo accompanied by Mrs. G. Priest.

Interesting thoughts on Christian education were given by Mrs. B. Hollinger who also reported on her studies at the Five Oaks Conference. Miss D. Cook and Mrs. Hollinger attended the "Third Year Curriculum" classes which dealt with Sunday School administration and senior class teaching.

The Rev. C. Gilbert introduced and presented the film, "Inner City," and lead in discussion. The film showed the emptiness of many 'downtown' churches from lack of leadership in organized activities for old and young people, plus the fact that many families are moving to the suburbs.

Recommendations from an executive meeting that the fall bazaar be held the evening of November 2, between 7 and 9 p.m. and that a turkey supper be held on October 5 were accepted.

OPEN WOMEN'S JAIL

DIDN'T NEED A ROD

KENORA, Ont. (CP)—A 12-year-old girl from Los Angeles caught a 13-pound northern pike while fishing with her family but didn't use a rod or reel. She was balling out their boat when the reflection of the can caused the fish to leap into the boat.

Folk Believe What They Want It Makes Them Comfortable

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—In the last analysis, people believe what they want to, because in some mysterious way it makes them more comfortable.

Here are a few popular beliefs, widely held by many, that nothing seems able to put down:

That it was Mark Twain who said, "Everybody talks about the weather, but nobody does anything about it." This was written by Twain's friend, Charles Dudley Warner, but 95 per cent of the public don't remember him, so Mark gets the credit.

That a large head is a sign of intelligence. About the biggest head ever recorded belonged to an idiot.

That a good big man can always whip a good little man. This hasn't been true since the invention of the bow and arrow—and isn't true today in the jungles of Viet Nam.

That an honest man always looks you squarely in the eye. Most veteran policemen will tell you that it is the bold and unrepentent criminal who is more likely to do this.

That eating fish will make you more brainy. If this is so, why didn't an Eskimo beat Einstein to the theory of relativity?

That eating oysters makes men more virile. Can't be true, else middle-aged men would have made the oyster extinct long, long ago.

HEART IS HARDER

That a diamond is the hardest substance on earth. It's not as hard as the heart of a wife who makes her husband work himself to death so she can have diamonds.

That too much money is inevitably a curse. The trouble with this theory is that nobody ever gets too much money.

That men are afraid of brainy women. Actually, most men are more afraid of a dumb woman, because she can get them in worse trouble.

That elephants are afraid of mice. Elephants pay no attention to mice. What they really dread is that the human race will run out of peanuts.

That bachelors are happy, carefree and irresponsible. Most bachelors over 40 are selfish, maladjusted hypochondriacs.

That movie stars lead glamorous lives. Most of them feel as insecure as a live duck in a shooting gallery.

That top business executives work longer hours than do factory employees. They don't—they just think harder.

That red-haired women are more fiery - tempered than blondes or brunettes. How can this be, since most red hair today comes out of drugstore bottles.

BEAUTY COMES HIGH

A women's "beauty ranch" at Arlington, Tex., charges $750 a week for dieting, physical toning-up and beauty care.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

Mrs. Barton Haggerty opened her home for the August meeting of the Ivanhoe Women's Institute with 20 in attendance. The president, Mrs. Hewey conducted the opening exercises.

The program convener, Mrs. Lindsay Sills took charge of the topic for the evening, "Citizenship and Education". Many old school books were on display, Mrs. Russell Sills gave the motto, "He who ceases to learn ceases to live".

A discussion on the pros and cons of the "one room school" was most interesting. A sing-song of Canadian school songs was enjoyed by all.

The hostess and assistants served lunch.

RETAKE OWN NAMES

Family Reunion

COULTER CLAN

On Sunday about 40 members of the Coulter family gathered at Vandervater Park for their annual get-together.

At 1.00 p.m. all sat down to a meal, after which Mr. Harry Coulter of Tweed, R. R. 2, acting as master of ceremonies, extended congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Clare, who will celebrate the 40th anniversary of their wedding on September 1. Mr. Burton Coulter of Tweed, on behalf of the family, presented them with gifts. Their son Ivan and his family presented a decorated anniversary cake.

As the weather was warm, the younger members went swimming, while the older people visited. At 5.00 p.m. supper was served.

DON'T NEED RAIN

There is little rain in the Arctic but the ground stays damp because drainage is poor and evaporation slow.

Put Your Best 'You' Foward

The "what to wear" test for your wardrobe: Is your basic wardrobe ready to cover every occasion thats likely to arise? If you can answer one complete outfit for each — repaired and accessorized — you get a perfect score. Your clothes still have a chance to pass, though, if you can freshen them up with some special effects.

The "spot" test for your complexion: Is your complexion ready to complement your clothes by looking clearly fresh for all occasions? Unless you're one of the blessed few whose skin can be relied upon always to reflect a radiantly smooth and untroubled surface, here's a method to help keep the spots on your skin in check:

Working on the assumption that it takes less time to prevent breakouts than it does to heal them, wash your face twice a day with a medicated cleansing gel. This will help keep your complexion spotlessly clean by clearing pore openings, warding off surface bacteria. Then, after each washing, check your skin for blemished areas and wherever necessary treat them with a thin film of your gel for extra medicated protection. This treatment won't interfere with your social security, either, because the gel is greaseless and odorless, and can't be detected.

WOULD GET PAY

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Federation of Labor is urging that workers injured while acting as Good Samaritans on their own time should not lose any pay. In a submission to an inquiry on compensation, the federation said that in such cases workers should get their pay through the compensation board. The principle would be applied to helping police, maintaining order, or any act of preserving life and property.

HIGHWAY DEATH TOLL—Although Prince Edward Island leads the provinces in the number of highway deaths per 100,000 population, New Brunswick has the worst record when number of people killed on the highways is compared with the number of miles driven. The Atlantic provinces lead the rest of the country in highway deaths, both on a population basis and in deaths per 100,000,000 miles driven. Figures are for 1964, the ast year in which the number of miles driven are available. (CP Newsmap)

Half of Early-Morning Traffic Deaths Involve Drinking Drivers

By BOB MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP) — Last year 4,079 persons died in motor vehicle accidents in Canada. This year the toll will be even higher.

But statistics can be misleading. They are too narrow in scope or are based on different factors in different areas.

A National Research Council study group on motor vehicle accidents stresses the need for research to provide complete and precise detail on Canada's traffic accidents and fatalities.

In its first series of reports the study group shows the effect of different stories being told by the same set of statistics used in different ways.

For instance, 4,626 persons died in motor vehicle accidents in 1964. Quebec led the provinces with 1,581 deaths and Ontario was second with 1,424. The total represented 24.1 deaths per 100,000 population.

But was the Quebec record as bad as the total figure showed?

Quebec's toll worked out to 28.4 persons per 100,000, well above the national average but still only third among the provinces.

Prince Edward Island had a death rate of 31.8 while New Brunswick was close behind at 29.3. Nova Scotia was fourth on the list at 24.6, followed by Alberta at 24.5, Saskatchewan at 24.3, British Columbia at 22.6, Ontario at 21.6 and Manitoba at 20.6.

MILEAGE MAKES CHANGE

Using the rate per population basis, Canada's 24.1 death rate was below that of the U.S., 24.3.

But this doesn't take into account the amount of driving done in each province. This requires a new set of figures.

And the new figures, giving the number of deaths per 100,000,000 miles driven, shows some significant changes.

On the national level, Canada's rate of 8.7 deaths is far above the U.S. figure of 5.7.

In the provinces, New Brunswick takes the unenviable top position with 15.4 deaths per 100,000,000 miles. Quebec and Prince Edward Island tie for second at 11.7, followed by Nova Scotia at 11.6 and Newfoundland at 11.0.

Then comes a sharp reduction to 7.7 for Alberta and British Columbia, 7.3 in Saskatchewan, 7.2 in Manitoba and 6.8 in Ontario.

The northern states of the U.S. have much superior safety records. Connecticut has a low 2.6 death rate on the mileage basis, and Maine, which borders on both Quebec and New Brunswick, has a 4.2 rate. Heavily-populated New York has only 5.1 deaths per 100,000,000 miles.

These rates, however, are based on 1964 deaths. There isn't time when.

Ontario took over leadership in traffic fatalities for Canada in 1965, rising to 1,611 from 1,424. In the same period, Quebec was the only province to show a reduction in deaths, down to 1,341 from 1,581, despite increases in population, numbers of cars and numbers of miles driven.

It's too early yet to see the trend for 1966. Three big holidays—Labor Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas—still remain and they could have a serious effect.

When are fatal accidents most likely to occur? There are no figures in Canada to answer this question, but U.S. studies show 2:30 a.m. is the most dangerous hour to be on the road.

The U.S. national rate about 52 deaths per 100,000,000 miles driven for this period, compared to only one at 2 p.m.

Alcohol is the big factor. More than half the early-morning deaths involve drinking drivers.

Rush hours are relatively safe. The 12-hour period from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. accounts for more than two-thirds of the total driving mileage in the U.S. but has less than a third of the death toll.

King Faisal Seeks to Satisfy Reformists and Traditionalists

During a tour of the Middle East, Canadian Press reporter Carl Mollins talked with King Faisal. Here he describes the king's efforts to introduce reforms while preserving traditions in Saudi Arabia.

By CARL MOLLINS

JEDDAH (CP)—Saudi Arabia's coat of arms is simple and appropriate: a palm tree over crossed swords, a symbol of peace and prosperity above the suggestion of strife and destruction.

The purpose of King Faisal Ibn Abdel Aziz el Saud is to keep the palm in the ascendant, a delicate mission depopsing commanding a balance between forces and among conflicting international pressures.

At home, the educated young yearn for faster political and social progress, for an end to crumbling policy such as the seclusion of women and stern religious views. They want a modern business establishment, historically allied to the throne, opposed at least nominally as an infidel evil.

Pressure outside, the king is challenged as an imperialist pawn by Egypt and encouraged by some royalist neighbors to enforce a policy to keep intruders like Egypt out of the whole Arabian peninsula.

Since he assumed supreme responsibility in Saudi Arabia Nov. 2, 1964, Faisal has picked his way carefully among the rival demands. He has introduced reforms while speaking aloud of the need to uphold traditions. He has declined to be drawn into direct conflict with Egypt, but he is building his army and air force.

MANNER IS MILD

The king isastatisied a similarly cautious balance during an interview granted The Canadian Press. Sipping from an almost continuous supply of amber Arabian coffee or clear Russian tea, the 62-year-old monarch sometimes took evasive action in response to questions.

Of Egypt's intervention in Yemen and South Arabia and Gamal Abdel Nasser's threat against Saudi cities now the Yemen frontier, Faisal calmly made clear that the Egyptians are unwelcome on the Arabian peninsula. But he declined to say where Saudi Arabia would draw the line against Egypt, simply asserting that on its part, his government believes no desire to interfere with its peninsular neighbors.

"We do not believe it is in the interests of Egypt or the people there for Egypt to occupy Yemen," he said. "We believe the people there should have the opportunity to decide their own destiny."

The closest Faisal came to expressing direct hostility towards Egypt was in the comment: "Before Egypt, Britain has been an enemy to Arabia"—thus linking Egypt with imperialism by innuendo.

OFFERS CO-OPERATION

He reflected a soft answer to reminders of Nasser's harsh personal attacks, in which Faisal was denounced as a "feudalist" plotting an alliance of reactive against Arab progress.

"As far as we are concerned, we have no such ambitions," the king said. "We want to co-operate. We are still ready to co-operate. If they (the Egyptians) do not wish to, that is their business."

Speaking of efforts to develop Saudi industry beyond the eastern oilfield, Faisal said:

"We have not achieved a real deal yet. There have been shortcomings. But we are only beginning and we are going to achieve much. . . .

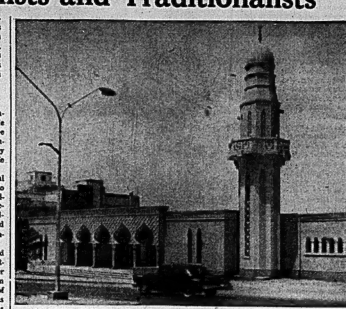
"We would welcome investment by Canadian businessmen. Why not? The door is open in any field, because we have a free economy. We welcome anybody — except the Communists."

Asked about agitation by younger Saudis for quicker progress and whether he planned to permit popular representation in government, Faisal was firm.

"We shall abide by our own religion and our own traditions," he said. "But our religion and traditions are able to accommodate true progress. Some peopl think progress. Some people think progthings. Thank God our own religious law is not opposed to anything that is in the interests of mankind."

FAMILY RUNS COUNTRY

Faisal thus indicated that he and his close kinfolk—two brothers head defence and internal security, an uncle is finance minister and two other brothers govern Riyadh and Medina provinces—intend to maintain control and decide what is in the interests of the country.



Compared with his prodigal brother Saud, Faisal is a galloping reformist. He has abolished slavery, curbed the oppressive powers of the religious police and taken steps to free wigmen from purdah through education.

The reforms have served to forestall serious popular opposition. Faisal was threatened in recent years. But they have also whetted youthful appetites for more.

Faisal's task of balancing the palm above the swords gets harder as it goes on. Even if he maintains his record of adeptness, it is still an open question what will happen when it is time for his brother, Crown Prince Khaled, to succeed to the throne.

Shortly after the interview with Faisal, a young government economist was trying to explain the ramifications of the Saudi royal family, including the line of succession. Finally he sat back and shrugged.

"Maktuk," he said quietly, "what does it matter? After this king, they will be finished."

ISLAMIC POWER CONTINUES—This modern mosque in Riyadh, the royal capital of Saudi Arabia, indicates the power of Islamic traditionalists. The mosque is one of dozens throughout the town where Moslem ritual makes a strong impact on everyday life. All businesses close for prayers each day. There are no public movies. It is still rare for a man to take his wife out publicly for dinner. (CP Photo)

SCHOOL FOR GIRLS — Young Saudi Arabian girls attend Dar el Hanan school in Jeddah, one of the first schools for girls established in Saudi Arabia. Although veils are discarded inside the convent-high walls around the school, older girls wear their veils between home and school. The school, opened nine years ago, is backed financially by Queen Effat. (CP Photo)

Two Canadians Win Rich Aussie Lottery

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters) Two young Canadians today shared first prize of $200,000 Australian ($247,000) in Australia's richest lottery.

They are Ron Ouellette, 23, of Peterborough, Ont. and Jack McLaren.

The two arrived in Sydney several months ago and began work together at a Sydney hotel.

McLaren left Sydney recently for a vacation in Hong Kong, but before leaving he and Ouellette shared six tickets in the state - government sponsored Opera House Lottery.

Today, one of them took first prize.

McLaren was unaware of his win since attempts by his partner to telephone him failed.

However Ouellette did telephone his parents in Pembroke to tell them of his win.

He told reporters he would leave on a world trip as soon as the hotel had found a replacement. He said he also would send some of his winnings to his parents.

Rhodesia Gives Commonwealth Really Tough Political Test

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Each day shows that the Commonwealth is facing its toughest political test since South Africa left five years ago.

President Kenneth Kaunda's statement Tuesday that he is "disgusted" with Prime Minister Wilson is taken with extreme seriousness in Commonwealth circles in London where the Zambian leader is known as a man of generally moderate speech.

The only comfort drawn by diplomats was that Kaunda did not summarily announce plans to pull his country out of the Commonwealth as had been feared earlier.

Although he refused to attend the conference of Commonwealth prime ministers opening in London next Tuesday, he did promise to send a deputy. It appears that only about half of the Commonwealth's premiers and presidents will be present, others being represented by deputies.

In Lagos last January, African members of the Commonwealth gave Wilson a breathing space to deal with the Rhodesian question.

He undertook to let them know, at a further conference in July, what effect his sanctions policy was having on the illegal regime of Ian Smith.

Implicit in his undertaking was the assumption that although sanctions appeared to be having little effect in January, July would tell a different story.

July came and went with Smith still flexing his power in Rhodesia. Kaunda's words about Wilson's "cleverness" indicate he feels Wilson stretched the Africans. Wilson's show-down—if that is what it turns out to be—will probably not come at next week's meeting in London. What can he tell them now?

In London, three courses of action now are generally held to be open to the Wilson government.

The first is to go ahead with the present policy of sanctions, even though they have yielded disappointing results. The second is to use force and the third is to throw the whole problem into the lap of the United Nations.

The last two are generally ruled out by Britons but Africans see some hope of a compromise. Wilson did set something of a precedent, they point out, by going to the UN in April for authority to stop Rhodesian-bound oil on the high seas. That was a measure of force.

Could there now be a compromise by which the UN—with the stopping short of mandatory sanctions on all countries—authorized Britain to punch off Rhodesia's overland oil supplies from South Africa?

Great dangers and difficulties are seen in this idea. Most observers believe Wilson's best course is to give the sanctions more bite—and to find ways of making his allies close their trade doors with Rhodesia.

It is reported that Rhodesian chrome and copper are reaching West Germany, Rhodesian pig iron reaching Japan and Rhodesian tobacco reaching the Netherlands and Switzerland.

Union Reaction

ers had already tured down an 8-per-cent boost recommended by conciliation boards.

"We are on strike because of that recommendation," he said. "I can't see them going back to work because of it."

RESTRICTIONS

Tom Read, who speaks for the shopcraft unions, declined to predict what attitude his members would assume.

"You can tell them one thing; what they do is another."

W. P. Kelly of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen said it would be difficult for any union leader not to comply with the law set out by Parliament.

None of the four men would go on record as saying they would refuse to issue a back-to-work call.

But all of them hedged on whether they would issue an immediate appeal for an end to the strike.

W. J. Smith said he would poll his union's locals across the country. It would be up to each one to decide on future action. He didn't spell out the recommendations he would personally make.

Mr. Reid said he had not decided what form his strike-ending call would take. But he said leaders would act as "law-abiding citizens and responsible officers of their unions."

UP TO MEN

In his case, too, individual decisions would have to be made by each of the seven shopcraft groups that come under his bargaining division.

Earlier in the day the four men sent a letter to Prime Minister Pearson warning bluntly that railway employers were not likely to return to their jobs unless improved wage proposals were written into the legislation.

The letter was written after a morning conference attended by 80 union leaders from various parts of Eastern Canada who brought with them reports of the feelings being expressed by strikers.

The day's events began with a brief meeting between Labor Minister Nicholson and a union group. Labor representatives stomped out of the meeting.

Paul Raymond, another shopcraft negotiator, said the government was imposing a settlement "but doesn't have the guts to tell the men to go back to work; they expect us to tell them."

Of the meeting with Mr. Nicholson, he said: "We did not come to Ottawa to beg a lot of baloney."

MANICOUAGAN, Que. (CP) — The first of five projects of the giant Hydro-Quebec power complex being constructed on the Outardes and Manicouagan Rivers near here was completed late Wednesday. With its dam and power house now in full operation, the project known as Manic 2 will be able to supply 1,300,000 kilowatts of power an hour to the province.

Earlier, an amendment by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker to kill the bill in its original form went down 138 to 110.

After the two votes, Prime Minister Pearson said the original legislation had been widely misunderstood and would be "improved" during clause-by-clause study.

Four of the 11 clauses were approved before the House adjourned for the night.

HAD EXCHANGE

The day's debate, running more than five hours longer than usual for Wednesdays, featured a sharp exchange between Mr. Pearson and Mr. Diefenbaker.

The Conservative chieftain said the minority government had its back to the wall and had no alternative but to push its bill to make it more equitable.

"You've got to back down," he shouted repeatedly at the government benches. "You've got to make another one of those fantastic retreats."

Mr. Pearson shot back that Mr. Diefenbaker of trying to exploit a grave national emergency in a narrow, partisan way.

He charged that the long-time rival was more interested in ending the government than ending the strike.

been struggling along with no basic changes since the maintenance and repairmen struck Monday in back wage demands. Avalon toll operators have refused to cross picket lines.

The district chairman of the Commercial Telegraphers Union said the action of the Gander operation was precipitated by picketing outside their exchange by CNT telegraph operators who went off the job at noon Friday.

Meanwhile business agent James Walsh and other representatives of Local 1615 of the international Brotherhood of Electrical Workers are to appear in court today on an injunction granted Avalon Telephone Monday to restrain picketing on the grounds the conciliation was in progress. Pickets have been maintained despite the injunction.

The conciliation board reported to the company and union Wednesday, but Mr. Walsh said the report failed to meet union wage demands. Avalon officials declined comment. The union indicated it would not accept the report.

Avalon employees voted to strike contingent to union executive advice. Mr. Walsh said the men acted on their own and an injunction against the union was therefore invalid.

Necessity for Co-Existence Of Christianity, Communism Becomes Fact Says Ramsey

FREDERICTON (CP) — The Archbishop of Canterbury said Wednesday the necessity for co-existence between Christianity and communism now has become a fact although the two remain incompatible.

"Both recognize that there is good and bad in the other and neither is going to be destroyed by violence," Most Rev. Michael Ramsey said at a press conference.

"If one of any faith also possesses humanity deeper than any individual ideology, this is the real promise that one day we will find our way to peace."

The archbishop, who arrived here Tuesday night by plane from Montreal, leaves today for Halifax on the second leg of a tour from Newfoundland to British Columbia.

He said the United States has a moral right to be in Viet Nam "and is there with the right motive — withstanding Communist aggression." However, if the struggle continued it would be "no good at all."

The 61 - year - old spiritual leader of 42,000,000 Anglicans throughout the world said he would be completely wrong to acquiesce to independence for Rhodesia unless there is a real safeguard for progress to majority rule and unless there is a settlement for all peoples of Rhodesia."

Commenting on what has been termed the new morality, Dr. Ramsey said it is important to show that Christian morality is objective and not subjective. The impression that religious morality meant negative prohibitions had been given too often in the past.

On the "God is dead" issue, he said the formula is used by different people in different contexts. "If sometimes means only that there's a decline in religion and a greater advance in modern religious secularism."

On the subject of Christian unity, he said there has been a new spirit of friendship and cooperation between Roman Catholics and Anglicans spreading in many parts of the world since the Vatican Council and he was confident he would find many illustrations of this new spirit in Canada. However, there were "places and areas" where the Christian religious still strived.

Of John Lennon's remark about the Beatles being more popular than Jesus, Dr. Ramsey said: To be more popular than Jesus proves absolutely nothing at all. Jesus Christ didn't come into the world to be judged on popularity. It's an irrelevant issue."

The archbishop conducted a service of witness and thanksgiving before 3,500 persons at the Lady Beaverbrook Rink Wednesday night. The service was also heard on radio.

The text of the letter, sent to every member state's delegation here, was not immediately released officially by the UN, but the contents became known from early recipients of the document.

Thant said he was sure his decision not to stand for a second term would not be misconstrued and he was leaving the Security Council undeterred in its recommendation to the General Assembly in the appointment of his successor.

Cross-Canada Survey

Car Sales for '66 Expected To Be About Equal of '65, Some Dealers Eye Record

By GORDON GRANT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

After four successive years of setting records for automobile sales, even matching the existing high may be looked on as a backward step.

But that's what the Canadian auto industry may have to settle for this year, unless the new 1967 models sell in record numbers.

Last year Canadians bought 633,517 North American-type passenger cars, 83,000 more than the old high. But to the end of July this year sales totalled 404,300, down 4,000 from the 1965 record pace.

"There won't be a significant change either up or down in 1966 sales compared with 1965," says one company spokesman. "But that's no reason for concern. After all you can't expect any industry to keep piling record on top of record.

"This is particularly true when there's so much inventory in Canada, a tight money situation and economic clouds on the horizon."

Even if sales for 1966 don't match those of 1965, this will almost certainly be the second best year in automotive sales history. Sales in 1964 were 550,800 units, only 146,-000 more than in the first seven months of this year.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows a fair number of dealers still are optimistic that this will be another record year. But few are prepared to go along with forecasts made at the beginning of the year, when automakers were confidently predicting a five- to 10-per-cent sales increase in 1966.

SOME SHOW GAINS

The drop in sales doesn't include all the major firms. Chrysler sold 82,044 cars in the first seven months compared with 71,600 in the same period of last year. And Ford was up to 127,643 from 122,-298.

But General Motors, the industry giant and weathervane, was sharply down, selling 178,157 cars at the end of July compared with 193,480 in the first seven months of 1965.

GM has also announced it will require fewer workers this year but added that "the long-range outlook for the Canadian automobile industry remains very good."

American Motors' sales were also down, to 17,000 from 21,000, but the company says it will increase its 1967-model production capacity to 50,000 cars a year, counting on exports to the United States to absorb most of the extra output. And it will also add 300 workers.

The survey shows that reasons offered for the drop in sales vary. With the exception of Newfoundland, where most dealers report sales up as much as 40 per cent, the emphasis is Eastern Canada is on tight money. Western dealers say tight money isn't a factor. And while labor conditions are blamed for some adverse effects on sales in British Columbia, dealers elsewhere say strikes haven't been the cause of their problems.

WOOED WITH GIFTS

Part of the sales slump in the United States has been blamed on the great safety debate but with the exception of a handful of dealers in B.C and Quebec, the consensus is that it hasn't affected sales in Canada.

"In one instance we sold six new Corvairs when the car was criticized in the press," said Ed Vicker, president of the Winnipeg Motor Dealers' Association.

Nevertheless, car manufacturers will add features to new models to woo safety-conscious buyers, at the same time drawing attention to power and sporty aspects of their cars.

One result of the slump, some dealers say, is that car prices are the lowest in years. A buyer reported that after shopping at three firms for identical cars he received estimates within a $3 range.

A variety of local conditions are offered for the way sales are going in the different regions of the country.

One Newfoundland dealer was at loss to explain the strength of the market but another, Harry Norris, sales manager of Royal Garage, a Chrysler dealer, said:

"Where a customer was going to buy a late-model used car, the tendency now seems to be to get a new car with a couple of hundred dollars more added to the balance outstanding."

In Prince Edward Island, where buyers are reported moving into the lower-price range, Ford dealer Art Arsenault said sales were down 30 per cent and the outlook for the rest of the year was poor. He explained that dealers had been giving up to $300 too much for used cars and now that they were offering less, fewer people were buying new models.

BLAME TIGHT MONEY

A swing to lower - priced cars was also reported in some parts of Nova Scotia. One Halifax Ford dealer, George Riley, said sales were running about 30 per cent ahead of last year.

In New Brunswick, sales spurted early in the year as buyers acted to beat a sales tax increase to six per cent from three planned for April 1. They eased when the increase was postponed to next Jan. 1.

Some Montreal dealers blamed tight money and the car-safety debate for the drop in sales in Quebec. GM dealer Paul Pytel said one reason for the drop in sales was that the 1966 models weren't different from 1965.

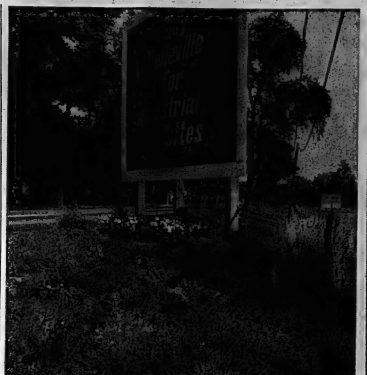
Another said Expo 67 has been a factor. "They come into the showroom and say 'I'll wait until 1967, then when my relatives come to Expo I can show off my new car.'"

The preference in some parts of Ontario this year has been for bigger, sportier cars, with fewer sales of stripped-down models. A spokesman for Ross Wemp, a GM dealer in Toronto, said the high cost of money and adverse publicity from the safety debate were among reasons for lower sales.

Chrysler dealers in Ottawa said 1966 has been a successful year with sales running more than 20 per cent ahead of last year.

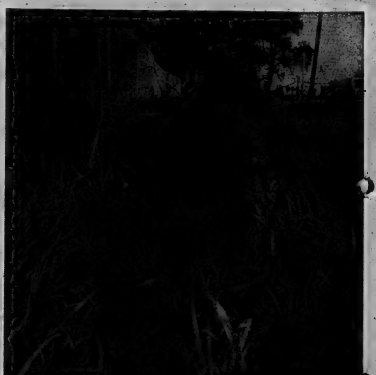
An indication that dealers are cutting profit margins on their own came from Ed Vicker of Winnipeg who said:

"While 1966 sales are up, we had to sell more units to maintain a profit relative to what we had in 1965."



Of eight sales managers interviewed in Regina, four said sales were slightly lower than last year, two said they were higher, one unchanged. But all were optimistic about sales for the balance of the year. The big wheat sale to the Soviet Union had assured Prairie residents they would have money in their pockets and they were buying what they wanted—usually higher-priced cars with lots of extras.

"Calgary is a good auto market," said Wilbur Young, manager of Stampede Motors, a GM dealer. "Changes in the economy don't seem to have as much effect in Calgary as they do elsewhere." Other Alberta dealers were optimistic about the 1967 models.



A construction boom is expected to keep sales at a healthy level in British Columbia for the next few years. But unsettled labor conditions have hurt some dealers this year. Evan Wolfe, a Vancouver GM dealer, said his sales are about the same as last year but he had to push harder to stay even.

Expect Viet Cong Terrorism To Increase Prior to Voting

Viet Cong violence in Saigon is so commonplace that it receives only brief mention in newspapers of the South Viet Nam capital, but it is expected to increase as the Sept. 11 election approaches. A Canadian Press reporter describes the growing tension.

By DOUGLAS AMARON

SAIGON (CP)—Tension in Saigon springs from the knowledge that at any minute a grenade may roll under a restaurant table or a bomb tear apart a building, killing and maiming scores of people.

It has happened in the past and, with the Viet Cong stepping up their terrorist activities on the eve of the Sept. 11 election for a constituent assembly for South Viet Nam, it's likely to happen again.

It is incongruous to sit in the luxurious comfort of a hotel restaurant over an afternoon coffee listening to the thud of explosions reverberating across the city and watching the flash of gunfire three miles away.

With national police, Vietnamese army units and about 20,000 American troops in Saigon and its immediate vicinity, the violence of this city is hard to understand until you can accept the fact that this after all is a civil war, fought between ideologies, not races.

The youth on the bicycle who passes you on the street may well be a Viet Cong agent. Nothing in his appearance discloses his ideological leanings. Unless he has the misfortune to be caught in a security check, he can move freely about the city indefinitely.

REFUGEES JAM IN

Estimating Saigon's present population is a guessing game, but it probably is about 2,500,000, swollen from a normal 2,000,000 by refugees who have fled Viet Cong-harassed hamlets in the country.

This presents a ripe field for infiltration by the Charlies, as the Americans call the VCs, and there is ample evidence that they are here in the daily reports of assembly for South Viet Nam, it's likely to happen again.

It is incongruous to sit in the luxurious comfort of a hotel restaurant over an afternoon coffee listening to the thud of explosions reverberating across the city and watching the flash of gunfire three miles away.

arms fire on a United States motor pool compound near Saigon's huge air base, a favorite district for violence. One civilian is killed, 13 other persons wounded, including four American soldiers.

PLAN BIGGER ATTACKS

These incidents don't amount to major fighting in the Saigon area. But their frequency, the fact they can happen at all, gives credence to reports the Viet Cong plan bigger and more violent incidents before Sept. 11 voting day.

Anything that will disrupt the election feeds the propaganda machine of the government's enemies. A good turnout of voters under reasonably peaceful conditions is essential as an indication of popular support for the administration.

That is one reason why campaigning was limited to two weeks.

"We can't provide complete protection all the time," a government official said, "but we feel we have the strength to take care of the situation for two weeks."

On the day he made that statement, 30 days before campaigning began, a pre-election carnival was held in the ancient city of Hue about 400 miles north of Saigon. The Thuong Bac fairgrounds beside the broad River of Perfume were crowded with civilians, most of them women and children.

Suddenly a bomb exploded on the tin roof of a temporary gaming booth. When the count was completed, 28 persons were dead, 181 injured, most of them crushed or suffocated in a scramble for the ground's only exit.

Saigon's millions wonder if it is their turn next.

Pinch Hitting

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

The story goes that in the year 1909, in a down-town Toronto building, one Tommy Ryan decided to do something for rank-and-file bowlers.

He called in a wood-turner and set him to work.

Out of it all came one of the more popular sports for the average person in Canada.

It was five-pin bowling.

Apparently Ryan was answering the demand for a faster bowling game, one that Joe Blow could have a little fun with on his lunch hour.

But just to make the fun a bit more difficult to come by, when our friend the wood-turner had finished lathing the ten-pins down to fives, Ryan created the "counterpin."

And thereby hangs the tale.

The tale of one pesky little pin, usually located on the extreme left side of the five-pin alley, that just refused to go down.

The other four seemed easy to topple — but not our friend the counterpin. And without that nasty little fellow hitting the dust, none of the others mattered. It drove many a good man to drink and likely did more to promote profane language than anything else has in the past 55 years.

But alas and alack, all that is being changed.

The Canadian Bowling Congress announced this week that, effective at the start of the 1967-68 season, the counterpin will be no more.

Here in Belleville, the move appears to be getting a good reception, Bill Bateman, Bowl-O-Drome manager, says that the only trouble with the move is the fact that it will not be officially made until next year.

The Quinte Classic League, which has 40 keglers with 210 or better averages competing, is jumping the gun on the counterpin move. It will put the rule into effect when the ten teams open the schedule on Sep-tember 15. The Major "A" League has not announced its decision on the matter but will likely follow suit.

"I will be recommending to open bowlers and to the various leagues that they drop the counterpin this year", Bateman said yesterday.

"Six months ago I felt differently about it but since talking to others more experienced with such matters, I feel that the move is a good one," he added.

"I don't think it will effect the top bowlers, add-ing perhaps just a few pins per game, but it will make quite a difference for the fellow who averages 135 or so. It should boost his average up to maybe 160 or more," Bateman offered.

A Toronto story says that a survey showed startling results. Sample leagues kept score without the restriction of having to knock down a counterpin. The survey showed that bowlers with a 140 average picked up 45 pins, those with 180 averages gained 15 pins and those with 240 av-erages advanced between two and three pins.

It is felt that the move will diminish the spread between the high scratch bowlers and those with high handicaps.

Delving back into the origination of the game again, Ryan, who died a few years ago, said that in the early days of five pins, any bowler who "played it safe" by shooting for the side with the counterpin on his first ball would be booed out of the alley. Everyone went for a strike and, if he missed, tried for a spare.

It has been common in more recent years to see bowlers make sport of the counterpin, especially on a difficult split shot, with the second ball.

No counterpin is used in ten-pin bowling and that sport has grown rapidly in Canada in the past few years. This undoubtedly has hastened the five-pinners' decision to do away with the counterpin.

No change will be made in the value of the pins. The headpin will still be worth five, the two inside pins worth three each and the two cornerpins worth two each.

Bateman agrees that the switch will increase the num-ber of five-pin bowlers and will keep beginners and so-so bowlers interested. "They will no longer get discour-aged because they cannot pick off that corner counter-pin", he claims.

"All other sports make rule changes and bowling is no different in that respect.

"It is just a trend of the times," he concluded.

RCAF Softball

Moose Jaw 'Bat' Champs

A pair of 3-0 wins on the last day of the tournament brought Moose Jaw the RCAF softball championship yesterday at Trenton Fleces Base, Trenton.

In the morning, the Saskatchewan team blanked Greenwood, Nova Scotia 3-0 and followed that up with a win in the afternoon over Edmonton, Alberta by an identical score.

The champions finished tournament play with three wins and one loss. Retired Wing Commander J. K. Tett presented the seven - foot bat, emblematic of the championship, to the new title holders.

In other games yesterday, the host Trenton team stopped St. Hubert 5-3 but was shutout in an afternoon game with Greenwood.

Edmonton, Greenwood and Trenton had two wins and two losses each in tournament play while St. Hubert won once and lost three times. The lone win came at the expense of Moose Jaw.

Share Second Place ★★★★ Kempf Gets Points, Als Nip Bombers ★★★★ Low Scoring Game

By WALTER KREVENCHUK

WINNIPEG (CP)—Third time was far from lucky for Winnipeg Blue Bombers Wednesday night in a Canadian Football League interlocking game they lost 4-3 to Montreal Alouettes.

Dick Worner, last recovered from an injury, fumbled the third punt he got his hands on and brief moments later, with 26 seconds left to play, Peter Kempf hit the target with his third field goal attempt for Montreal.

Billy James Dos, Montreal guard getting his second Canadian football, pounced on Worner's fumble at the Winnipeg 25-yard line.

The recovery allowed Kempf, who had to settle for a single on a wide field goal try early in the fourth quarter, to collect all Montreal's points for the second consecutive match. He did it last week in a 16-8 sweep past Hamilton Tiger-Cats, who now have Alouettes beside them in second place in the Eastern Conference.

A wet field crested by heavy pre game rain and a tough Winnipeg defensive unit led by Roger Lalonde, George Kinney and Jim Walter were the in-gredients Winnipeg's second setback in six outings, stalling them as co-holders of first place in the Western Conference with Saskatchewan Roughriders.

"The defence had the advantage," said Bomber head coach Bud Grant. So much so, that Winnipeg was able to settle for a 2-0 lead entering the final 10 minutes on two booming punt singles by Ed Ulmer. Their defence never got closer than the Montreal 32 yards.

SIX MISSED

The absence through injury of six Winnipeg regulars — Phil Minnick, Cornell Piper, Ernie Funston, Norm Rauhaus, Billy Cooper and Ernie Pitts — may have had something to do with it.

Grant was surprised that Lions clubs produced 200-plus yards on offence. Winnipeg had 159 rush-ing and 84 passing on 14 first downs; Montreal 41 passing and 184 rushing on 13 first downs.

There were no odd exciting moments for 20,510 fans—Dave Raimey ground - roaming for 93 Montreal yards, Bob Parsons and Don Lisbon churning out 86 and 84 yards for Montreal—but action was primarily of the push-and-slide variety concen-trated between the 35-yard lines.

Dotted well - placed receivers by the uncertain footing, Kenny Ploen managed to com-plete just seven of 15 pass attempts for Winnipeg. He had four knocked down at the line of scrimmage and one intercepted.

Ernie Fellowes and George Bork had to cope with similar restrictions on the Montreal side. They managed four com-pletions in 10 attempts and gave up one interception.

The field probably had the toughest Bomber assignment. He replaced halfback Leo Lewis, who had favored to Win-nipeg in a pre-game ceremony and faded into retirement after 10 CFL seasons.

Martin, a waiver pickup from Edmonton Eskimos, did a bang-up job, collecting 54 yards on seven rambles and the game's longest ground gain, 25 yards.

Hotelmen Edge Point Anne 4-3

City Hotel, with their backs to the wall, edged the Point Anne Commetmen 4-3 at the Point last night to stay alive in their Commercial Softball League semi-finals.

Point Anne now holds a 3-2 lead in games in the four-of-seven set. The next game is slated for September 7, at the Alemite.

The Hotelmen built a 4-0 lead with loners in the first two frames and a pair in the third. The losers got two back in the bottom of the third and one in the sixth.

Point Annes's Ron Marcelle clouted a two-run homer and later appeared to have another to tie the score. He was called out on an appeal play for miss-ing second base.

Hawkins, Hadgard and Doug Moreau slammed a circuit blast to spark City's third-frame attack.

Gerry Geuereaux and Ron Marcelle matched pitches on the opposing mounds. Each al-lowed six hits. Geuereaux had four strikeouts and one walk for the winners while Marcelle struck out nine and passed five.

Doug Moreau and Moe Hawkins were best at the plate for City, each with two hits, while Larry Potter and Doug Murray collected the others.

Ron Marcelle had two for the Comentmen, with one each for Mike Cook, David Akey, Jim Sherwood and Jack Potter.

Three errors helped the win-ners score the game's first two runs.

City's Frank Donovan was ejected from the game in the fifth inning.

Canadian Still With Vikings

MINNEAPOLIS (CP-AP) — Jim Young, a halfback who for three years starred with Queen's University, Kingston, survived this week's player cut-down in the camp of Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League.

Young, from Hamilton, Ont., was one of the 43 men kept on the main roster.

The next crisis in the playing career of this 22-year-old athlete, for three years rated the best halfback in Canadian col-lege ball, comes next Tuesday. On that day the Vikings must get down to the league maxi-mum of 40.

Canadian football executives —especially those of Toronto Argonauts who hold the Can-dian playing rights—are watch-ing the Viking situation closely. Argos are reported to have spurned all trade offers for Young, their top draft choice after the 1964 college season.

DIVIDE GAMES

POERTSCHACH, Austria (AP)—Ice hockey games in the groups of the world championships will be divided had played in different countries, the Con-gress of the International Ice Hockey Federation decided after a long and stormy meet-ing here Wednesday. Canada's proposal to break up the groups was carried by a 28-to-22 vote, with the big ice hockey nations clearly in favor.

Two Strokes Up

Kel Nagle First-Round Leader

By TOM REEDY

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — The slope - shouldered Aussie farmer with the pork pie hat grinned a little and said, "There's still a long way to go."

That's the cool way Kel Nagle of Australia, still a mighty figure in professional golf at the age of 47, viewed the rest of his battle in the 72-hole $200,000 world championship golf tour-nament, worth $35,000 to the winner.

The former British Open champion, who keeps his hand in by playing the U.S. circuit, fired a five-under-par 68 over the par-73 Royal Birkdale 7037-yard seaside course Wednesday.

He went into the second 18 holes today two shots up on Peter Thomson, his fellow Aus-tralian; Bob Charles, the left-hander from New Zealand and a pair of Englishmen, Peter But-ler and Hedley Muscroft.

At 71 were nine golfers and among the 31 who shot 72s was Jack Bissegger of Val Morin, Que., who led the nine-man Canadian contingent. Bissegger had a pair of 36s.

21 BREAK PAR

Altogether, 24, in the field of 165 broke par and another 54 equorted it in reasonably good playing conditions for an area notorious for its sudden bad weather.

Billy Casper of the U.S., the pre - match favorite, matched par 73.

Wilf Homemsik of Winnipeg shot 36-39—75; Moe Norman, the Thornhill Gilbert, Ont., pro, had 38 - 37 — 75; Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., shot 38-37—76; George Knudsen of Toronto, who has shown well in recent U.S. tournaments, had 40-38—78, and Gerry Proulx of Montreal 39-40—79.

Bob Rose of Toronto went higher than most with an 80 and Len Harvey of Winnipeg had 84.

One round is being played on each of the next three days with the field from 18 countries to be trimmed to the top 75 and ties after today.

COURSE IS TRICKY

Dry and fast, Birkdale played tricky instead of savage and many otherwise low - scoring golfers shot up into the high 70s and 80s.

That made Nagle's finesse all the more impressive.

The conditions also brought out the best in Thomson, who won the British Open here twice, the last time in 1955, and whose straight, graceful game is so workmanlike it is even hard to describe.

Thomson was delighted with the course but disgusted with some play which compelled him —a rapid walker and rapid player—to spend five hours for the opening round.

"It was tiring," he said. "It's murder to take this long. I pre-fer to play in pairs anyway and it is the longest round I ever have played in this country."

The huge field compelled sponsors to send the players out into threesomes starting at 6 a.m. and ending shortly before dark.

There were some serious com-plaints however about unneces-sary delays and the British Pro-fessional Golf Association de-cided they had some merit.

STARTING ISSUED

A PGA official instructed starters to warn the players in the second round against dilly-dallying, implying that punish-ments could be invoked.

The Royal and Ancient Club in St. Andrews, home of the game, has a sign in the club-room which says simply:

"A round of golf should re-quire three hours."

High scoring probably con-tributed to the slow play Wed-nesday and one of the reasons postponed to be the placing of the pins. American Bob Rosburgh shot a 73 and said:

"Those pins were in some very peculiar places."

This made the touring pros put in their worst round of the once they got into putting dis-tance.

Casper, U.S. Open champion who still rates 4-to-1 favorite to pick up this big one, took only 30 putts in his first round and commented "I have a steady swing and sooner or later it all comes together."

Warnermen Win Away From Finals

Stewart Warner moved to within one game of a Commer-cial Softball League final's berth last night by dumping Lightfoot Construction 8-3, at the Alemite.

The winners hold a com-manding 3-0 lead in games in the four-of-seven series. Point Anne leads the other semi-final over City Hotel, 3-2.

Fourth game of the Lightfoot-Warner set is scheduled for the CNRA Park tonight, at 6.30.

Lightfoots plated three in the top of the third to grab a 3-1 lead but it was short-lived. Stewart Warner tied it in their half of the inning and went on to plate one in the fourth and two in the sixth.

Ken Bateman hurled three-hit ball to collect the victory. He struck out half a dozen and al-lowed five free tickets.

"Don Smith went the first three innings plus and George Young covered up on the los-ers' billtop. They gave up six hits. Smith fanned two and walked two.

Errors marred the game with the glosers committing six of them. The bobbles figured in half the winners' runs and Light-foots' trio came on four boots and no hits in the third.

Pat Glancey had a pair of Stewart Warner singles while Rod Turner had a triple and Gary Gow a double. Chuck Rowbotham and Doug Ellis ad-ded singles.

Rusty Garvin, Don Dolan and Don Smith were Lightfoot hit-ters, each with a single.

Ford Discharged From Hospital

HOUSTON (AP) — Whitey Ford, the pitcher who has won more games than any other New York Yankee in history, was discharged from hospital Wednesday.

Ford, 37, underwent surgery last week for correction of a left shoulder arterial blockage that caused cramps in his pitching hand.

He told reporters Tuesday he will begin practice pitching again in about three weeks but will not know until spring train-ing whether he can resume his baseball career.

Young Team Carries Title Hopes

VANCOUVER (CP)—Five oti-limlite young rowers, carrying Canada's hopes for a world cox-less fiagg rowing title with them, leave here today for Bled, Yugoslavia and the world row-ing championships opening Sept. 8.

The team that last month turned back all opposition at the Canadian Henley Regatta in St. Catharines is composed of stroke Max Wiesbrock, 27, Daryl Sturdy, 26, Roger Jack-soo, 25, and Bob Stubbs, 27.

With them will be spare Wayne Osterhout, 23, a mem-ber of the University of British Columbia rowing team.

All trained with the UBC team nearly this year when, according to Wieczorek, "a dif-ference of opinion in rowing style and rowing stroke" forced the primary crew to sever con-nections.

Green Gaels Reach Minto Cup Finals

MIMICO (CP) — Oshawa Green Gaels defeated Mimico 13-7 Wednesday night to win the Eastern Canada Junior A Lacrosse finals in four consecutive games.

Referees Ron Petibone and Gerry Navary halted the game at 15:37 of the final period after Fred Greenwood of Oshawa and Bruce Ferguson of Mimico en-gaged in a fight at mid-floor.

The only casualty of the game was Oshawa coach Jim Bishop. He dislocated his shoulder after his enthusiastic players threw him into the showers.

Oshawa will meet New West-minster Salmonbellies for the Mann Cup in a best-of-seven series for the Canadian cham-pionship which begins Sept. 10. Site of the series has not been announced.

APPOINTED VP

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—Base-ball veteran Dave Richards was named a vice-president of the Atlanta Braves Wednesday, sending speculation that he might manage the team next season. Richards, 57, was dis-missed as general manager of Houston Astros last winter. He has been working with Atlanta rookies the last two months.

Petes Reach Semi-Finals

TORONTO (CP) — Peterborough and Hamilton play today to decide which is to meet Toronto Leaside in Friday's final of the Canadian National Exhibition pee wee baseball tournament.

Peterborough upset Niagara Falls 5-3 in Wednesday's action while Hamilton downed Toronto Regent Park 11-4.

Jeff Gilmour's four-hit pitching sparked Peterborough's win over Niagara.

Doug Gibson had two hits, including a home run off Niagara's starter Rick Koonp, replaced by Ray Forgie after all five runs were scored in the second inning. Forgie blanked Peterborough after that.

Giants, Pirates Leave Dodgers Behind

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Pittsburgh's Zoos fanned the Pirates past Los Angeles Dodgers, but Juan Marichal enjoyed anything but a freeze against New York Mets.

Some 31,000 spectators were on hand with their paper fans Wednesday night as the Pirates edged the Dodgers 4-3 while Marichal sweated out his 20th victory as San Francisco Giants nipped the Mets 2-1.

The results left the Pirates and Giants tied for first place in the National League with the third - place Dodgers falling three games back.

The fans who came to watch the Pirates play received free fans as they entered the park. They put them to use in the fourth inning after Roberto Clemente reached first base on Jim Lefebvre's error.

When everyone in the stands started waving the fans, the Dodgers complained to umpires. And while the umpires waited for the breeze to stop, the game was delayed for five minutes.

TOSSED FANS

The spectators didn't wave the fans much in the next inning, but quite a few—of the paper kind—were tossed onto the field as the Pirates erupted for four runs.

One of Marichal's problems, on the other hand, was that the Giants didn't do any erupting at all. They trailed 1-0 until the seventh inning and didn't go ahead until the ninth.

Another problem for the ace right - hander was the backstrap muscle he pulled in his right shoulder while striking out Ron Hunt in the ninth inning. "I felt something pull," Marichal said after the game. "It worries me, but I hope it's nothing serious."

Elsewhere Philadelphia Phillies whipped Houston Astros 10-5, Cincinnati Reds trimmed Chicago Cubs 7-5 and Atlanta Braves defeated St. Louis Cardinals 8-5.

Gene Alley drove in the first two runs of the game for the Pirates with a two-out single. Clemente and Startell then slo-

Wins Hambletonian

DU QUOIN, Ill. (AP) — The Filly Kerry Way put the big boys in their place in the Hambletonian Wednesday.

The big, strong daughter of famed Star's Pride, ate of the last three winners of the historic classic for three-year-old trotters, won in straight sets, beats Wednesday and set a world record.

Kerry Way became the 32th filly in the Hambletonian's 41-year history to win the trophy and the first since Emily's Pride in 1958.

"She has to be the greatest filly I've ever driven," said Frank Ervin. "After all, she set a world record. We got the job done with Kerry Way's grit and determination. I had been worried about her because of that poor showing she made in Chicago last week.

"She went off stride then but we found that a tooth cap had cut her mouth. She also banged a front knee. We took out the cap and got the swelling out of her filled knee and then we went out and won the big one."

Kerry Way, owned by Gainesway Farm of Lexington, Ky., aped the two opening heats in 1:58 4-5 and 1:59 3-5 for a combined time of 3:58 2-5-a world record for three-year-old trotting fillies on a mile track.

It erased the old mark of 3:58 4-5 by Elaine Rodney at Lexington in 1960. Ervin, a native of Pekin, Ill., captured his second Hambletonian in 15 appearances and now has 326 drives of two minutes or lower.

Polaris, the Yonkers Futurity winner reined by George Sholty finished second in both heats, being defeated by 3-4 length in the first and a neck in the second in a thrilling stretch battle that brought some 35,000 fans to their feet.

There were 40,000 inside the fairgrounds, and those who could not find room in the stands heard the race called on loud speakers.

With a field of 12, the Hambletonian grossed $132,560, a fourth - largest. Kerry Way's boosted her two-year earnings by $80,044 to $207,186.

Polaris collected second money of $30,022 for owners Patrick Digenaro and Anthony Leccese of Scotland, N.Y. Shatter Way, at unofficial odds of 25 to 1 for the betless race, was a surprising third after a 4-3 finish. The horse was shipped from Sweden for the event and earned $4,510 for owner Kurt Hellberg of Melerud, Sweden.

Fourth place, worth $3,007, went to Carlisle with 3-7 and fifth money of $6,004 went to Armbro Gazelle, driven by Max J. Webster of Brantford, Ont., and driven by Bob Silliphant of Rapid City, South Dak.

The other finishers in order were Brokers Choice, 7-6, Governor Armbro, 5-1, owned by the Armstrong Brothers Stable of Brampton, Ont., and driven by Joe O'Brien of Alberton, P.E.I., Rocket Rodney, 12-6, Our Rainbow, 8-9, Careless Viado, 9-5, Straight Fly 20-10 and All American, 11-12.

Ontario Seeks Spot

Quebec, B.C. Hold Leads

WINNIPEG (CP) — British Columbia and Quebec virtually assured themselves a spot in the final match as they moved into comfortable leads in their respective groups in the Canadian soccer championship tournament Wednesday.

B.C. salvaged a 1-1 tie with Manitoba in group A and Quebec edged Alberta 1-0 in group B. Both teams now lead their groups with five points each.

Today, Ontario Manitoba meets Ontario in a group A match that could decide a playoff spot- in group B Alberta faces Saskatchewan.

A determined Manitoba team, losers to B.C. 4-1 and to Ontario 2-0 in the double round-robin series in previous action, grabbed a 1-0 lead in the 24th minute when halfback Jim Baird's free kick from 30 yards out cracked into the corner of the B.C. net.

The youth-laden West Coast squad tried desperately to tie the game but the experienced Manitoba team controlled play at midfield. The hometown defence stood solid until the 80th minute when B.C. tied the score 1-1.

GETS REBOUND

Left winger Sergio Zanatta scored on a rebound when Neil Hunter's hard serving shot from 20 yards out was deflected inches away from the goalpost by Manitoba goalkeeper Laszlo Bastyovanszky.

The score kept Manitoba's hopes alive for a playoff spot but they must defeat Ontario today, B.C., a 6-0 winner Tuesday over Ontario, still has to play the eastern

The winner of group A goes into the final match while the runners-up in the two groups also meet in a playoff to decide third and fourth spots. Both games are scheduled for Saturday.

Quebec scored in the 10th minute on a goal from Sean McGill that stood up all the way for a 1-0 victory in a hard-fought contest on a rain-soaked slipper ground which resulted in erratic passing and difficult ball control.

Quebec goalkeeper Peter Greco, a standout in his team's 5-0 win over Saskatchewan Tuesday, fended off three saves for the first shutout.

Quebec's forward Guiseppe Dilola became the first player in the tournament to be sent off the field for rough play. The incident occurred in the 70th minute when Dilola, previously warned by referee Robert Thompson of Winnipeg, brought down an Alberta player in a rough tackle.

Tigers Lose 2; Kaat Twin Star

By RON RAPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

The people who write those baseball dictionaries may not completely agree, but Jim Kaat says pitching can be defined as allowing the other team fewer runs than your team is getting for you.

And that may explain why Kaat's interest in Minnesota Twins' run production is so intense that he often participates in it himself.

Several times this year, the Twins' lefty has had a hand in his team's scoring and Wednesday's 11-3 victory over Boston, Red Sox Kaat's 21st, was more of the same.

He led off the third with an infield single and scored shortly thereafter on a single by Tony Oliva. In the fourth, he blooped a single into short left and in the sixth he singled once again and came around on Cesar Tovar's triple.

In the eighth, Kaat struck out but by then it hardly mattered: he had enough runs to protect two victories.

Elsewhere, Chicago White Sox took a pair from Detroit Tigers, 7-6 in 12 innings and 3-1, Washington Senators and Kansas City Athletics split a doubleheader 3-0 and 8-4, Baltimore Orioles took Cleveland Indians 5-1 and California Angels bounced New York Yankees 5-1.

KAAT HAD HELP

Kaat wasn't the only one swinging the big bat for the Twins. In all, there were 11 Minnesota hits including Bernie Allen's two-run homer, Tovar's two-run triple and Harmon Killebrew's two-run double. Tony Conigliaro hit his 25th homer for Boston.

Detroit hit four homers in the opener, but they all went for nothing when Tommy Agee scored an unearned run in the 12th for the Chicago victory. In the nightcap, Gary Peters fired a three-hitter and Pete Ward hit his first homer of the season.

Mike McCormick pitched his second straight shutout for the Senators in the first game, a four-hitter. Frank Howard hit his 17th homer. In the finale, Paul Lindblad and Jim Nash teamed up for the triumph. Joe Sparma drove in two runs with a triple.

Frank Robinson's 43rd home run, his fourth hit of the game, put Baltimore ahead in the eighth inning after Sam McDowell had held the Orioles to four hits. An error, a wild pitch and a single got Baltimore three more runs in the ninth.

Homers by Jose Cardenal and Joe Adcock and the five - hit pitching of Dean Chance took care of the Yankees and ended a three-game California losing streak. The Angels got two more runs in the sixth on an error by Bobby Richardson and a walk by Jackie Hernandez with the bases loaded.

Syracuse Topples Maple Leafs

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs' first place reign in the International League was short lived.

The Leafs, who reached the top for the first time this season Tuesday night, were dropped one-half game behind the leaders by the last-place Syracuse Chiefs, who defeated Jacksonville Suns 5-1.

Syracuse jumped on Toronto starter and loser Galen Cisco for five runs in the first inning and added two more in the fifth. Jackie Moore capped the first-inning uprising with a two-run double for Syracuse.

PUSH BALL

Four of the first-inning runs were unearned and came after catcher Bob Montgomery dropped a throw at the plate.

Jackie Moore clouted a 390-foot home run for Toledo, and the Mets scored the winning run when Felix Millan fumbled a ground ball and missed a double play for the Braves.

Mike Epstein and Curt Motton both hit two-run homers to lead Rochester's 14-hit attack against the Pirates. Winning pitcher Tom Phoebus brought his record to 13-9.

Sam Jones pitched the last two innings for the Suns as they scored two unearned on a pair of Jacksonville errors to give Jones his fifth straight victory in relief.

Western Scoring Leaders

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winnipeg Blue Bombers Ed Ulmer collected all his team's points Wednesday night but it didn't make much of an impression on Hugh Campbell and the rest of the leaders in the Western Football Conference scoring race.

Bombers dropped a 4-2 squeaker to Montreal Alouettes with Ulmer getting two singles in a losing cause to raise his season total to five.

Campbell, Saskatchewan Roughrider flanker who leads Western scorers with 48 points for a 12-point lead over Edmonton's Jim Thomas has held first place from the beginning of the season.

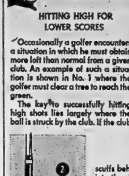
THE ARNOLD Palmer Method
by GOLF'S 4-TIME MASTERS WINNER

HITTING HIGH FOR LOWER SCORES

"Occasionally a golfer encounters a situation in which he must obtain more loft than normal from a given club. An example of such a situation is shown in No. 1 where the golfer must clear a tree to reach the green.



The key to successfully hitting high shots lies largely where the ball is struck by the club. If the club scuffs behind the ball, it may slide into the side of the ball and hit it on a very low trajectory. If the club strikes downward too sharply, the angle of flight will also be reduced.

The club in No. 2 is hitting the ball at the proper angle to give maximum height. In this manner it will give you a combination of club loft and ball backspin, both of which are vital for high shots.

The Tracks

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP)—Prize Jive, Canada's outstanding two-year-old filly last year, charged from off the pace to win the $12,150, Fury stakes before 7,186 at Fort Erie race track Wednesday.

The three - year - old daughter of Mister Jive out of Prize Sugar, owned by Bud Carter of Brantford and Gary Garrett of Hornby, ran the six furlongs in 1.10, one-fifth of a second off the track record held by Flirtion.

A half length behind was Snow Time, who came from last place in an effort to win. Cologne, the favorite, was third.

Prize Jive collected $7,150 and paid $10.30, $7.60 and $5.40.

The daily double of In The Tub and Dandier returned $39.80, the exacta of Dunsan and Arab Prince $28.30.

HOOVES DID THE WORK

The first threshing machine not worked by human muscles was the ox, which trod the grain out of the ears on a threshing floor.

Shannonville started scoring in the first inning of their South Hastings Baseball League finals game with Latta last night.

They were still going at the end. And they never missed an inning in the middle.

The final score was 23-8, giving Shannonville a 2-1 games lead in the four-of-seven series. The clubs meet again Friday, at 8.30, and Sunday, at 2.00, at the Belleville Fairgrounds.

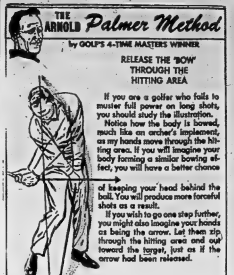
The winners had a 14-0 lead before Latta managed a little scoring of their own, bagging seven in the seventh. Shannonville had a seven - run third inning and matched that total again in the eighth.

Eight players shared in the victors' 19-hit total. Doug Defoe hammered a grand - slam home run in the third and connected for his second round - tripper, with one aboard, in the sixth.

Jack Hughes collected the most hits, four, including a pair of doubles. Dave Lewis hit a bases - empty homer and a single. Carl Bonshower landed a three - run home run, Larry Lewis and Bud Hill each hit a double and single, Bill Barberstock two singles and Bob Defoe one double.

Latta picked up eight hits, half of them for extra bases. Larry Mavety hit a one - on homer and a single. Bob Cook had a triple and single while Lorne Cronkright and Gary Ray each had a double and single.

Bill Barberstock, with relief from Larry Lewis in the eighth, pitched the victory. They fanned 10 and walked two.



Shaw started and gave way to Doug Chisholm in defeat. They whiffed five and walked the same number. The club erred eight times.

Back Nine Puts Cowan Five Back

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP)—Gary Cowan of Kitchener, along with many of the 150 amateurs competing in the United States Amateur Golf Championship, discovered Wednesday he couldn't charge the Merio Golf Club's par 70, 6,500-yard layout.

Cowan shot a 35 over the front nine holes and, if he had equalled that feat on the back nine, he would be just one stroke off the pace today. But Cowan slipped to a 39 coming in for an 18-hole total of 74.

Although it was better than the two other Canadians entered —Nick Weslock and Bob Bradley—it left him five strokes behind first-round leader Roger McManus of Hartville, Ohio.

Weslock, the Canadian amateur champion from Toronto, and Bradley of Oshawa both finished the first 18 holes with 78s.

"... You can't charge this one," defending U.S. amateur champ Bob Murphy of Nichols, Fla., said after the day's play. He was referring to his own 73, and Cowan would have been the first to agree.

Only McManus, a 42-year-old rug salesman, beat par.

TAXI HACKLES RISE

MONTREAL (CP)—City councillors John Lynch - Staunton wants tighter control over the taxi business for the 1967 World's Fair, saying some cabbies don't know the city and drive dirty vehicles. The taxi drivers' union, in return, has protested plans to issue an undetermined number of new taxi permits during 1967.

Minor Baseball Results

Fountain Park completed a sweep of its Belleville Minor Baseball League Pewee playoff with Bad Boys at Park Dale last night. With a five-run third inning highlighting their attack, the Fountain Park boys rolled to a 7-4 win for their third straight victory of the series.

In Tyke action, Jaycees evened their series with Lions Club at 1-1 when they posted an 8-5 win. They came from behind with a five-run rally in the seventh inning to do the trick.

Jim Richardson and Dan Lupenette each banged a pair of hits for Fountain Park to pace the winners in the Pewee contest. Paul Wolfe, John Mulvihill and Dennis Cone had one hit each. For the losers, Brian Cousins, Mike Bell, Rick Burnette, Dan Cousins and Laurie Burnette shared the hits.

Tim Whelan and Ron Wood combined to limit Lions Club to four base hits as Jaycees stayed alive in the Tyke section. Ron and Don McTaggart did the pitching for Lions Club.

Bruce Clark had a home run and a single for the winners while Mike Watt and Dave Sullivan supplied a pair of singles each. Robbie Woodbark also hit safely.

Tops for the losers was Ron McTaggart with a triple and a single. Don McTaggart and Terry Madden had the other Lions Club hits.

Color Television Comes To Canada This Evening But Set Cost Still High

By DOUG WHATLEY

TORONTO (CP) — Color comes to regular television programming in Canada this evening but about 90 per cent of viewers will be watching black-and-white sets.

Less than one per cent of the almost 5,000,000 Canadian homes with TV sets now can receive color, says a spokesman for the Electronic Industries Association of Canada, representing most of the country's television manufacturers.

"Color is still pretty much a luxury item," says one dealer.

Suggested retail prices for color sets, ranging in size from 19-inch portables to 25-inch consoles, is $600 to $2,300. Color TV-Stereo units may sell for even more.

Although competition is intense as 11 firms vie to establish themselves in the blossoming market — by stepping up manufacturing and launching vigorous sales campaigns— there are no consumer figures yet. And none are expected for about two years.

Canadian manufacturers, however, may be spurred to lower their prices by expected increased competition from abroad, chiefly the United States and Japan.

At least one large U.S. electronics manufacturer already has announced plans to resume selling TV receivers in Canada for the first time since 1960, including a line of color models starting at $500.

JAPAN WANTS IN

As importing firm which markets Japanese communications equipment in Canada says it may bring in 12- to 19-inch color sets within a year.

The Electronic Industries Association estimates that by the beginning of 1967 there will be about 85,000 sets in operation, increasing to about 200,000 by the end of the year. It says this will rise to more than 1,000,000 by 1970.

The CBC and CTV networks stand ready to throw a generous splash of color into their program schedules this season.

The publicly - owned CBC says it plans 30 hours or more a week of prime - time color programming on the English network, and about 15 on the French.

Privately - owned CTV announced 70 per cent of its total 82 hours of network shows each week will be in color.

The cost?

The federal government set a maximum of $15,000,000 for the first stage of CBC conversion to color in June, 1965.

CTV president Gordon Keeble says: "I'd hate to think how much it has cost us."

HAVE BIG PLANS

Many of Canada's 74 individual television stations also have big plans for color. Almost all will be able to carry color transmissions from the two networks, although rogues many have facilities to originate color programs.

Why are the broadcasters working presenting so much color so early with so few viewers able to benefit?

One television writer has said the answer involves pursuit of "prestige, especially with advertisers."

"Not only are they now interested in the super-income color set owners, but also in the network which moves quickest to win the allegiance of the color viewer."

The president of a large Canadian advertising firm says American surveys have shown color advertising, though more difficult and costly to produce, is at least 35 per cent more effective then black and white.

One agency told a group of advertising executives the man who buys a color TV tends to be a bigger spender than his black and white cousin, especially on convenience products, modern inventions and status symbols.

Another Nude Body of Woman Has Been Found

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—The nude body of a strangled woman was found in a ditch beside Canadian National Railway tracks near here Wednesday, about 100 feet from where another woman's body was found Sunday.

Police said they believe both women were killed about the same time but the second body was not noticed Sunday because of tall grass.

Police said Wednesday night the second body has not been identified. They said it was the body of a young Indian woman. She was nude except for a coat thrown over her arms and she had a slip knotted about her neck.

The first body, found partly clothed, has been identified as that of Noreen Lucy Hardy, 18, of MacDiarmid, about 100 miles northeast of here.

Jane Wyman Working Like Crazy to Improve Singing

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"Three years in television was enough to kill my enthusiasm," says Jane Wyman. "I didn't care if I ever acted again."

The Academy-Award actress (Johnny Belinda, 1948) was explaining her lengthy absence from the Hollywood scene. In 1955 she began The Jane Wyman Show, and the three strenuous years nearly did her in.

"It was an anthology show, and that's the worst kind," she remarked. "When you're doing a continuing series, you use the same sets and characters, and the whole thing falls into a pattern.

"But an anthology show means a new cast and new settings every week. And each week you are faced with a new character to play. It's like putting on a miniature movie once a week."

Jane managed to perform in three movies after the end of the series—Pollyanna, Holiday for Lovers and Bon Voyage, but then she quit acting altogether, with the audiences.

"I'll just do four songs for 12 minutes in the middle of Don's show. Now she is going to face live audiences, something she hasn't done in many years.

"It was all Donald O'Connor's idea," she said. "He suggested that I join his night club act dates. I'm ready for anything."

Large Number of Special Programs to Be Given

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "They're playing it safe this season," said one of the biggest agents in show business.

He summed up Hollywood's consensus on the calibre of the regularly scheduled television series being turned out in studios here.

With few exceptions, comedy, adventure, western and variety shows are being cut from pattern which have proved popular.

The studio product, made with professional skill and approximately the same amount of inspiration that goes into baking a loaf of bread, will provide the basic television fare in the season that starts next Tuesday.

And if that were all, it would be easy to predict that the shows would be no more impressive or stimulating than last season, which will certainly not go down as one of television's golden years.

SPECIALS WILL HELP

Fortunately, the three major networks are competing to leaven their schedules — and perhaps coincidentally politically their images—with an especially large number of special programs.

ABC is producing an impressive series of weekly specials under the title Stage 67. These range from original dramas and musical comedies to documentaries. Ingrid Bergman will appear in a one-character drama, The Human Voice, and Truman Capote will narrate an adaptation of his Christmas Memory, among other off-beat entries.

To mention a few outstanding programs on all three networks, there will be productions of such plays as Arthur Miller's The Crucible, Tennessee Williams' Streetcar named Desire and The Glass Menagerie and Noel Coward's Blithe Spirits.

There will be special reruns of recent motion pictures, including The Music Man and Bridge on the River Kwai. A 90-minute production of the Lerner-Loewe musical Brigadoon also is planned.

Schedules now indicate that these will total more than 150, but of course that includes a lot of reruns of shows like The Wizard of Oz, and Amahl and the Night Visitors, The usual assortment of beauty contests, awards shows, monthly Perry Como and Bob Hope programs.

There is great interest in the reception that will be given shows starting two big motion picture names — Jean Arthur Show and Ann Sheridan's Pistols and Petticoats. Both have been given assignments any time on whether Milton Berle will succeed in his variety comeback.

Will Remove Old Trees For New School Addition

NAPANEE — Napanee is learning this week that natural beauty must sometimes be sacrificed for the sake of progress. All the trees on the south to the NDSS have been cut down by the contractors to make way for the two new wings which are to be built.

When the first six-room Collegiate Institute was built here in the '30's someone with an eye for beauty and with a knowledge of furniture and landscape saw to it that the grounds were beautifully landscaped, with ornamental trees and shrubbery on the grounds in positions which enhanced the beauty of the building.

When the wing was added to the old building, it was built on the north side and the landscaping ruined. When the present addition was built it was erected still farther north, and eventually the first school and the wing were razed and the site grassed over.

The two new wings, A and C will extend from the present building to the edge of the fields on Graham St., and will be connected only along the street. Every tree and shrub on the property had to be removed to make way for them.

Around Town

MAGISTRATE'S COURT

NAPANEE — Nine people were convicted for speeding and one was driving too slowly when they appeared before Magistrate R. C. Jackson in Napanee Tuesday.

Bernard Summers of Camp-charge, but said afterwards charge, but said afterwards that he had slowed up to turn into a driveway. The car behind him had about 70 feet before colliding with the rear of Summer's car, which was proceeding at about five miles an hour. The magistrate said that no one had the right to drive at that speed, or even at 20 miles, in a 50-mile zone.

Summers was fined $15 and costs. According to the Highway Traffic Act, the penalty calls for a fine of not less than ten and no more than $100, with a possible suspension of the licence for 30 days.

Those in control of a vehicle while impaired, Robert William Little of Camden East was fined $100 and costs, and his license was suspended for three months.

Speeding cases were remanded, in some instances by request, and in two cases, where lawyers had been heard, the magistrate reserved judgment until September 6.

Unions Plan Parades for Labor Day

NAPANEE—Members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic International Union who are employed at the CIL plant at Millhaven have organized parades for Labor Day, one to start from Napanee, and the second from Kingston. They will converge on Millhaven where they will be addressed by speakers.

The organization has received the permission of the Napanee Police

Wilson Says World in Danger of Plunging Into Depression Like Thirties

LONDON (CP)—The world is in danger of being plunged into a depression similar to that of the 1930s, union chiefs have been told by Prime Minister Wilson.

One report said Wilson, warning against devaluation of the pound sterling, saw the world "poised on the edge of disaster as bad as that of 1931," facing a global tieup of trade. He told leaders of the 9,000,000-member Trades Union Congress of his fears.

A Wilson aide said later today the prime minister was discussing something that might happen if present trends continued, rather than an immediate prospect.

The prime minister made his estimate in private talks with the TUC in emphasizing the need for the Labor government's wages-and-prices freeze. Written reports now have been circulated to members of the TUC's general council, now in Blackpool preparing for next week's annual meeting of the giant congress.

Wilson, at his own request, is scheduled to address congress delegates at Blackpool Monday in a do-or-die attempt to win support for his pay freeze, which many union leaders regard with deep suspicion.

By putting Britain's economic plight in world terms, Wilson apparently hopes to overcome the doubters and appeal to the statesmanship of the union chiefs.

In any case, the economist-premier told the TUC economic committee there is a "terrible shortage" of money to finance international trade. He had discussed this in Washington and Paris with President Johnson and President de Gaulle. James Callaghan, chancellor of the exchequer, was continuing to discuss it with other countries.

The world was on the edge of a disaster as bad as the 1930s at the time of the depression, Wilson, 48 stressing the current shortage of liquidity, said that if Britain is forced to devalue the pound sterling, other countries will have to follow.

Money generally would then be worth less and would buy less goods, so trade would inevitably slow down. International liquidity is scheduled to be among topics discussed next week at the Commonwealth prime ministers conference in London.

5 Arrested After Ten Break Jail

WINNIPEG (CP)—Ten men, armed after breaking into a gun locker, fled nearby Headingley provincial jail Thursday night. Three were recaptured after about six hours of freedom when a car was wrecked during a police chase near Portage la Prairie.

Two other men picked up at a hotel in Langdon, N.D., have been "tentatively identified" as escapees and were being escorted by RCMP back to Canada.

They had a station wagon similar to one stolen from the jail when arrested by town police in the community 20 miles south of the Manitoba border.

The other three were arrested near Portage la Prairie when a car left the road at high speed after attempting to elude a police roadblock. They were uninjured, as was the young son of a farm family whom they abducted when they stole the car.

RCMP said "some arms and ammunition" were recovered.

The 10, described by police as dangerous, escaped in the wee hours and 800 rounds of ammunition from the arms locker in the escape which began when one prisoner grabbed a guard at knifepoint and took his keys.

It was over in minutes, with the escapees fleeing in two stolen cars and equipped with civilian clothes.

Jail Supt. Berry Littlewood said several dozen other prisoners in the exercise yard faced open gates for a time when the desperados held unarmed guards at their mercy, but elected to remain in custody.

LEISHMAN GOT AWAY

The fugitives included Kenneth Leishman, 34, awaiting trial on theft and conspiracy charges in connection with a spectacular $383,000 gold bullion robbery at Winnipeg Airport March 1. When Leishman was arrested in Vancouver some days later, he was first

Jets Cut Rail Line To China

SAIGON (AP)—Six flights of U.S. air force jets cut the northwest rail line between Hanoi and China to 10 places Thursday, a U.S. spokesman announced, but the loss of two more planes pushed the toll of the air war against North Viet Nam past the 300 mark.

The air force announced that an F-104 Starfighter and an A-4E Skyraider were shot down by ground fire during raids Thursday. This brought to 331 the number of U.S. planes reported lost over North Viet Nam. Both pilots are missing.

Viet Cong mines exploded in a village voting office and nearby civilian bus today in an upsurge of five terrorist attacks close to Saigon. A South Vietnamese spokesman said 12 persons were killed and 10 were wounded in the attack on the bus.

The rash of attacks, some clearly aimed at disrupting the Sept. 11 national elections, overshadowed the ground war, which continued in a lull.

The air war over North Viet Nam also was slowed by bad weather, which limited U.S. pilots to 70 missions Thursday, about half the usual number.

In the raids on the Red River rail line to China, pilots reported destroying or damaging four bridges along the main supply route.

Senate Quickly Follows House In Passing Bill to End Strike

By MICHAEL GILLAN

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament ordered 118,000 striking railway workers back to their jobs Thursday night, then waited to learn whether the country's highest court will be obeyed or defied.

Senators and MPs expressed hope — some certainty — that the law given royal assent at 10:19 p.m. EDT will be followed.

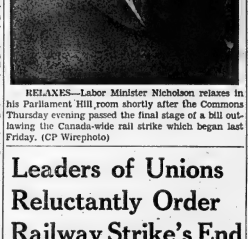
But defiance of the law in key railway centres could keep the national railways system tied up and plunge the Pearson minority government and Parliament into yet another crisis.

As the Commons headed towards, the conclusion of four days of debate, members from all parties agreed the strike-ending bill was necessary.

The only other national railway strike in Canada was in 1950, and it was halted by a bill rushed down by the St. Laurent Liberal government.

WANT EARLY ACTION

Many MPs called for early action to remove the main causes that led to this strike.



Opposition MPs wanted the recommendations of the Freedman commission on automation implemented immediately, and the government said a labor department study of it is going before cabinet.

And debate on a bill to revamp the railways system, including lifting of freight rate restrictions to increase railway revenues to enable them to pay higher wages, was resumed as soon as the strike bill got third and final reading.

The amended bill—Senator M. Grattan O'Leary (PC—Ontario) called it "battle scarred"—orders the workers to return "forthwith."

It sets out minimum wage increases for 1966 and 1967 totalling 18 per cent, with negotiations under mediation to continue at least until Nov. 15 on possible further wage boosts and on fringe benefits, job se-

Leaders of Unions Reluctantly Order Railway Strike's End

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP) — Displaying obvious reluctance, the four leaders of Canada's 118,000 striking railway employees agreed late Thursday night to comply with Parliament's strike legislation and call off the coast-to-coast railway walkout.

Yet even as they put the strike - ending machinery into motion, it was obvious that some if their members were preparing to defy the new law.

One union negotiator said he had received word that 1,000 CNR shop workers in Montreal were organizing a motorcade to Ottawa today to stage a demonstration protesting the legislation.

An official of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers reported that members of his and other unions were making plans to join the demonstration.

The legislation, ordering union leaders to call off the strike "forthwith" and railway workers to comply, became law at 10:19 p.m. EDT upon royal assent in the Senate chamber.

At almost the same moment, three of the four key union leaders held a press conference they were set to comply.

There was a half-hour of confusion while reporters waited for word from W. J. Smith, president of the 20,000-member CBRT who had called a closed-doors meeting of his negotiating committee to discuss the situation.

When he emerged at 10:50 p.m., Mr. Smith said: "We are compelled to inform them (the members) that they are presumed to obey the law."

The press conference was al-

Railroaders Here Interrupt Vote, Resume Picketing

CNR non-operating railway workers in Belleville will remain on strike for at least another 24 hours following postponement of a Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers meeting at Club Canara today.

Strike leader and B of RT and GW president Henry Hall adjourned the meeting until 10 a.m. tomorrow, following reports that rail workers in Montreal, Halifax and Vancouver were still out, and only one-third of the workers have gone back to work in Toronto.

A secret ballot had started and approximately 50 members had voted before it was decided to cancel the vote until tomorrow's meeting. All votes cast will be destroyed without being counted.

Members of BC of A have been picking all day. A spokesman for them said: "We haven't been notified from our headquarters yet. As far as we're concerned the strike is still on."

RECEIVED INSTRUCTIONS

Before calling this morning's meeting, Mr. Hall announced strike headquarters here had received a directive from union headquarters in Toronto, "to call the pickets off and instruct our employees to go back to work."

"It was with reluctance and resentment that our national officers were forced to comply with the Government law and call the men back to work.

"We're going to obey Government law."

The decision of the local B. of R.T. and G.W. workers not to return to their jobs stalled plans by CN management here to get trains back into operation.

EXPECTED TO OPERATE

Earlier in the morning CN Rideau Area manager H. J. Fast told The Intelligencer that it was expected all trains would be back in operation on Saturday and that overnight passenger service between Toronto and Montreal would be resumed Saturday morning.

"That's all gone by the board now," Mr. Fast said when at TORONTO (CP) —CPR trains began operating in central Ontario today but CNR operations were still paralyzed when workers refused to obey the federal legislation passed Thursday night ordering them back to work.

"Only a trickle have come back," said a CN spokesman in Toronto. "Picket lines are still up at all our properties throughout the province and workers will not cross the lines it seems."

He said only "a handful" of them reported for work at the central yard in Toronto. He said the only CNR trains working in the province were a few yard locomotives in Toronto and a freight train en route from Montreal.

"I don't know when it's supposed to arrive and I don't know if we have enough men here at the terminal to unload it," he said.

On Thursday night, D. V. Gonder, vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said: "The doors are open for all

Election Drive Heats Up

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The temperature of the Newfoundland election campaign jumped from cool to hot Thursday, thanks to Quebec's ex-premier Jean Lesage.

His mention of confidential talks with Newfoundland over the Quebec-Labrador boundary touched off an angry blast from Premier Joseph Smallwood.

He called Mr. Lesage "a liar" for saying there had been confidential negotiations over the boundary question.

Later the Quebec Liberal leader said his government gave up trying to make a land swap with Newfoundland because Mr. Smallwood refused to discuss the matter.

The Newfoundland premier has said repeatedly the Labrador boundary will not be changed.

"Quebec knows this, Ottawa knows this. The prime minister of Canada knows this. Mr. Lesage knows it. The present premier of Quebec knows it.

"No power under God will change us in this."

We Were Struck and Called 'Fat Pigs' Say Expelled Nuns

HONG KONG (Reuters)—Two nuns expelled from China Wednesday said today they were struck, called "fat pigs" and forced to stand on a cross by Communist Red Guards who took over their Peking convent last week.

The two nuns, Sisters Catherine Regan, 65, of Glasgow, Scotland, and Sister Rosa Millesanti, 66, of Italy, were among eight elderly nuns forced to leave Peking after living there for many years.

They made their disclosures to reporters after attending the funeral today of Sister Eamonn, 60, the former Mary O'Sullivan, Cork, Ireland, who died in hospital here Thursday.

Already ill, she was pushed across the border on a railway barrow wagon.

With tears in her eyes, Sister Regan said she had no words to describe the actions of the young Red Guards, who have been controlling for a stricter Communist way of life in China.

"They slapped us and I could see hatred in their hearts and they went mad and stepped on a cross and forced us to do so," she said.

Sister Millesanti said 13 Chinese nuns in the convent were "very much more severely treated."

She said she did not know their fate.

The Red Guards called the nuns "fat pigs," the two sisters said, and wrote rude remarks about God, religion and the habits of Chinese nuns in chalk on the convent walls.

They accused the nuns of engaging in disruptive activities against the Chinese government and declared China and its people had no need of God or religion.

About 50 Red Guards gained admittance into the convent by saying they wanted to look over the place, Sister Millesanti said.

The convent housed a school for children of foreign diplomats. The order of the Franciscan sisters ran it, headed by the Canadian mother superior, Mother Mary of the Cross, formerly Winnifred Duff of Frampton, Que.

"Once they got in they ran about shouting 'we do not want you any more,'" Sister Millesanti added.

Asked about the cause of Sister Eamonn's death, Sisters Regan and Millesanti said she had been ill in Peking for some time but the recent experiences and the long train journey weakened her.

When they arrived here the nuns in Hong Kong told how Red Guards jeered and shouted at them during the train journey.

But until today they maintained they had not been physically mistreated.

China has charged that the convent in Peking was used as a cover for espionage and collusion with counter-revolutionaries in the Roman Catholic churches.

STANDING GUARD — A railway policeman stands in front of the CNR station on Station St. as union members resume their picketing as noon today. B of RT and GW members decided to postpone a decision on whether or not to go back to work until tomorrow morning.

M. Fraser 'Babe' James, Trenton Kiwanian, Named As Divisional Lieut.-Gov.

Upwards of fifty Kiwanians assembled at the Tops Motel in this city on Wednesday afternoon at the call of Divisional Lieutenant-Governor L. A. Kells of the Belleville Kiwanis Club, Presidents and Past Presidents of regional Kiwanis Clubs, in particular, were here to participate in selection of a suitable nominee for the office of Lieutenant-Governor whose name will be offered at the Ontario - Quebec - Maritimes - West Indies convention that will be held in Hamilton, Ontario, September 25 to 28 next. Others who attended enjoyed the dinner, heard the reports on the International Convention at Portland in July, and offered support to M. Fraser "Babe" James, Past President of the Trenton Kiwanis Club, who was the successful contestant.

The business of the meeting was under the chairmanship of Immediate Past Lieutenant-Governor Harold Marans of the Kingston Kiwanis Club, who was able to welcome a capacity attendance in the meeting room. President Doug. Adams of the Trenton Club made the address of presentation of their candidate, and the seconding support came from President Friedel Bellstedt of the Belleville Kiwanis Club. At the conclusion of the election, the meeting moved to cast a single ballot for "Babe" James and to give unanimous support to his candidacy at Hamilton.

The dinner meeting was chaired by President Friedel Bellstedt, at which time Lieutenant Governor L. A. Kells spoke to the assembly. Topics covered included the general state of Kiwanis in the area, revisions in by-laws adopted at the international convention, announcements regarding impending changes to be discussed at the Hamilton convention, and suggestions to the Clubs arising out of visits during the year to date. The Past Service Club delegation, winners of achievement awards for the first half of the year, joined with their president, Vic Burke, in leading club singing. The Lieutenant-Governor presented awards for high attendance efficiency to the Clubs of both Port Hope, over 85% and Trenton, over 90% in the first half year.

Enthusiasm for the coming convention, September 25-28, in Hamilton, was high, the small cost registration for a club being two, and several clubs intimating the possibility of ten or more delegates.

If Labor Minister Mcholson decides on that date that he mediation is making no progress he can send the issues still in dispute to arbitration. The arbitration findings would be final unless 10 MPs object in writing to the report and force a debate.

Under pressure from the opposition parties the government amended its original bill to set minimum 1967 wage increases of four per cent effective Jan. 1, 1967 and another six per cent on July 1, next year.

Originally the government put only 1966 increases in the bill—four per cent retroactive to Jan. 1 this year and four per cent retroactive to July 1 this year—and argued there was nothing left to a resumed bargaining session.

The two-year wage package was recommended in two conciliation board reports that were rejected by the railways and the unions. Most railwaymen involved are non-operating employees earning an average of $2.32 an hour.

The original bill was unveiled in the Commons Monday, with Prime Minister Pearson and other cabinet members rowing at first to stick by its provisions.

CAME UNDER ATTACK

The next day the government came under heavy attack. Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, NDP Leader Hazen and other opposition members argued that the 1967 wage minimums would have to be included if there were to be any hope of getting the men back to work. They said words were meaningless in an arbitrator unless in the bill.

The government put up Immigration Minister Marchand and Health Minister MacEachen to state in lengthy speeches that acceptance of the conciliation recommendations from the conciliation board reports were a "moral" or implicit guarantee that the workers would receive at least 18 per cent over two years.

On Wednesday night Mr. Nicholson announced the 1967 minimums would be included. The amendment was formally moved and passed on Thursday.

Then the opposition pushed for more.

Mr. Diefenbaker demanded a "general statement of principle" that job security, changes in working conditions and fringe benefits would be included in the coming negotiations under mediation.

The NDP wanted the main recommendations of the Freedman report written in.

CONSULT ON CHANGES

The report by Mr. Justice Samuel Freedman into railway crew run-throughs would oblige the railways to negotiate with unions before introducing any technological change affecting working conditions.

Mr. Nicholson said he would instruct the negotiators in writing to include these items in negotiations, but said an amendment was unnecessary because this was implied by a rule already in the bill.

Mr. Diefenbaker accepted the labor minister's pledge but forced a vote, and was defeated, on an amendment to put the instructions in the bill.

The NDP found itself alone in a vote on its amendment that would have required arbitrators to write a contract clause setting out the Freedman formula "in an appropriate form." The other parties voted against.

The government accepted a proposal from H. A. Olson (SC—Medicine Hat) in the bill that all wage rates would be boosted by at least 18 per cent over two years, although again Mr. Nicholson thought it unnecessary.

Mr. Olson said he feared that by averaging out the increases the railways might give increases as low as 12 per cent to some and much more than 18 per cent to others.

TOSSED TO SENATE

Several other amendments, many by the NDP, were voted down and late Thursday afternoon the bill was given third and final reading, then tossed to the Senate.

It was passed by the Senate in about three hours, but not before several of its members delivered brief but well - prepared speeches.

Senator David Walker (PC—Ontario) said the right to strike should be outlawed in such essential services as the railways and the post office.

Senator M. Wallace McCutcheon (PC—Ontario) said the government cannot continue to permit strikes in essential parts of its own jurisdiction.

VOTED FOR BILL

Senator Croll voted for the bill this time although in the 1960 strike when a member of the Commons he bolked party ranks and opposed a similar measure.

He said that collective bargaining procedure in the railways system has progressed little in 16 years and if the issue has to be loosed to Parliament each time "it's one helluva way to run a railway."

Senator O'Leary said the current trouble can be traced to the weakness, irresponsibility and incompetence of the government.

He said that despite a year of warnings about the dangers of inflation only "reasonable snorings" had come from the government benches.

Senator Arthur Roebuck (L—Ontario) said railwaymen have been underpaid for a long time and had he been writing the bill he would have granted almost all their demands.

FIRES WARDENS

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—Governor Orval Faubus fired warders and demoted 23 trusties en masse Thursday with the announcement that state police have uncovered prison wrongdoing, including extortion and beatings. The governor fired all three wardens at Tucker prison farm, where 1,905 of the state's 2,000 convicts are confined.

Diving Champ Bev Boys Delights Crowd at Show Staged by Kinsmen Club

Beverly Boys, Canadian Ladies Tower Champion, headlined the annual Kinsmen Water Show last night. Miss Boys, 14, brought back silver and bronze medals to Canada from the British Empire Games in Jamaica early last month. A civic welcome was extended to the young lady from Pickering as Mayor Jack Ellis greeted her at City Hall and she signed the city's guest book.

Kinsmen President Bill Lafferty opened the show at the Kinsmen Pool. First event of the evening was a diving demonstration by Miss Boys along with Pat Hoskins of Toronto who holds a U. S. title as well as the Ontario Championship. Bob Eaton, also of Toronto and an Ontario Champion rounded out the diving trio. The three made three dives each including some of those compulsory in competition and several very difficult ones that brought bursts of applause from the audience of 500.

Miss Boys was presented with a bouquet of roses after her demonstration. Coordinator for the display was Don Webb. Miss Boys' coach and a past World Tower Diving Champion.

The diving exhibition that followed was billed as "from the sublime to the ridiculous" and, judging by audience reaction, it met with success. The "Aquamaniacs" proved a source of delight to the youngsters with their clown diving although there was obviously a great deal of skill involved in the apparent ineptitudes of the "divers".

The Trenton Speed Swimming Club next provided a demonstration of its skills. Members ranged in age from 5 to adult swimmers.

STROKES DEMONSTRATED

Pool manager Jim Clelland brought out his staff for a demonstration of basic swimming strokes. He praised their abilities and thanked them for their cooperation during the summer. Mr. Clelland made 250 swimming awards during the evening ranging from the Tadpole to Intermediate level. Over 800 awards have been made during the summer.

The Manager's award for the swimmer showing most improvement for the summer went to Paul Woodley. Manager Clelland inaugurated the award this year. It will become an annual presentation.

Closing event of the show was the synchronized swimming of Peterborough Orca officials, Canadian Champions and past British Empire Games and Pan American Champions. Mrs. Fanny Formes, their coach, explained various figures used in the routines. The club produced solos, duets, and several routines.

employees to come back to work."

The spokesman said today: "The doors are still open but the men don't seem to want to come in."

He said some trains were moving in the Maritimes and some in Quebec. Also national telegram services had begun again although on a "limited" to delay" basis.

The first CPR train—a passenger train—was scheduled to arrive at Toronto's Union Station at 12 noon EDT.

A CP spokesman said the railway is working back to a normal basis as most employees in Ontario returned to their jobs despite picket lines at some properties.

He said seven trains were ready to work at the Smiths Falls division, six at Trenton, one at London and six at Schreiber.

"And the Toronto yard is in full operation," he said.

'LEARING RUST

He said the railway is checking signals and clearing rust from rails in preparation for the resumption of normal operations.

"We have a schedule prepared for the afternoon and we hope we can keep to the schedule," he said.

He said although most divisions are at or near normal operations some places are still down completely. He said all employees had reported back to work at Windsor.

Resistance to the back-to-work call, made by union leaders after Parliament ordered it, was reported at Sudbury, Winnipeg, Ont. Calgary an Vancouver.

In some of these cases the return to work was delayed pending a vote by local membership. In some others, local officials were "disciplined" by the official word that they were to get back to work.

In Montreal, a spokesman at headquarters for 54,000 non-operating employees said union locals in cities other than Montreal were being phoned and told to go back to work.

"Workers in Winnipeg, on the Ontario-Northland Railway, on the Toronto - Hamilton - Buffalo railway and the CPR and CNR have been contacted and told to get back on the job," said the spokesman.

'FACE CONSEQUENCES'

"If some of the workers choose to defy the law of the land and the instructions from headquarters then they will have to face the consequences themselves," the spokesman added.

But Paul Raymond, vice-president of the 20,000-member shop-crafts group, said today:

"We have not yet ordered our men back to work.

"President C. W. Read and myself drove all night from Ottawa and we plan to hold an immediate meeting of all leaders of our group to the legislation and decide on what action to take next.

"Mr. Read will hold a press conference at 4 p.m. EDT today at which he will announce whether or not the shop-craft workers will be asked to return to work."

the-strike bill at 10:19 p.m. EDT Thursday night.

Employees began returning to work shortly after midnight.

The CPR reported that a sufficient number of men "returned to work to enable us to start up this morning."

Both railways ran "pilot trains" in various parts of the country early today to make sure that all was in readiness to resume regular service. The pilot trains consisting of boxcars were used to wear rust off the rails and provide a check as to whether signals were operating normally.

The pilot train which left Bridgewater, N.S., at 5:05 a.m. ADT may have been the first to run in Canada.

The first in Prince Edward Island left Charlottetown at 9:30 a.m. carrying freight and CNR equipment for the western part of the province.

The first train to run left Deux-Montagnes, Que. at 7:43 a.m. for the 25-mile trip into Montreal.

PLAN LONG HAULS

The first scheduled inter-city passenger train from Montreal was scheduled to leave at 12:-10 p.m. today for Ottawa, a CNR spokesman said. Regular services to Halifax, Quebec City, Toronto and Vancouver were expected to be resumed later in the afternoon.

The CPR did not start up its Montreal commuter runs early today. It planned to open passenger operations with a commuter train from Montreal to Rigaud, Que., at 4:10 p.m. Inter-city runs would be resumed shortly afterwards.

Some 24 trains were scheduled in and out of Toronto today. The first passenger train was expected to leave at 6:10 p.m.

Freight services at most major rail centres across Canada were expected to start up before noon.

Although start-up operations were proceeding "as well as might be expected" there were some pockets of resistance among the non-operating employees.

In Calgary CPR employees voted back to work Thursday night were halted early today by pickets outside the CPR station in downtown Calgary.

AWAIT WORD

A railway spokesman said the pickets refused to return to work until they received word from union negotiators in Ottawa. Non-pickets declined to cross the picket line.

Employees of both the CNR and the CPR also maintained pickets in Windsor, Ont.

"There holdouts at various places across the country are certainly a hindrance, but we're getting more and more trains into service every hour," said a CNR spokesman.

The CPR also expected to resume normal or near-normal operations today despite the holdouts.

The CPR reported that its telecommunication service across the country was gradually being restored. Offices in most cities were open and telegram services were accepted although some delays in transmission might occur, a spokesman said.

The CNR also began accepting telegrams early today and expected to have all wires in operation by noon.

The act of Parliament outlawing the strike orders an immediate return to work with a guaranteed wage increase of at least 18 per cent in 1966 and 1967 for all workers involved.

Railway-union contract negotiations would continue, with compulsory arbitration to take effect unless progress was made by Nov. 15.

The workers, members of 19 railway unions, walked out last Friday seeking wage increases of about 30 per cent, job security provisions and a variety of fringe benefits.

HAVE THREE COMPLAINTS

Various union locals across the country criticized the government bill on three main counts: The interim wage increase imposed on the railways was too low; the compulsory arbitration clause was a blow to collective bargaining; and there was nothing in the bill about job security.

The effects of having nearly 30,000 miles of vital railway track tied up for a week were difficult to assess immediately. The CNR, CPR and five smaller railways were pralysed by the strike, and countrywide telegraph services also closed down. Thousands of freight, mainly in Ontario, were thrown out of work at least temporarily by industrial layoffs, and far-reaching layoffs and shutdowns were forecast if the strike continued.

All important stocks of export grain at terminal elevators were depleted, but officials estimated the supply would hold out for perhaps two weeks without rail transportation.

Railway-operated ferry service to Canada's two island provinces, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, was delayed and even interrupted in the early days of the walkout but resumed normal operation before strike - ending legislation was adopted.

CLOSED PARTS PLANT

Largest of the strike-caused layoffs, which took effect only Thursday, affected 5,300 employees in St. Catharines and Windsor, Ont., of a company that supplies parts of General Motors.

Canada's first countrywide rail strike, in 1950, lasted nine days and caused losses to workers and industries that ran into the tens of millions of dollars.

noon about 30 pickets turned up in front of the railway station.

Mr. Fast said plans had been for the first "pilot" train to leave the station shortly after the noon hour.

Crewmen had been called but at noon two trainmen had still not reported.

"Apparently they will not cross the picket line", he said.

PICTURE UNSETTLED

"The over-all picture is still unsettled", Mr. Fast went on. "Across Canada some railway workers have turned up for work, some trains are running and express trucks are running".

He quoted airlines turning up at noon at the Belleville station as saying they had been told to resume picketing but that they did not know why they were there.

"The whole thing is illegal and we can get only double talk from the union leaders."

However, CN maintenance men and bridge and building workers were said to have reported for work this morning.

Also the CN telegraph workers were back on the job this morning.

WORKING AT CPR

On the Canadian Pacific Railway, maintenance men and station personnel at Belleville reported for work this morning.

A CPR pilot train from Smiths Falls passed westbound through the city shortly before eight this morning.

The 300-member Local 126 of B of RT and GW resumed picketing at the CN station shortly after signs following their decision today to continue with a wildcat strike until tomorrow.

H. Pointer, a member of the strike committee, had warned union members earlier that if they decide not to go back to work they could be fired and could lose their pensions.

ANNOYED AT PRESIDENT

A motion at the meeting called for the resignation of national president of B of RT and GW, W. J. Smith. The union man making the motion was told he would have to wait for the next national meeting before making a motion of that kind.

The often boisterous meeting listened to a number of speakers airing their views on the strike situation. One member, Bob Duggan, said: "I'm mad." He added: "Anybody who votes to go back to work now is not only yellow but is a sheep following a bunch of spineless, gutless leaders."

Split Timing Order of Day In Rehearsal

TRENTON — Split timing was the order of the day at yesterday's rehearsal for this weekend's annual air show at the CNE.

Reporters sat in on a "critique" of Wednesday's rehearsal in the Argyll Forces Base at Trenton and were told that a one minute "lag" in any one aircraft's appearance "on centre stage," in front of the CNE grandstand, could throw off the timing of other aircraft scheduled to appear in sequence.

However, yesterday's performance seemingly went off without a hitch. Having been introduced to their pilots and crew the members of the crews took a personal interest in their appearance on stage.

The RCAF flyers went through routine flypasts and manoeuvres and aerobatics which thrilled the CNE crowd were really all part of the routine training.

"Extras" included an appearance by the Red Knight, the Yellow Knight, Ontario Lands, and Forests planes, an RAF Vulcan and American planes, including the Blue Angel aerobatic team which provides a thrilling 25 minute finale to the show.

Employment Good in Trenton Area

TRENTON — J. K. White, the manager at the local employment office, said today employment was good in the Trenton area and that September would be an unusually busy month with many workers being needed for harvesting crops and in the canning and construction fields.

At the end of August, there were 315 men and 264 women registered for work. This compares with 338 males and 234 females at the end of July and 316 males and 291 females at the end of August, 1965.

There is a need for machine shop workers, apple and tomato pickers, waitresses, domestics and canning factory workers, Mr. White said. General Electric continues to build up its staff.

The Trenton area served by the local office covers a 450 square mile area.

Three Jailed For Possession Of Stolen Car

TRENTON — Three Montreal youths are in the county jail at Cobourg, charged with possession of a stolen car and a 18-year-old female companion is in Cobourg General Hospital, following an accident Friday morning on Highway 401 at the intersection with County Road 25, north of Brighton. Provincial police from the Brighton detachment say the car went out of control and flipped over, resulting in $800 damage.

The driver, Bertrand Bossy, 19, suffered two broken ribs and was kept in hospital overnight. The others charged are Jacques Moron, 19, and Normand Champagne, 16.

The girl suffered a fractured femur and lacerations to her left leg.

VANDALS NOW HUNT

MOOSONEE, Ont. (CP)—Constable Wally Hopkins acquired a drawer-full of slingshots confiscated from window-breaking children, but he's now giving them back again. He supervises the local cub pack in weekly slingshot practice, at approved targets.

Fingerboard Hill Deleted From School Bus Route

AMELIASBURG — Parents concerned for their children risking on buses to and from the central public school in the winter months will not have to fret any more about that part of County Road 23 known as fingerboard hill, a spokesman for the area school board pointed out.

Twisting, turning fingerboard hill, the scene of a fatal accident last fall, calls on a driver's common sense most of the year. With the arrival of the winter season it becomes ever more difficult to negotiate. It may be almost impossible.

The township but the school board decided the cost of extra mileage involved in re-routing school buses was well worth a possible accident. As a result fingerboard hill was deleted from the routes school bus operators were called to tender bids on this term.

The message regarding change in the Highway Traffic Act covering requirements of public vehicles, including school buses, has come to the attention of parents in the township. And some of them are not sure the amendments will serve the purpose intended unless the new rulings receive wider publicity.

One worried mother for example contends that while school children will learn the changes instilled in their minds, adults, and at school, drivers not accustomed to being required to be equipped with two red lights on the front and rear it noted.

SIGNS SHOULD BE REPEALED

The directive also is stressed that subsection 3 of section 93 had been repealed which means it is no longer a requirement for public vehicles, including school buses, to have a sign on the back to the effect that, "This vehicle stops at all railway crossings." Commenting on this amendment a veteran bus driver said he wondered if it was a wise move to make since the new stipulation will cause some drivers, including himself, to relax their vigilance at railway crossings.

Under the new regulations the school bus driver while operating his vehicle on a highway on which the maximum speed limit is greater than 35 miles per hour is required to activate the signal lights when he is about to stop and must continue flashing them all during the time the bus is stopped. There is no mention in the regulations, nor is to follow the same procedure or a different one on a highway on which the maximum speed limit is under 35 miles per hour.

It is envisaged, however, are the warning words on the rear of the bus only: "Do Not Pass When Signals Flashing." The bus driver believes this helpful advice should also appear on the front of the vehicle where traffic are required to stop in accordance with the new ordinance.

PRAYS FOR LONG DEAD

LONG MARSTON, England (CP)—Rev. A. C. A. Smith, vicar of this Yorkshire village, wants more people to take an interest in the English Civil War between the Cavaliers and the Roundheads. He plans to hold an annual service and a series of lectures on the 3644 battlefield of Marston Moor.

Leaders

tended by R. C. Smith, head of negotiations for seven international non-operating unions with 20,000 members; Tom Read, negotiator for 20,000 members of the seven shop trades; and W. P. Kelly, Canadian vice-president of the 20,000-member Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Despite prompting from reporters, none of the four men would state in simple terms that the strike was ended. Instead, each insisted that he was complying with the law.

INFORM UNION LOCALS

W. J. Smith said his staff was making telephone calls to CBRT regional offices to issue an "obey the law" resolution to all locals.

R. C. Smith said he was preparing a letter to be mailed to the members. It would not be mailed until early today.

Mr. Kelly said his strike-ending letter would not be written until this morning, "when our office is open."

Mr. Read said his letters would go out as soon as possible.

Under questioning, Mr. Kelly insisted that the reference to letters was not just a gimmick. It was part of the union's constitution. Strikes were called in that fashion and ended that way.

However, all four leaders agreed that most of their members were likely to know about the strike-ending decision on radio and television.

Would the men go back to work?

"You'll know in a day or two," said W. J. Smith.

CALLS IT 'REPUGNANT'

In a notice to regional offices, in the form of a resolution from the committee, calls the legislation "repugnant" and says the strike-ending call is issued with "resentment and reluctance."

Paul Raymond, one of Mr. Read's negotiation group, said the men had been in advance warned of the Montreal decision by his group to stage a protest on Parliament Hill. But he told the press conference that he had checked on early reports that such a demonstration and was told it had been organized.

He said no details of the protest were available.

Each of the four leaders said bluntly that they were unhappy with the legislation, providing an interim 18 - per - cent wage boost over two years. The bill left the issue of pattern-back to the bargaining table under the threat of compulsory arbitration if the talks haven't made progress by Nov. 15.

But R. C. Smith said there was a "brighter side" to the bill.

"At least our contract still is open, subject to what we can work out in mediation or arbitration."

Earlier Thursday night, the two railway presidents voiced complaints of their own about the bill.

Donald Gordon of the CNR and Ian Sinclair of the CPR said it didn't provide the railways with any money to pay the 1966 wage costs that had been established as a floor for negotiation.

Price of Cigarets Up

As if the increases in food prices were not enough, the two-cent hike in a packet of cigarets drives another nail in the already brittle budgets of the consumer public.

The Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada Ltd. explains the increase stems from a decline of almost 11 per cent in net income, despite an increase of nearly three per cent in sales. It reports a net income of $5,806,000 for the first half of 1966, compared with $6,511,000 in the first six months of 1965, and attributes the decline in profit mainly to higher costs of leaf tobacco, increased wages, and higher cost of supplies.

At first a hike of one cent was mentioned, but somehow, when it comes to the bit, when a fellow enters the store and asks for his favorite brand it is found to cost not one, but two cents, more than before.

Give up smoking? Well, that is one solution, but it is not one to which smokers take kindly, even allowing for the numerous warnings that have been sounded over the years on the subject of cancer. Smoking in moderation is a pleasurable habit, so it is likely the number of people who elect to give it up will be minimal.

Picture of the Earth

The earth as viewed from the moon looks rather like the moon as viewed from the earth, believe it or not.

No one of course has ever seen the earth in its entirety with his own eyes. Relatively small areas of the planet may be seen from the air, and even larger regions by spacemen orbiting in outer space. Astronauts can also observe the curvature of the earth.

But now, for the first time, the entire planet on which we live has been photographed by the United States' Lunar Orbiter space vehicle. The satellite's cameras captured the earth's surface half in sunlight and half in the black shadow of night.

The picture is also remarkable for the fact it shows a portion of the moon's surface, affording an interesting view of the planets' relative positions across 93 million miles of space.

Cloud cover on the earth obscures details, but Antarctica is at the bottom of the picture, the coast of South America on the east, the U.S. southern coast at upper left and southern Europe at the top near the dark (night) side.

It is all very humbling. As someone has said: "A sense of our own insignificance in the cosmic scheme of things is not a bad thing to carry around with us."

Mayor Reid's Mishap

The advice from family, friends and associates, when minor problems or ailments strike, is often the stock one that they "are sent to try us."

And what a trial "they," or "these things," can be, particularly if you are a busy executive who needs all his faculties about him. Like Mayor Reid of Ottawa, for example.

Mr. Reid is sporting a patch over his left eye after injuring it while pruning an apple tree at his Osgoode farm home. A branch fell, struck the branch he was pruning, got the eyeball. Doctors said it will take about two months for the eye to heal.

For the mayor, the injury is irritating in more ways than one. If it has anything like the same effect as conjunctivitis (inflammation of the eyeball) we know just how it feels. It is painful, makes a fellow feel "run down" generally, and adds to the problems and tensions of the daily round.

Setting the Fashion

For some time now young Britons have been setting the fashion pace — so much so that even traditionally sedate magazines like Coming Events in Britain (the journal of the British Travel Association) are getting "with it."

A recent feature in the magazine was devoted to the visual delights of Carnaby Street, birthplace of the fashion revolution, and the cover picture of the current September issue has forsaken the customary outdoor landscape for "scenery of a different kind — a group of colorfully-attired teenagers dancing the frug (or is it the watusi?) at the Tiles jazz club in London.

"Visitors to London who want to go dancing," says the caption, "will find that the city abounds in dance-halls, discotheques, restaurants, ballrooms, night clubs and jazz clubs."

"Kings of Pop" is the succinct title of an article on the Beatles and the Rolling Stones. Having made a salutary bow in this direction, the magazine deals with more characteristic fare under such titles as September in the Highlands, and Worcester — A Singing City.

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sept. 2, 1866 . . .

A bakery in Pudding Lane, London, caught fire 300 years ago today—in 1666 —and within hours much of the city was aflame. The Great Fire of London burned for five days, destroying 400 streets and public buildings such as St. Paul's Cathedral and the Guildhall, over 13,000 acres. Some 200,000 people were made homeless although few lost their lives. The several grand plans for rebuilding the city were never implemented but the new houses and streets were much more sanitary than those ravaged by plague only the year before.

1864—Gen. Sherman's Union army occupied Atlanta.

1916 — The Adamson Act brought U.S. railways under partial government control.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1916 — Allied governments demanded control of communications in Greece and the deportation of Central Powers agents and officials; Russian and Romanian armies pushed an Austrian force back across the River Cerna.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1941—10 RAF and two German aircraft were shot down as the RAF made day and night attacks on France, Channel shipping and the Ruhr; Germans on the Russian front were within 20 miles of Leningrad; Morris Wilson of the Royal Bank of Canada became chairman of the British Supply Council.

The Choice For Quebec

Windsor Star

Power to most men in democratic life brings a sense of responsibility. It is interesting therefore to note a remark by Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec. He said, in event of separatism, there would be a sizeable exodus from Quebec.

He wasn't speaking of English-speaking citizens, most of whom might opt to leave Quebec for Canada. He specified French-Canadians. This observation may startle those who think all French-Canadians want to live in a ghetto of their own creation, but it need not.

Many French-speaking citizens of Quebec would go, as many have in the past, to where greater opportunities are. That is why there are about 1,000,000 of Quebec origin now in the New England states to say nothing of those in other parts of Canada.

A separate Quebec would be limited in economic and other potentials. It could become another Latin republic, cut off from the mainstream of progress. Of course many French-Canadians would not want to remain in a society which, in relative sense to the rest of the continent, would be in stagnation.

Strictly Personal
Luck, Destiny And All That

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Why does almost everyone feel that "it's just my luck" to have something go wrong? Just everyone complains that he never wins a prize in a lottery, everyone secretly seems to believe that good luck is reserved for others.

I thought of this odd and prevalent trait while boarding a plane for Iowa the other evening. I had put some quarters in the airplane insurance machine, which was out of order — and I had no time either to get my money back or find change to use in another machine.

As I sat down in the plane, I thought what most people would think under the same circumstances: "Just my luck — buy insurance for the family on every flight — and this is probably the one that will crash!".

It is always somebody else who has the winning raffle ticket, whose seat hits 9-11, whose distant cousin in Australia dies and leaves enough to lift the mortgage on the trembling homestead. It is never you or I, but always plump Mrs. X, smiling jollily on the back page of the newspaper.

And then it occurred to me that possibly this is the way in which people discharge some of their feelings of guilt.

All of us feel unworthy in one respect or another: We know we have not done what we should have done, have not become what we could become, have not lived up to our public professions or our private standards.

There is, I am sure, a need to be punished for our sins of commission and omission. There is a certain relish in being able to say, faced with potential disaster, "It serves me right," as if we are clearing the slate with God. There is, almost, a sense of relief that a punishment has finally come.

I cannot remember having met a person who really believed he was "lucky," except in a specific, incidental way. The flat tire on the deserted highway happens to you; it is only that distasteful Mr. Gloom who gets a flat just as he drives smoothly into a gas station.—

Well, I sat down by the plane I knew that I had been meaning to call my insurance agent for weeks to expand my meagre coverage, and in a certain drastic sense it would have served me right if the plane had crashed. "Just my luck" means that destiny has finally found me out for the miserable sinner I am.

Living Costs: A Housewife's Plea

Letter to Windsor Star

I guess you could say this letter is being written under great strain and pressure, for I'm not feeling too well today.

I'm getting $151.60 for mothers' allowance for myself and my two boys 7 and 8 years old. As you well know, everything has gone up by a great deal, basic things like bread and milk and the many things required to meet the needs of a growing family.

After rent there is $90 left; out of this I am expected to provide haircuts ($2.50 for two) pay for necessary utilities and keep myself and my two boys in shoes, etc. I'm tired and very worried all the time.

It is ridiculous to expect a mother to provide drugs, groceries and clothes out of her month's mothers' allowance.

I don't think I can go on any longer and I'm willing to have someone take over her and daughter. Maybe a computer has the answer now to live on that small amount, not to mention repairs which I cannot do for myself.

I would like a good person to tell me what I can do without that. I have no winter coat and the children don't have clothes for school.

I am sending this letter to you and I hope you will not think I am out of line for spending a nickel for a stamp.

I have sent the children over to a neighbor's to eat because I don't have anything in the house.

You must understand: I haven't been to a movie or any other event that other people go to, for I am just not able to financially. I do not expect to either. All I'm asking for is a little for my boys so they can have everyone else in this town.

My husband was a war veteran of the Korean war and was overseas with the Black Watch. I am asking for help.

As I said, this letter was written under great stress and I hope there is no offence in it.

Please tell me what to do. Answer soon.

Blue Blossom in Summer

Ottawa Journal

The chicory's blue blossoms are part of summer's glory. The tall, gangling plant is not so popular as goldenrod or Black-eyed Susan; but the blue necklaces along the roadsides and railway lines add accent to the countryside when summer is wearing on. It is a rugged, everyday sort of flower and thrives in poor soil.

Blue sailor is a fitting folklore name, for this is one of the plants that came across the seas when wooden ships carried their cargoes.

Chicory roots have been used as a substitute for coffee both in this country and in Europe. There are those who think that chicory adds a desirable tang when mixed with coffee.

The countryman approves the flower's habit of opening its blossoms around five o'clock in the morning. This sets a good example for all of us. It begins to close its eyes before noon.

The blue sailor is not an article flower and its pleasant color in late summer is part of the deepening hues of the landscape. It blends well with goldenrod, and the purple of thistles. It is a comfortable part of flower that helps bring beauty to the thin-soiled spots. And somehow, a man feels that the familiar, everyday things of life are the anchors that help give stability in an uncertain world.

Northern Province?

Brantford Expositor

Ontario has its own secession-ist group. A number of northern mayors and reeves are making a study of the feasibility of their municipalities breaking away from the control of Queen's Park to form their own province.

There is not likely to be much popular support for this independence movement. Few are rather than more provincial would seem desirable in a country of have and have-not regions. Ottawa, which would have a constitutional say in the matter, would scarcely relish the thought of adding to its problems. Another premier at the federal-provincial conference table is an inviting prospect for a federal government now with enough headaches trying to split the national pie ten ways.

Letter to the Editor
Evolution of Health Unit

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I was especially interested in your column "Looking Backwards" of 20 Years Ago, May 15, 1946.

"There is more than a strong possibility that Hastings County will have an accredited particular Government — subsidized Health Unit in operation by early 1947. This was indicated at a special meeting of representatives of Hastings County Council, the City Council, the town of Trenton, the Board of Education, the V.O.N. and other organizations held in the City Hall Friday night, where Dr. R. G. Struthers of Ontario Department of Health explained the procedure leading to the formation of a Health Unit.

"The Provincial Department of Health would pay half the cost if Hastings County adopts the proposed health unit public health."

Dr. R. G. Struthers has been retired for many years, and here, 20 years later, we are to have a "Health Unit" as of Sept. 1, 1966.

I wish to offer my congratulations to the members of Hastings County Council and members of the Belleville City Council that they have seen fit to co-operate on this important venture.

After the above - mentioned meeting when Dr. Struthers had hopes a unit would be in operation by early 1947, no action was taken and it seemed it was tabled or filed away for safe keeping.

But our Home and School Association at Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School had not forgotten, and in 1948 a Health Committee was appointed with Dr. Struthers as guest to look into the possibility of a formation of a County Health Unit. Dr. Struthers was the speaker addressed an open meeting at the Collegiate to bring further information to our members and the public in general.

Our committee was to appear before County Council at next session with a request for the formation of a health unit, but nothing ever came of it.

To better inform our newcomers to the city on the situation at this time: Belleville has one Collegiate and five public schools, under one board — the Board of Education. The board employed a public health nurse for the public schools only. She has a very efficient and busy nurse. At this time two new schools were in the planning stages.

There was one separate school, St. Michael's Academy and St. Michael's High School, and their board bought their health nurses from the Victorian Order of Nurses and the city employed a Medical Officer of Health on a part-time basis.

We realized that our school population was growing and so should our health services.

Health units were not new by any means; over two - thirds of the counties of our province then had units — but failing to arouse interest at the county level, we decided our next move was to concentrate on our own city, and see if a department of health could be formed.

The first official committee from BCIVS joined forces with all the public school Home and School Associations in the city, and from Parent Teachers Association from St. Michael's Academy.

We approached city council in 1949 asking for the formation of a Health Department, and received a courteous reception although not having the action. We were not easily discouraged and rather persistent we returned to city council in 1950 just before the election for our 1951 council.

The mayor and council decided if we were to have a "Health Department it must be brought about by the electors as a money by-law."

Our home and school associations and parent teachers associations collected some funds to buy some space in your paper to better inform the public as to the needs of such a department and what they would be getting.

Mr. Wm. Argue, Q.C., alderman at this time, gave freely of his time and spoke at Home and School Association meetings and public meetings on our behalf.

Dr. R. T. Potter, alderman in 1951, gave our committee a plenty of moral and loyal support.

In 1951, the Belleville Department of Health was formed. The by-law carried with a good majority.

In closing I might say that much credit is due the many years by interested Home and School members, we are now having our "Health Unit." Better late than never, and we did have an efficient Health Department in the city for the past 15 years, due to our efforts.

To Your Good Health
Dropsy Only Symptom And Cause Can Vary

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please write about dropsy. Is it hereditary and can a person who has ill-expect to live a normal life? How long does it last? — Mrs. E. G.

The term edema is being used more often today than a few years ago. Dropsy is the same thing — accumulation of fluids in tissues of the body. As you probably know, a body is made up in large part of water. Blood for example is a complex variety of cells and chemicals in it. Water is constantly in the process of being collect and then discharge in purities. Water keeps food in a fluid state as it passes through the digestive tract. And so on.

When too much fluid accumulates in some part of the body that is dropsy or edema. There are many causes — heart disease, liver or kidney disease, accumulation of fluid in the brain and a lot of others.

If the heart cannot circulation of the blood is not as brisk as it should be. Fluid tends to settle sluggishly somewhere often in the legs and ankles. Or the kidneys may not work because other than a heart ailment, may, of course, do the same thing.

Edema of the abdomen is quite common with cirrhosis of the liver. Blood vessel conditions may cause fluid to accumulate there. And all these are merely examples. There are many more.

Thus you can see that I cannot answer your question specifically without knowing what is causing the dropsy in your particular case. If the cause can be corrected, then the condition of edecia can be brought to an end. In other instances, it may be necessary to accept dropsy as a chronic condition, and your goal is to keep it under control.

One example is the pati ent with heart trouble who is put on a low-salt diet. Salt (the sodium in it) has an affinity for water, therefore if you have a heart ailment you may be told to cut down on salt. Or you may be given drugs to release water from the body, also are used. But as you can see, each case must be judged by itself.

Is dropsy hereditary? No.

Can you live a normal life? Yes, if the underlying cause can be suitably controlled, the answer is yes. But you must have your doctor find out what is causing the trouble before any logical and effective treatment can be instituted.

Dear Dr. Molner: You advised long-lasting penicillin to help rheumatic fever. I have had arthritis and it did not help me since arthritis and rheumatic fever work along the same line. — Mrs. M. A.

No, because while rheumatic fever can inflame joints, it is not the same as arthritis infection. The cause of arthritis is not known, and penicillin won't help.

The purpose of penicillin for rheumatic fever isn't primarily to prevent joint pain, but recurrent attacks which damage the heart, the big peril in rheumatic fever.

No, and it's much better to play safe and be sure she is immunized.

Note to Mrs. J. G.: Vitamins will have no effect in curbing nearsightedness.

Hope to Provide Answers For Crashing of Airliner

By BORIS BOSKOVIC

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia (AP)—A tape recording, a pile of twisted wreckage and the horror-filled memories of 22 survivors lay like an unworked puzzle today before investigators seeking the cause of the British airliner crash that killed 95 persons near here.

Yugoslav and British experts found no immediate explanation of why the four-engined turboprop, a Britannia 102, came in far too low for a landing 25 minutes ahead of schedule and then plummeted into a wood early Thursday.

After what seemed like a routine approach on a night flight from London, the Britannia Airways Ltd. turboprop plane crashed and burned two miles from Brnik Airport. It was carrying 150 Britons on a low-budget holiday to Yugoslavia and a crew of seven. Eighty persons, including the two pilots, were killed outright. Fifteen others died in hospitals or en route.

Britannia Airways is part of the subsidiary operations owned by Lord Thomson, Canadian-born publisher. A Thomson spokesman said the airline was expanded to carry passengers for two tourist companies also owned by the Thomson organization.

The company transported 100,000 persons on overseas holidays in 1965. Two months ago it ordered three Boeing 707 jets as a start of a replacement program for the Britannias.

ARE CRITICAL

Two girls among the 22 persons taken to hospital remained in critical condition.

The tape recording registered at the airport the conversations between the plane crew and the control tower. The Yugoslav civil aeronautics board said the piece of tape, plus a check of the airport's radio navigation instruments, showed that everything functioned normally on the ground.

The recording was sealed and put at the disposal of a Yugoslav investigation commission and several experts flown here by the airline.

British Power Minister Richard Marsh, who was vacationing in Yugoslavia and came to the scene immediately, expressed confidence investigators would find the cause of the crash soon. Yugoslavia's worst airline disaster.

Officials said Thursday that regular radio contact had been established with the pilot, who was quoted as saying "Everything is all right."

But they said suddenly the pilot shouted "Give us radar!" Then the aircraft crashed and burst into flames.

The Yugoslav board said that "for unknown reasons" the aircraft was flying at an altitude of 65 feet where it should have been 650 feet high.

The weather at the time—12:40 a.m.—was cloudy but the board said it was "above the minimum prescribed" for the airport.

The charred wreckage smouldered for hours. The nose of the plane was a mangled hulk. The tail and part of one wing were reasonably intact.

Authorities said that if the tail had not broken off at impact perhaps all aboard would have been killed. Some seated in the rear of the plane—of a model once called "The Whispering Giant"—were thrown by the impact through gaping holes in the burning craft. Others were able to jump down to the ground.

They were taken to several hospitals with burns and broken limbs.

The flight started less than three hours before from Luton Airport north of London as a summer vacation to Yugoslavia's sunny Istrian coast, the first leg in an economy period 12-day tour.

Cheese Producers in Hastings Lose Half Million as Virus Harms Cheese-Making Cultures

Ontario government dairy officials in the Bay of Quinte district are confident that the bacteria-killing virus which has cost Hastings county cheese producers an estimated half million dollars can be controlled.

Mr. E. W. Henderson, provincial dairy fieldman for this area, says they know what is causing the trouble and also how to control it.

"It's a matter of strict sanitation of the cheese factories and rotation of cheese cultures," Mr. Henderson said.

Mr. Henderson said the virus affecting cheese grades was known as bacteriophage. The virus attacks the cultures that produce the cheese, the result being that in some cases the cheese will not cure or its flavor is spoiled.

He said the virus was harmless to human beings.

Initial reports were that the virus had been detected in the Bay of Quinte area for only one or two weeks, but Mr. Henderson said that it actually had been noticed off and on for at least six months.

In fact an isolated instance of the virus was spotted at one county factory about four years ago.

WORLD-WIDE PROBLEM

Mr. Henderson said the incidence of bacteriophage is world-wide but in other countries they have "learned to live with it."

Although grades are lowered when affected by the virus, the dairy fieldman said a high percentage of the affected cheese could still be processed. In extreme cases, however, the cheese was unsuitable for processing and was almost a complete loss.

In multiple vat cheese factories one vat and not others could be affected.

The answer, according to Mr. Henderson seemed to be strict attention to every detail of sanitation and the use of several types of cultures.

"Everything at the factory has to be washed thoroughly, rinsed with scalding water and then sprayed with a chlorine mixture," Mr. Henderson said.

He said the trouble appeared to be at the cheese factories and not on the farms.

The Ontario government was said to be doing everything possible to control the virus, with officials working round the clock on the problem.

ORDER NEW CULTURE

A new type culture which is immune to the virus has been ordered from Wisconsin but due to the rail strike has still not been received. Also equipment for the different handling of cultures has been ordered from England and will be checked out at the dairy at Kemptville.

Enginemen Not Receiving Strike Pay

Local members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen today disputed a statement under a Montreal dateline appearing in yesterday's edition of The Intelligencer which said members of the union had been receiving strike pay from their unions.

Reference to the union members receiving strike pay was in a paragraph in a front page story referring to railway workers receiving pays for work they did in August prior to the strike.

Robert Dail, local chairman of the B. of L.F.E. said that members of his union "are not actually engaged in the strike and therefore under the provisions of their constitution are not entitled to strike pay."

$25,000 Horse Show Jumper Dies in Fire

HULL, Que. (CP) — Two horses, one a $25,000 show jumper, died Thursday when barn went up in flames near the T. G. Mayberry farm just west of here.

The jumper, Obsidian, was owned by Don Davidson of nearby Lucerne, Que., and Barbara Kimmell of Shawbridge, Ont. Obsidian had ridden at three shows this year including one at Kingston.

Cause of the $100,000 fire on the show-place farm was believed to be spontaneous combustion in 5,000 bales of stored hay.

Recreate Cambodian History for de Gaulle In Glittering Pageant

SIEM REAP, Cambodia (AP) — Cambodian history dating back over 2,000 years was recreated Thursday night for President de Gaulle of France in a dazzling pageant before the majestic temple of Angkor Wat.

De Gaulle, with Prince Norodom Sihanouk at his side, viewed a two-hour sort of history (sound of light) spectacle of the brilliant era of Khmer (Cambodian) history when god-kings ruled the land.

Angkor Wat (angkor temple) was erected by King Suryavarman, who ruled from 1113 to 1150 and whose domain extended from the China Sea to the Indian Ocean. Completed in 1443, the temple reverted to the jungle until the French discovered it in the 19th century and cleared it.

The temple, surmounted by five huge conical towers, dominates this city 186 miles north of Phnom Penh.

The extraordinary night's pageant, arranged specially for de Gaulle, floodlights supplemented a pale moon, the temple's history was read over a loudspeaker system in several thousand persons, some of whom came miles on foot and on bicycles.

In the background, hundreds of frogs croaked and Cambodian musicians played slow tunes on stringed instruments and gongs.

The pageant began with The King, garbed in scarlet and gold, strolling out of the temple door under a huge scarlet parasol.

DANCERS FOLLOW

He was followed by gold-clad dancers. Five hundred Buddhist monks in bright orange robes sat along the columned face of the temple. The symbolic king sat on a throne.

Then, with four lumbering elephants in the lead, a half-hour procession depicting a coronation ceremony paraded in front of de Gaulle.

In the line of march were soldiers, their flashing swords held upwright; dancing girls, some of them wearing three - foot plumed hats; members of the fire brigade carrying a red, yellow, and red costumes, and finally five more huge elephants with baby elephants.

The pageant ended with the monks chanting a prayer of good wishes.

De Gaulle returned to Phnom Penh today to receive the French colony, give a lunch for Prince Sihanouk and then hold a final round of political talks before boarding his plane for New Caledonia.

Successful Living
Wanted to Disappear After Husband Died

DEAR DORIS — After my invalid husband died I kept on working but my doctor urged a holiday as I was heading for a nervous breakdown. I accepted a friend's invitation to drive with him to a distant city, secretly deciding that his would be a good chance to get many miles away and just disappear.

I had lost all interest in life. For so many years my life had consisted of caring for my beloved husband, going to work, coming home to run the house and look after the children, get some sleep and back to work again. I forgot there were other things in the world to do and enjoy.

DORIS CLARE

My friends discovered my intentions and talked me out of it. Now that a year has passed I believe I was temporarily insane. What do you think? — BETTER NOW.

DEAR BETTER NOW — That death can do that to people: shake them to the core, so that for a while, maybe many months, they can't think straight. With time, and the help of loving friends there comes convalescence as from a mental illness.

DEAR DORIS — My daughter is at the age where she would like to know more about life than doing the twist. Would you be able to tell me where I could get some basic steps, showing exactly how to do them? — A MOM.

DEAR MOM — Now that's what I like to hear! If more Moms would help more teens learn dance steps we'd have fewer couples resorting to petting for something interesting to do.

The young people with social skills get the pick of the crop when it comes to mating.

Your music store and book store can supply records, books and instructions. I'm sending you details. Dance around your own livingroom floor, with her and get her pals to stumble around too.

How about a dance-step party, with prizes for the best learners?

DEAR DORIS — How would you suggest that I show a little affection when the girl I am taking out doesn't believe in necking or kissing until after marriage? — FARM BOY.

DEAR FARMER — Hold her hand. Hold doors open for her; pull out her chair at table. Send her a Valentine, a birthday car, a "Thinking of You" card. Take her candy. Make her feel she is precious to you.

And be glad she feels precious to herself.

Plan Ahead To Ease Tensions

Some million mothers this Fall will suffer the headaches (and heartaches) involved in helping their children begin school careers.

Going out into a vast unknown world without mother's presence for protection, can be a trying experience for a child. And it's no less a strain on mother, what with the bustle of getting the little one prepared emotionally and in other ways.

There is also the worry, usually unexpressed, of how the child will do in school, and how he will get along with the teacher and other children. A mother may be unaware of her own tensions during this period. She should try not to transmit her own anxieties to the child, but express confidence in his ability to handle a new and wonderful adventure.

Of course, this is sometimes difficult to do if you're suffering from inner tension and an excruciating headache . . . both likely to happen during the first few days. Medical researchers tell us that the motat - often suffered headache is the vascular type, which is triggered by tensed muscles in the neck, shoulders and upper back result i n g from anxiety, fatigue and nervous strain.

What actually causes a vascular headache is a flooding of the vessels in the head with excess blood, which press against extra sensitive nerves. To relieve this type of headache, two things must be done: the pain must be relieved and the pressure within the blood vessels reduced. Periodic rest and a calm attitude will help.

Podiatrist Footnotes For Happy, Healthy Feet

By Reba and Bonnie Churchill.

Soaring temperatures, sizzling sidewalks and toe-cramping shoes can't be walked away from. If your feet have been overworked, overheated, overlooked, here are some "footnotes" from a group of podiatrists. In addition to regular visits to a specialist, they recommend exercising feet several times a day. As actress Peggy Ann Neilsen illustrates, flex toes, dig them into the ground, and elevate them for a change of circulation and to reduce swelling.

Since feet expand as much as one full size during hot weather, ease those aching underpinnings in a relaxing bath. One home remedy, suggested by the panel, is soaking feet in a solution of household borax and warm water. The latter should not be more than three or four degrees hicher than body temperature. Relax 15 minutes, then dry with a soft towel.

If skin has a tendency to be dry, avoid abrasive rubbing. Also, do not pull toes too far apart, for this may cause cracks; instead, use cotton between toes. To smooth rough skin, the experts advise applying a thin veil of petroleum jelly to the entire foot and ankle. Employ a circular motion, paying special attention to sandal burn areas — across toes and back of heels.

Ann Landers

Detergents, Not Pill, Cause Brassiere Boom

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I just read in the paper that the brassiere manufacturers from coast to coast claim their business is booming because of the birth control pill. They say thousands of women have had to go out and buy new undergarments because their dimensions have gotten larger.

Who are these people trying to kid anyway? I used to wear a size 36B and now I have to buy 38C. I am not taking birth control pills so that can't be the reason I need a larger brassiere. It's because the automatic washing machines and harsh detergents are shrinking the fabrics.

I know this is true because I weigh myself every three days' and according to my scales I have not gained an ounce. Also I am not blind. If I were getting larger any place I would surely notice it.

So please print my letter and put the facts before the public. Some these foolish young girls of the truth so they won't start taking those pills just because they think it will give them bigger measurements. Thank you. — MRS. STRAIGHT FACTS.

DEAR MRS. STRAIGHT — My medical consultants tell me that in some instances the pill actually does increase measurements, but their increase is usually temporary and not so widespread that it could create a boom in the brassiere industry.

Very hot water in your machine could be responsible for some of the shrinkage too. Cool it, Lady.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our middle son (aged 17) showed me your column in which you lambasted parents for being super-critical of children. Your words were "Parents who set impossibly high standards can make children tense and insecure and finally so defeated they will do anything for fear of failure."

Our middle son is disrespectful, lazy, unco-operative and an inveterate liar. How can parents praise poor grades, unfinished projects, and dishonesty? He says his older brother gets all the breaks and priveleges. And he's right. But his older brother has earned all the breaks and priveleges by being co-operative and trust-worthy.

What advice do you have for parents in this impossible position? — WORRIED.

DEAR WORRIED — The child who is least lovable is the one who needs love the most. And extending love to that child requires enormous compassion and patience.

You sound like your middle son obviously have a very poor relationship dating way back. It will take the help of a seasoned counselor to establish some lines of communication. Don't hesitate to get the help you need. I hope it's not too late.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am 12 years old and my mother doesn't trust me. She thinks that whenever I go to visit my married sister something not very nice goes on with me and my sister's husband.

I don't know why she thinks this unless it is because I used to make up a lot of crazy things and write them in my diary. None of those things is true. How can I prove to my mother that I am a nice person? — MISS UNDERSTOOD.

DEAR MISS — The best way to prove to your mother that you are a nice person is to behave like one. And stop lying in your diary, too.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Reader's Friday Column

Bland Foods Recommended

QUESTION:

. . . mother says your menus are of little use to her and some of her friends because of the variety of things they have wrong with their digestive systems . . . mother has diverticulitis and has to avoid roughage . . . one friend has colitis, another stomach hiatus and all have to be careful of what they eat. This might apply to many in the 70's and 80's (in your audience). Maybe one of your doctor friends could advise whether these conditions lend themselves to special foods and menus . . . P.M.P.

ANSWER:

(In two instalment — First Instalment today. Second Instalment tomorrow.) I consulted a doctor relative and I quote him: "Just like our skin the intestinal tract is subject to many irritations, most of which are mild, but like the skin, if subject to friction will become uncomfortable and the wear will cause breakdown.

"The whole intestinal tract becomes touchy with age. Hiatus hernia (in stomach) means part of the stomach gets pinched by the diaphragm causing some stomach contents to be pushed back up the gullet and because the gullet is not used to having the stomach's noxious acids in it it is irritated — what everybody calls heartburn. People with this benign but inconvenient problem should eat bland foods . . . least likely to stimulate the stomach. Stimulation makes the stomach contract and churn and secrete acid. Diverticulosis means pouches in the intestine. Diverticulitis means those pouches are inflamed. Colitis means the whole colon wall, without there being any pouches, is inflamed.

"For all of these conditions, a bland, low residue or low roughage diet should be taken. Just as if you had eczema of the skin, wearing a coarse wool sweater would cause irritation, itching, rubbing, scratching, perhaps bleeding. In the same way, for any of these intestinal conditions, food should be taken which will do the least scratching.

"Scratching will be caused by roughage, but to a lesser extent, by volumes, so that usually bland foods should be taken oftener, in smaller amounts.

"In sum, for nearly all conditions of the gut (stomach and bowel) except constipation, in other words, for oesphogitis, (gullet), gastritis (stomach), ulcers, duodenitis, ileitis, colitis, diverticulosis and diverticulitis, all these conditions require a diet that will neither scratch, nor stretch — therefore low on roughage, low on volume."

Please see tomorrow for Second Instalment of answer to P.M.P. re low residue diet. I will give a list of low residue foods usually allowed on the bland diet tomorrow.

Baked Stuffed Fish Fillets (see Tuesday); Lemon Wedges; Baked Potato Slices; Creamed Zucchini; Cubbage, Celery and Green Pepper Salad with Dill Dressing; Chilled Compote of Plums; Tea.

Keep Menus Appetizing

Mothers, if you're getting reports from school that your youngster isn't eating your home-packed lunch the way he or she should, better search your conscience. When meals are "picked - at" at home, too, you can chalk it up to poor eating habits and initiate firmer discipline at that time. But if breakfast and dinner are crowned with relish, then look to other possible causes for having a nose up at your lunch.

First, it may be that, you're in a rut . . . providing the same old fare day after day. Vary the coup you put in the vacuum bottle: the bread you use for sandwiches; vary the filling and cut such as finger-, bite-sized squared and triangles.

Pilofilm bags are made to order for lunch boxes, for packages of any kind spell "surprise". Use one for carrots, cut the bread into different shapes into easily eaten slivers; for celery, similarly sliced; a wedge of lettuce; or a couple of sprigs parsley. Pack another bag with a handful of raisins or apricots . . . ideal, should thrill of munchie - food to mungh on between mouthfuls of apple, banana, cookies or whatever novel you provide for the final course.

A second possible cause for lack mid-day appetite is state of lunch box. Because it's closed up tight so much of the time, the interior and all its trappings tend to harbor odors.

Get into habit of opening the lunch box as soon as it reaches home. Let the box air out and wash the vacuum bottle and plastic containers used for salad or puddings with a baking soda solution.

Susanna's Family Fair

ZZZZTING

To all brave souls: If a wasps' or hornets' nest close to your house or cottage is suddenly making your life miserable, you can eliminate the adult colony with a push button tin of household insecticide.

But watch your timing!

Try to do it at night when the inmates are all at home and everyone in there is settled down.

You'll have a much better chance of not getting stung . . . So says the Department of Agriculture! — SUSANNA

Dear Susanna: I wonder if your readers put the date on meats and vegetables to be put into the freezer.

How often in the past I have discarded a package of meat because I had no idea how old it was and I was just a little afraid to try it.

No more. I use a marker pen and the date goes on all packages for my freezer along with the list of contents. — Mrs Beverley Beavis.

Basset's Garage Found Afire

PICTON (Staff) — Picton firemen under the leadership of Chief Duane Foohey are becoming an adept at fighting fires as it would not be surprising to find them turning up in tuxedos.

Answering an alarm at 12.01 this morning the Chief and his men quickly extinguished a fire at Basset's Garage, 3 York Street, Picton. The blaze, which evidently started on the outside was confined and kept from getting into the interior of the building. The large frame structure contained a motor equipment and one car which fire-men removed.

This is five number 13 in a long series of recent fires which have kept both firemen and police busy. Earlier part of this morning's fire was located in the same general area where a car fire was also covered. The Basset garage sits in behind the offices and buildings of Cole and Basset, Farm Implements.

The alarm was turned in by Murray Clapp of Quinte Airways who was driving home down the army camp hill from the airport when he saw the flames.

The Picton Fire Department did not use the town siren for this fire and the alarm was relatively free of spectators. It will be the practice now to keep the siren silent unless all volunteer and firemen (as they have been) will be called by telephone. All firemen have a direct hook up with the firehall. The fire was apparently started by children playing with matches in a similar manner to which others had been started. Investigation two men were arrested and charged with arson. Both have been sent to Ontario Training School at Brockville pending the two men responsible for many of the fires. It is expected they will not be long in their investigations with this one.

Societies Will Hold Meeting During Fair

PICTON (Staff) — More than 100 members of the Horticultural Societies in District 3 will meet in Picton this year for their annual meeting, which will take place on Saturday, Sept. 24. This will be in conjunction with the final day of the county fair at Picton.

Societies represented will be from Brockville, Gananoque, Kingston, Napanee, Prince Edward, Belleville, Stirling with Brighton as special guests. Representatives from the 'Agricultural and Horticultural Societies Branch, Ont. Department of Agriculture, Toronto and Provincial officers of the Association will attend.

First Class Mail Coming In On Time

PICTON (Staff) — In spite of the rail strike the mail is coming through in Picton — by truck. Mail that is now being sorted in terminal offices in Belleville and Trenton instead of on the trains and delivered to various district distribution centres, which operate mail courriers or carriers. First class mail appears to be moving promptly with parcel post second and third class mail going to a province outside Ontario. This of course is causing pile-ups at Montreal (for overseas and elsewhere). Only Ontario parcel post is being delivered in Picton.

charged with violating parole that frees the men and bars them from the area for a 10-year penitentiary term for two longtime bank robberies in Toronto.

Also at large are:

Barry Kaye Duke, 21, acquitted of a charge of non - capital murder on grounds of insanity but being held at the pleasure of the lieutenant-governor;

Joseph Wilson, 26, in custody during preliminary hearing on a rape charge;

Larry Dean Lee, 24, serving time for robbery and manslaughter;

Edwin Martin Funk, 21, false pretenses;

George Wayne Leclerc, 26, false pretenses and theft;

Donald Wayne Joseph Poole, 23, robbery.

Surrendering without resistance after the highway smashup near Portage, 30 miles west of Winnipeg, were Leclerc, Hathway, 25, facing a rape charge; Archibald Deanas, 23, serving time for robbery and Riley Earl Nelson, 17, awaiting appeal on a capital murder conviction.

All except Leclerc, a Montrealer, were from Winnipeg district.

SEARCH FOR ESCAPEES

The entire 450-man RCMP Manitoba division, municipal police departments were mobilized in the manhunt.

An RCMP veteran of 23 years in Manitoba said he believed it was the biggest prison break in the province's history. Seven fled Headingley in 1957 but all were recaptured when their fleeing car crashed into a pole.

Headingley jail is about 10 miles west of Winnipeg, on the north bank of the Assiniboine River and just south of the Trans - Canada Highway.

It is a correctional institution for short - term offenders but also houses prisoners awaiting trial, appeal or penitentiary transfer on more serious charges. There were 346 inmates at the time of the breakout.

Supt. Littlewood, at home at the time, said questioning of his officers indicated the "shortcoming well - planned" break went like this:

One of the 10 called a guard to his cell about 7:15 p.m. in bread daylight, grabbed him at knifepoint, bound him and took his keys.

FREED THE OTHERS

He freed the others and they made their way to the guard office at the main gate, slugging the officer on duty and using his keys to open the arms vault.

From it they took three 303 service rifles, two .45 and three .22 revolvers and 800 rounds of ammunition. After raiding the clothing stores they fled in a prison - owned station wagon and a sedan owned by a prison employee.

Fourteen guards were on duty in various parts of the institution some of whom know nothing of the escape. Once the arms locker was opened, the unarmed guards were helpless.

Meling Leishmann is a proficient pilot, police warned owners of private airplanes to keep them under security.

Leishman hit he-dlines in 1958 when he was known in Winnipeg as an enterprising and successful businessman.

Bloomfield Lowers Tax Rate by 5 Mills

PICTON (Staff) — The village of Bloomfield did the unusual Monday night. The mill rate, was lowered close to nine mills.

Rates are: farm and residential, 68.09 down 8.91 mills from last year, and commercial 54.71 down 7.99 from last year.

$43,285 of the villages total budget of $102,973 will be raised by the local levy. According to Charles Frazier, Village clerk, the county rate drop of five mills plus a surplus from 1965 accounts for most of the decrease.

The neighboring township of Hallowell which also recently passed its 1966 mill rates, the trend went up slightly. The township's general rate (less public and separate school levies) was 45.5 for farm and residential, up 42.6 from 1965. For commercial properties the general rate was 50.9 up from 47.2 from last year.

Big Parade To Open Fair

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County's second Fair is being readied for its 20th anniversary. This is Milford or South Marysburgh Fair which will be Wednesday, September 7th and will be opened at 10 a.m. part with a parade of horses, ponies, floats, decorated cars etc. The afternoon events will be followed up by the very popular evening show in the big shed on the fair grounds.

Actually this South Marysburgh Fair was held as far back as 1853 before the two Marysburgh townships were divided. All other county townships had their own fairs too in those days.

The afternoon events will include a Prince Edward Junior Horse Show, with barrel racing, pick-up contest and other events. There will be sports for all ages log sawing, 4-H calf competition, prize give-away, a township baby show and during the evening show Miss Centennial Princess will be chosen to compete at the Picton Fair for the Miss Centennial Queen title. A broadcast will also be conducted during the evening performances. All in all a colorful, small fair with lots of good entertainment for everyone.

FREDERICTON (CP) — The Anglican Church on Thursday made a grant of $10,000 for relief of victims of the recent severe earthquakes in eastern Turkey.

Sunday School Lesson
Man's Untamable Tongue

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

The most difficult thing in the world to control is the tongue. We can tame wild beasts says the Bible, but "no human beings can tame the tongue." (James 3:7-8 RSV) A person opens his mouth, and words creep out like little devils, and when he tries to recall them, they are scattered on the four winds.

Every person is a creative artist. He may not paint pictures, or play a musical instrument, but every day he creates something or another every fully increase. He creates goodwill or resentment, understanding or rancor, friendship or malice, by what he says. If a painter does not like his painting, he can destroy it. If a poet does not like his poem, he can throw it into the waste-basket. But once person has said something in the hearing of another, he can never completely call back his words.

The Uniform Sunday school lessons for September 4: "Serenity of Speech," Exodus 20:16; Leviticus 19: 15; Proverbs 15:4 and 18:21; Ephesians 4: 29, 31; James 1:26.

Of course, the tongue can only say what the mind tells it to say. Let's break the fifth command: "You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor." Exodus 20:16 RSV

Everybody talks. And everybody talks about other people. Most of what they say is complimentary and good. Often what they say is critical. Sometimes what they say is downright derogatory. When a person dies, his loved ones will often say, "He never said a unkind word about anyone." This is hard to believe. Even a saint is sometimes tempted to say something derogatory about another person.

In fact, gossip seems to be some people's favorite indoor sport. A cartoonist once pictured two women talking about a third woman who was not present. One said to the other, "Of course, I wouldn't say anything about her that is not good, and, oh boy, is this good!" Some people seem to take delight in criticizing others, or in passing on a derogatory rumor or bit of information. The likely thing is they are like "a madman who throws firebrands." (Prov. 26: 18-19 RSV)

Why do people do this? Is there a sadistic tendency in people that makes them want to hurt others? Often, gossip is dead give-away that a person is jealous of person he is criticizing.

Gossip is a sign of insecurity. People criticize others because by comparison, it makes them look better, or at least be their own eyes. They are really saying, "Of course, I am not like that." They try to build themselves up by tearing others down.

Essentially, gossip reveals a lack of love. Moffatt's translation of the words of Paul puts it clearly, "Love is never glad when others go wrong, love is gladdened when truth prevails, always slow to expose, always eager to believe the best." (I Cor. 13:6 J. Moffatt)

BACKBITING DANGEROUS

There is a world of difference between criticizing a person in his face, and talking about him behind his back. The first may sometimes be the hard one. The second is always dangerous. Someone has said, "It may be necessary to tell another he is not acting like a Christian, but if you get any pleasure out of telling him, you yourself are not a Christian.

The positive side of this problem is to speak the truth in love. (Ephesians 4:15) The truth may hurt, but sometimes it must be spoken. What is the unloly rumor that is not repeated will soon die out "For lack of wood," said a wise man long ago, "the fire goes out; and where there is no whispering, contention ceases." (Proverbs 26:20 RSV)

The tongue that fan do much damage, can also do tremendous good. It can express love, and give encouragement. It can speak a vital faith. Romans 10:9-10 If people were as quick to criticize themselves as they are others, a willing to give others the benefit of the doubt as they want others to give it to them if they were slow to believe a rumor until they have positive proof, and even then were unwilling to repeat it, how could become a heaven on earth.

This system is what health authorities in all parts of Canada have been waiting for: an inexpensive and efficient replacement for the septic tank. It uses the same aeration principle as many municipal treatment plants, occupies about the same ground area as a septic tank, but does a far better job without constant maintenance.

The unit is sold for $625. and it has been given initial acceptance by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for homes using N.H.A. loans, low-cost home improvement loans or for conventional loans. It's the end result of research initiated by CMHC.

P.E. County Farmers Meet With Minister

OTTAWA (CP) — Farmers from Ontario's Prince Edward County met Agriculture Minister Greene Thursday to ask for federal aid to offset crop losses caused by drought, but apparently came away with little hope of assistance.

Mr. Greene didn't specifically reject the farmers' requests.

But a statement from the agriculture department said he told the group that while the federal government has helped farmers in some crop disasters, they were major ones too difficult for the provinces to handle.

"On the other hand, for losses of a more limited nature, the responsibility was clearly with the province," the statement said.

The farmers said Prince Edward County had suffered greatly because of prolonged drought. Aid would be needed to maintain the area's agricultural output.

Pinch Hitting

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Let's win the Belleville and District Softball League an OASA championship.

On paper.

After remarking last week that I thought our teams were too thin in pitching to capture a Provincial championship this fall a fellow softball enthusiast hinted that I was degrading local players.

My friend remarked that there were plenty of softball players in the Belleville and District League with which to win a title.

I agree — but they are not all on one team.

So-o-o-o, here is what we will do.

We will pick a 15-man team from the league (I know it is illegal Cliff, but this is just on paper, remember) and enter it in the playdowns.

Hm-m-m. This won't be easy, since OASA teams are confined to 15 players and there are at least twice that many good ones in the league.

Well, here goes. A catcher we need. Larry Mavety is our current pick. Solid behind the plate and with the bat to boot.

Pitching. Well, it has to be a big guy that's likely about half as good as he could be if he really worked at it. Yep, the big lefty, Bob Ethier. Now for a right-hander to go with him. It's a tough choice to make but we'll take either of Picton's boys, Ken DeMille or Carl Stacey. I can only have one you say? O.K., DeMille it is.

My first baseman has to be Trudeau's Roger Drake but because of the dozen ways he can beat you, Keith MacDonald is going on the club as one of the six extras.

The Bobcats' big second-sacker, Lem Mowat, gets the nod there. Not the smoothest fielding second baseman maybe, but his bat is deadly and were he playing outfield this year he would have a spot on our club there.

It's back to Picton for the hot-corner man, Ron Weese, who led the loop in homers with six this year and has a glove and arm to match his bat.

Choosing between the 'Cats Terry LeSage and Trudeau's Pete Weston for shortstop is a toughie. Pete bit better so we'll start him and put Terry in one of those "extra" spots with MacDonald.

Still in the infield, our backup man for Mavety is the Juniors' Bobby Moon, because of his hunting, hitting and running ability.

Now for the outfield. What do you like, defence or offence?

We'll try for a mixture. We got five cards left in sign so they will go to combination players, some of which can pitch or play infield as well as outfield. Put down Rick Locke, Eldon Gray, Marve Stacey, Larry Griffin and Ralph Plante. Only three can start so make it Gray, Locke and Stacey.

It is a tough decision to leave men like Madoc's Brian Gray and Bill Hughes; Picton's Carl Stacey and Leo St. Denis; Bolcats Claire Leahy and Paul Zakos; Trudeau's Stu Muirhead and Pat Maracle (great for relief after Ethier's fast stuff and DeMille's superb drop, ha!) and Junior spectaliers like Carl Boomhower and Terry Wellsley, off the list.

So now we got the club. Will we go Senior "B" or Intermediate "A"? Let's go whole hog and take the Senior "B" route. After all we can't lose a thing, the club's only on paper.

Say, we just got a wonderful idea. Let's import Ray Judd to do the pitching and we'll take a shot at Senior "A". It doesn't cost a thing to dream, does it?

Well, if we can't do anything else with the club, perhaps we can get each one of the players a paper route and enter the squad in the Departmental League next spring. That should really give the Public Works something to scream about.

Mets Nip Giants ★★★★★ Dodgers Cut Lead By Edging Bucs ★★★★★ Perry Loses

Dodgers Cut Lead By Edging Bucs

By RON RAPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Ron Fairly's two-run single in the 10th inning started out as the icing on Los Angeles' cake, but it ended up as the skin of the Dodgers' teeth.

A walk to Jim Gilliam with the bases loaded Thursday broke a 1-1 tie between the Dodgers and Pittsburgh Pirates in the ninth frame but when Fairly followed with a single to centre, the Dodgers headed into the home half of the inning with what appeared to be a comfortable 4-1 lead. The appearance was deceiving.

Phil Regan replaced Dodger starter Don Sutton on the mound and was rudely greeted by Donn Clendenon's single. Bill Mazeroski filed out, but Bob Bailey clubbed one into the seats, making the score 4-3 and Fairly's hit crucial.

Regan finally got Jerry Lynch to fly out and Juan Pierranocki lent a hand by getting Manny Mota to ground out.

The Pirates thus passed up a sterling opportunity to take over second place in the National League as New York Mets beat San Francisco Giants 5-2 earlier in the day. The Pirates and Giants remained tied for the top spot and the Dodgers climbed up to within two games of them.

Pitcher Vernon Law got the first Pirate hit, a single in the sixth. He later scored on a single by Roberto Clemente, his 1,999th career hit. The Dodgers scored in the fourth when Jim Lefebvre tripled to left centre, driving in Jim Gilliam who had walked.

Other games saw Atlanta Braves beat St. Louis Cardinals 7-4, Chicago Cubs club Cincinnati Reds 11-3 and Philadelphia Phillies take Houston Astros 3-1.

LAW HAS LAPSE

Lou Johnson started the Dodger 10th with an infield hit and then Law suffered a fatal lapse, walking Jim Barbieri, batting for Sutton, and West Peterson, loading the bases. Pete Mikkelsen then came in and walked Gilliam before surrendering Fairly's hit.

Tigers Still Trying Siebert Clips Orioles' Wings

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

When Sonny Siebert is on the fly the Orioles don't get off the ground.

Siebert continued his mastery over Baltimore's young pitching stars Thursday night, firing a five-hitter as Cleveland Indians whipped the American League leaders 4-1.

The 29-year-old right-hander, author of the only no-hitter in the majors this season, outpitched rookie Jim Palmer for his 15th victory—and fourth in five meetings with the Orioles.

He has beaten Palmer—a 14-game winner—two times and also has topped rookie Eddie Watt and second - year man Wally Bunker since losing to Palmer last May 8 in his first start against the Orioles.

But Siebert has been up-and-down against the rest of the league since June 11, when he pitched his no - hitter against Washington Senators and said: "It's like you're flying, like you're way up there in the clouds."

Until Thursday night, Siebert had failed to finish eight straight starts since July 25. He has won his last three decisions, however, and is only one victory short of his 1965 total.

Baltimore's fifth setback in six games, coupled with Detroit's 7-5, 10-inning victory over Chicago White Sox, left the Orioles 11 games ahead of the second - place Tigers. New York Yankees trimmed California Angels 5-2 in the only other game scheduled.

Frank Robinson, who had clipped Siebert for four homers in their last two meetings, drove in the Orioles' run with a third-inning double and also singled, lifting his league - leading batting mark to .320. Otherwise, Siebert was in command, retiring 19 of the last 21 men he faced.

His batterymate, Duke Sims, clubbed a two-run homer and Max Alvis hit a solo shot as the Indians completed the season series with a 10-8 edge over the Orioles.

Norm Cash hit his 36th homer in the 10th inning and Willie Horton followed with his 22nd, lifting the Tigers past Chicago, 8-7.

Reliever John Buzhardt was the victim.

Detroit tied it 5-5 in the sixth on Jerry Lumpe's double, an infield out and a wild pitch by White Sox starter Joe Horlen.

Jim Northrup also homered for Detroit and Tommie Agee connected for the Sox.

Tom Tresh rapped a two-run homer for New York and the Yankees added three unearned runs with the help of four Californian errors and a balk by reliever Ramon Lopez.

Rookie Fritz Peterson boosted his pitching record to 11-9 but needed last - out relief help from Dooley Womack after blanking the Angels on four hits through eight innings.

Homer Snaps Tie
Oshawa Defeats Trudeaus 6-4

By GARRY ALEXANDER
(Staff Sportswriter)

A three-run homer in the top of the seventh snapped a 3-3 deadlock and carried Oshawa Blue Boys to a 6-4 OASA Intermediate "A" victory over Trudeau Motors at Alemite Park last night.

Three earlier Oshawa markers were tainted by the wind only two errors but twice Trudeaus ripped back to tie the score. They didn't make it the third time around.

Second game in the two-of-three set is slated for Oshawa Monday night, at 8.15.

Trudeaus' Pat Maracle, who had allowed three hits, went into the seventh saw that figure doubled as the Bad Boys found the range. Norrie led off with a single to centre and Solomon punched another to deep short. Maracle threw to the pinch-hitter but Sneddon slammed a line shot through the hole in left-centre for a 6-3 score. Maracle stayed for one more batter but gave way to Howard Jeffs after March also singled.

The eight hits was Oshawa's total. Jeffs fanned one and walked one. Maracle struck out four and passed one.

A walk and a wild pitch set up the initial run. Jones singled to left and Soule threw his high to the plate to get his man.

Trudeaus got that back when Baker beat out a slow roller, advanced on a ground out and passed ball, and scored when Drake singled sharply off a glove.

Solomon singled with one gone in the fifth. Jones hit a ball to third and Baker fired it wide of second on the attempted force play, allowing both men to come around to score on the error.

Baker and Drake again teamed up to tie it. Baker singled and with two out, Drake clouted a solid home run to right.

Then came the seventh. Trudeau managed to get a hit back in the eighth when Wannamaker drew a base-on-balls and scored on Mavety's base hit — but that was it.

Lefty Ted Jones worked the first six frames and Rob Mason the final three for a six-hit victory. They each walked a batter. Jones fanned six but Mason whose strange delivery brought arguments of "illegal pitch" from Trudeaus, struck out eight more in his short stint.

Roger Drake drove in three Trudeau runs with his homer and single. "Shaker" Baker singled twice. Larry Mavety and Pete Weston once ach.

Oshawa got two hits each from Bob Solomon and Jack Armstrong. Jack Sneddon belted the winning homer while Rich March, Pete Norris and Ted Jones had the others.

Says Bagnato

Terrell To Fight Clay?

TORONTO (CP)—Vince Bagnato, a Toronto fight manager, says he has learned Ernie Terrell, World Boxing Association heavyweight champion, is preparing for a title fight with Cassius Clay.

Bagnato, manager of 21-year-old Bob (Pretty Boy) Felstein, No. 1 Canadian heavyweight contender, said 7 day night his fighter has gone to Pleasantville, N.J., to serve as a sparring partner for Terrell.

"Sam Solomona, Terrell's trainer, told me Terrell has gone to training camp to prepare for a fight with Clay," said Bagnato. "They expect to meet Clay in New York after his fight with Cleveland Williams."

Clay, recognized as champion throughout most of the world except under WBA jurisdiction, is training in Frankfurt, West Germany, for a Sept. 10 title defence against Karl Mildenberger. If successful, he is expected to meet Cleveland Williams of Houston, Tex. at Houston in October.

Strong Oshawa Club Bobcats Trounced 11-0

A four-hit pitching chore by Ronnie Taylor and a free-swinging attack gave Oshawa Gales Lumber an easy 11-0 whipping of Belleville Bobcats in OSA Senior "B" play at Oshawa last night.

The return game in Belleville is scheduled for Tuesday, at the Alemite at 8.30, but Bobcat manager Ron Fralick hopes he'll have it switched to Monday night.

Taylor, who recently tossed an 11-inning no-hitter against Peterborough, had a one-hitter going until the sixth. He was never in serious trouble, blanking third strikes past-17 Bobcats.

Oshawa scored in every inning except the second, notching four in the fourth and a like number in the seventh.

Clair Leahy started, followed by Bob Lott in the fourth and Joe Barroso in the eighth, for Belleville. They were combed for 14 hits, getting four on third strikes and walking three.

Bob Young set the pace for Oshawa when he blasted a first inning homer. Joe Piontek followed suit by belting another home run to lead off the third. In the four-run fourth, two errors, as many singles and Taylor's double capped it to 6-0. Another lead-off homer, this one by Bob Young again, made it 7-0. Three hits and a walk added the eighth.

Oshawa's fourth homer of the night, by Jim Bowden, led off the seven and two more hits and an error added another. A walk, hit batter and a base knock closed the scoring.

Bobcats got four singles, by Billy Morton, Ron Lott, Don LeSage in the sixth, Mitts Egan in the seventh and Paul Merun in the eighth. Errorless ball also helped the Oshawa cause.

Bob Young's two homers, lone circuit smashes by Joe Piontek and Jim Bowden, Davis Ralph's double and single and two hits each by Jack MacDermaid and Doug Cole, paced the Lumbermen. Ron Taylor, Palmer Knight, Bill Kornyly, and Lloyd Mapes split the others.

Rookie Key Man

Lions Need Win Over Eskimos

By JOHN SHORT

EDMONTON (CP) — Rookie fullback Larry Eilmes of British Columbia Lions has at least two boosters—both important to him.

Coach Dave Skrien and general manager Herb Capozzi said Thursday Eilmes could become a key man in the B.C. of fence, if only for his blocking.

The graduate of Washington State University made his West. ern Football Conference debut Sunday in a 30-29 loss to Saskatchewan Roughriders, and, says Skrien, "he didn't miss a block."

In addition, he pounded the tough Saskatchewan defence for good yardage up the middle. He will start his second pro game tonight when the Lions meet Edmonton Eskimos.

The Lions, who have won one of their last 13 games, including 1966 exhibitions, enter the game in a weakened condition. Several players, including back Willie Fleming, fullback Bill Munsey and punter Neal Beaumont, will operate despite injuries. Fleming and Beaumont have neck injuries, Munsey an ailing ankle.

WILL ONLY PUNT

Beaumont, also a defensive back, is expected only to punt with Bill Lasater occupying his defensive post.

Offensive tackle Lonnie Dennis was left behind due to an unspecified internal injury. He will be replaced by Mike Martin, normally one of the best defensive ends in Canada.

B.C. shares the WFC basement with Calgary Stampeders. They have 1-4 records.

"Eilmes' young reputation, attained basically against standout defensive end Garner Ekstran of Saskatchewan, will be tested tonight by two other standouts, E. A. Sims and Ron Forwick of the Eskimos.

Both were brilliant Saturday as Edmonton evened its record at three wins and three defeats by trouncing Calgary 26-5.

Edmonton, fearing its anxieties after humiliating defeats in its first two starts, will add Le Bain to lineup tonight. Bain was obtained from Calgary Stampeders on waivers Wednesday because, said coach Neill Armstrong, "we were looking for a versatile back."

Bain will see action only on punting and kickoff teams tonight, unless the game situation dictates a change, Armstrong said.

Minor Softball Results

Jets managed only two base hits in Bell-ville Minor Baseball League Tadpole play at Park Dale last night but those safeties were enough as the team topped Rockets 3-2 to win the title. The teams traded wins in the first two games of the best of three series.

In Peewee action, Sine Shell took a 1-0 lead in games in semi-final play by defeating Tip Top 5-3. The winners held a 5-2 edge in hits.

Paul Weeks and Greg Macilvain handled the pitching for Jets in their big win. Mike Burks took care of the catching. The winning pitching combination gave up four hits while striking out 13 and walking three. Pitching for Rockets, Neil Wilkie and Scott Bowes allowed only two hits while fanning eight but 13 walks hurt. Chris O'Hara did the catching.

The winners' hits went to Randy DeGroots with a triple and Paul Weeks who doubled. Scott Bowes connected for two singles for Rockets while Brad Porter doubled and Mark Porter supplied a single.

Sine Shell pitchers David Wood and Gary Edwards limited Tip Top to two hits in the Peewee playoff game. Austin Wilson and Wayne Andrews pitched for the losers, giving up five safeties.

Leading the Shell team at bat was Rick Meagher with two singles, Michael Smith, Barry Culkin and Gary Edwards each collected one single. For Tip Top, it was Jim Stathers and Austin Wilson with a single each.

Sweep Series

Petes Oust Juniors 3-1

Bellevile, Zills' bowed out of O.A.S.A. Junior "A" playoffs in Peterbrough last night but gave the home town Heating squad a battle before accepting a 3-1 defeat. It was anyone's game until the final out. The Peterborough team won the opener of the best of three series in Belleville Tuesday night, 4-0.

Twice in the late innings of last night's game, the Bellevile squad put runners in scoring and third base with two out but each time failed to come through with a hit in the clutch.

As in the first game, Jim Bell got the nod over Bob Ebler in the pitching department. Bell could not repeat the mastery he showed over the Bellevile hitters in game one but still managed to get the close Ebler came through with a strong effort in defeat.

The losers' lone run came in the top of the sixth inning after Peterborough had built a 2-0 lead. Bob Moon rapped a Bell offering out of the ball park to make it 2-1. Earlier in the game, Moon connected for an out-of-the-park smash that was ruled foul by the umpire. Carl Boomhower and Moon were the top Petes producers for the losers in the close, well played game.

Peterborough counted its third and final run in the bottom of the eighth and made the two - run margin stand up.

The Trots

TORONTO (CP) — Morris MacDonald of Strathroy, Ont., reined his Francis P. Adios to a maiden victory in the first race at Greenwood Raceway Thursday night and set up a $23.20 daily double.

Vital Victory, a 13-year-old trotting gelding, posted its third consecutive victory and 10th of the season to complete the double.

Dick Hughes held the Braves to a pair of hits while striking out 14 batters and holding Richmond hitless until the seventh inning.

Knechtes held the Bisons to two hits over the final five innings.

John Ryan of Oshawa led the Toronto hitting attack with four consecutive singles. Julio Navarro gave up seven hits to register the victory.

T. and S. Softball

Hallaway opened up a 2-0 lead in games in the Thurlow and Sidney Softball League playoff final last night, trimming Crookston 7-2. The game in the best of seven series is scheduled for Stirling Saturday night at 8.15.

Ron Denyes went the distance to get the win last night. Dick Chapman and Moe Carter shared the Crookston pitching.

Roscoe Morgan led the Hallaway hitters with two safeties. Gale Allen posted a home run and Doug Irvin supplied a triple. Both the losers' runs were accounted for on Wayne Roe's home run.

NEED NO TRANQUILIZERS

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—Ireland's national industry is good talk, says Montreal sports broadcaster Danny Gallivan. He told a St. Patrick's Society banquet here that crimes are few in Ireland and "the sale of tranquilizers is away below that in any other country you care to mention."

Top Clubs Stay Even With Wins

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The three contenders for the International League pennant won decisive victories Thursday night to remain knotted at the top with less than a week of regular-season action remaining.

Columbus Jets maintained their lead over Rochester Red Wings by dumping Jacksonville Suns 8-4 while the Red Wings stayed one-half game in front of Toronto Maple Leafs with a 7-4 victory over Buffalo Bisons. The Leafs kept pace, defeating Syracuse Chiefs 5-2.

In the other game, Toledo Mud Hens defeated Richmond Braves 4-1.

HIT HOMERS

Dave Roberts and Jimmy Price each hit a pair of three-run homers to lead the Jets to victory. Frank Bork was the winning pitcher. The Suns, however, reached Bork for three of their runs in the eighth inning.

Mike Epstein hit a two-run homer for the Red Wings while team-mate Dave May collected a bases-empty home run. Paul

Ontario Faces B.C.

Three Teams Remain In Contention

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba and Alberta are one while three teams remain in contention as the Canadian soccer championship tournament enters its final day today.

Ontario, making a strong bid in Group A where favored British Columbia is on top, defeated winless Manitoba 5-3 Thursday. In Group B—with Quebec almost assured of a spot in the final match — Saskatchewan downed Alberta 4-0.

In today's action B.C. faces Ontario in a game that will decide the group winner while Quebec meets Saskatchewan in a return match.

Ontario made a win to capture Group A honors from B.C. in previous action B.C. downed the easterners 6-0. Saskatchewan would have to beat Quebec 3-0 to change Group B standings.

The week-long tournament is a two-group, double round-robin series with the winner of Group A meeting the winner of Group B in the final game Saturday. The runners - up in both groups meet to decide third and fourth spots.

SCORES INCREASE GOALS

Ontario's victory was sparked by a three-goal performance by centre forward Tony Adams, who studied Manitoba defenders in a game that knocked out the hometown team.

Other Ontario goals were added by halfback Mario Fantini and right winger Robert Benedetti. All three Manitoba goals were scored by Greek-born Alec Papadakis, a prolific scorer in Winnipeg's seventeen National Soccer League.

Johnny Schoors and Horst Becker kicked Saskatchewan to a 4-0 win that eliminated Alberta from the playoffs. The victory was the first for Saskatchewan in Group B after a 3-3 draw with Alberta and a 5-1 reverse to Quebec.

Alberta lost 10 to Quebec Wednesday and ended the series with two ties and two defeats. Manitoba's record is three losses and a draw.

Schepers scored twice for Saskatchewan while Becker and Adelbert Trawager added one each.

Senior Golf

U.S. Team Tops Canada

TORONTO (CP) — A United States team of 16 low-handicap senior golfers dominated the first half of its annual match against a Canadian Seniors' Golf Association team Thursday, winning five matches, splitting two and losing one.

Led by captain John Ames of Chicago, the U.S. players registered a 15-9 point margin in the Scotch foursome that featured Thursday's play.

Ames and James Ackerman of Lake Wales, Fla., combined for an eagle on the 385-yard 15th hole in their match with H. T. Clegg of Montreal and Fred King of Calgary for a 3-0 victory.

WON MATCHES

Lone match winners for Canada were Dr. Dilly Halderson and Ed Thomson, both of Toronto, who took three points from Frank Edwards of Spartanburg, S. C., and Henry Flower of Greenwich, Conn.

George Haggerty of Grosse Point, Mich., and James Robbins of New York edged George Brewer of Toronto, former Canadian Senior Golfers' Association champion, and Fred Lyon of Hamilton, Ont., 2-1, and by a single shot on the medal card, 79-80.

The lowest scoring match of the competition ended in an even split in the points when Joseph Morrill of Great Barrington, Mass., and John Ledbetter of Scarsdale, N.Y., teamed against Ross Somerville of London, Ont., and Don Anderson of St. Thomas. Both teams scored 75.

MOVES AHEAD

WEDGEPORT, N.S. (CP) — The University of Toronto moved ahead of the 11 teams entered in the intercollegiate game fish match Thursday. Its two-day total of 466 points was good enough for a 32-point lead over the second-place American team from Dartmouth University.

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate

"What's Your Problem"

BY BERNARD C. MELTZER

When building, there is a natural tendency to accept the lowest bid. This may be prudent when the bids are closely bunched. When they are wide apart it is a good indicator that something is wrong. Caution should be applied at this point before any bid is accepted.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: For over a year, I have faithfully followed your column because I was getting ready to build a new house. I thought I had acquired enough knowledge to avoid problems, but now I am not so sure.

I engaged an architect to prepare plans and specifications, and arranged for construction and my permanent financing, and secured bids from four reliable builders.

The bids however are wide apart. They are $24,900, $32,500 $36,400 and $42,000 respectively. What do I do now? Should I accept the lowest bid?

Please tell me! — Mr. T. K.

ANSWER: From experience, I would hazard to guess that if our reader awards this contract to the lowest bidder, he is asking for untold trouble.

When four reliable home builders are wide apart in their bids, it is an indication that something is wrong. The usual reason is because the plans and specifications have not clearly defined the work to be done and material to be used. It also may be that some of the builders have discovered unusual problems.

Whatever the reason, nothing should be done. The architect should be asked to trace the full source of confusion and trouble. If our reader gets no better bids the second time around, I would recommend that he consult another architect.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am only 12 years of age, but I think I have a vision that you will be unable to answer — at least none of my teachers know the answer.

In history class I read that the Indians sold Manhattan Island to the Dutch for $24. Why did they not ask for more money and can you tell me why they sold so cheap? — S. T.

ANSWER: You really are a smart 12-year-old and your question shows evidence of an inquiring mind. I hope, I don't disappoint you when I tell you I know the answer.

The Indians had no concept of individual ownership of land. This was a strange custom brought over from the Old World. In the Indian culture, air, water, trees and land were free to be used but not possessed. Therefore, when the Dutch offered them $24 worth of trinkets for something that was free, they took the gifts and probably thought they were getting something over on these "old country rubes."

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Some people think I may be losing my mind, but I know the house built for me is smaller than the sample from which I bought.

It all started a year ago. While on a drive one Sunday afternoon, I saw a beautiful sample house, all in love with it, and agreed to buy. I liked it so much that I even arranged to buy new furniture exactly like they had in the sample house.

Now I have moved in and you have never seen such a mess. The sample had two large beds in the master bedroom with plenty of space to spare. The same two beds in my bedroom leave only 2 feet of walking space. The living room, which stood gracefully opposite the fireplace in my house projects one foot into the space. My living room has a similar problem.

The real estate agent no longer answers my phone calls, my attorney has disassociated himself in the case and the builder has sent a surveyor to prove I am wrong. In spite of everybody, I know I've been cheated, and the house is smaller. — Mrs. F. D.

Troubles arise from her inability to discern. Our readers have to recognize a clever decorator's subterfuge, often used in sample houses. In order to make the rooms appear larger, the furniture may be on a reduced scale, usually three quarter size. The layman's eye, as a rule, can not differentiate the difference and he then takes on a false spaciousness. When scale furniture is put into the house, the builder suddenly appear to have shrunk in size.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: One of my constant problems has been that we have never had enough hot water. Finally, I am getting a few gas water heater. Could you please tell me the proper size to get, and what is a two-bath house? — Mrs. A. W.

ANSWER: A family of six with two baths requires a 40 gallon tank as a minimum provided there is little or no laundering. With a family of six an amount of laundering at least of 60lbs capacity is required. If there is heavy laundering with automatic washer, a 65 gallon tank is required.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer the more interesting ones possible through his column.

MUST BE TOUGHER

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Too many do-gooders are hampering police in their work, says Wentworth County Judge John Latchford. The incidence of crime goes down as the probability of being caught goes up, but he thinks too many lawyers and judges are more interested in comfort rather than apprehending criminals.

Ontario Students Will Face Overcrowded Classrooms and Many Overworked Teachers

By HEATHER MITCHELL

TORONTO (CP) — When school bells ring in a new year Tuesday some Ontario students will face elementary school French and computer science and most will get little relief from the overcrowded classrooms and overworked teachers they left last spring.

French will be an official option in Grades 7 and 8, a spokesman for the curriculum branch of the department of education said in an interview. But about 2,200 qualified teachers would be needed to instruct all the province's pupils in those grades.

Only 1,200 qualified teachers were taking part in the program last year, the spokesman said.

Schools offering French in earlier grades—some as low as Grade 3—still need permission from the department.

Computer science and data processing will be introduced experimentally to a few Grade 11 and 12 classes and geography in Grade 11 will emphasize urban development, including problems arising from poor town planning and traffic congestion.

The spokesman said elementary schools will be experiment with an ungraded system under new course outlines being drawn up by the department. And the elementary school curriculum, last updated in 1937, is being completely reworked.

IT'S NEW

Tots first entering school will find kindergarten a totally new production. The children will be taken to places such as the classroom and specialists will be brought in to introduce abstract as well as concrete forms of learning.

Another department spokesman said that despite the fact that 101,252 new pupil places were created last year while enrolment is expected to rise by only 54,619 this fall, "we are still behind."

In London, Ont., 1,000 elementary pupils will be shifted around until new schools are ready, John Given, superintendent of London public schools, said.

G. L. Woodruff, director of teacher education for the province, said the teacher shortage is most critical at the secondary school level.

He said the extent of the shortage can't be predicted accurately because sometimes as many as 2,000 married women teachers retire to household duties each year and "we aren't sure how many come back."

Enrollment at teachers' colleges is up to 5,250 this year, compared with 4,700 last fall. The number of elementary school teachers still needed this year was not immediately available.

Campbellford Girl Gets Second Chance

TORONTO (CP)—Maria Battaglini, 19, of Campbellford, Ont., and Isabel Blair, 18, of Dalkeith, Ont., got a second chance at the Ontario dairy princess crown Thursday night when they won the second semifinal round at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Both girls lost in the preliminaries last week but were chosen for the semi-finals because of the high number of points they received during the preliminary judging.

Two girls are chosen for the semi-finals each year as well as the eight girls who won preliminary rounds. The dairy princess will be crowned tonight as part of the CNE's Agriculture Day.

The day will also see the crowning of a Canadian Dairy Princess selected from four provincial entries from Ontario, Alberta, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick.

Will Regulate Pleasure Boat Waste Disposal

TORONTO — A regulation providing for the control of the discharge of sewage in pleasure boats and for pleasure boats into any water in Ontario has been made and approved under The Ontario Water Resources Commission Act.

This regulation comes into force July 1st, 1967. However, the owner or operator of a boat in which human waste is treated or stored must have installed before August 13th, 1966, will have until July 1st, 1968, to comply with the regulations.

This regulation provides that any pleasure boat that has sleeping accommodation, while in any water, must be equipped with a marine toilet and an approved device which will store or dispose of human sewage. The discharge of such sewage in these pleasure boats and the installation of the toilet and the approved device are also controlled by the regulation to insure that the sewage is prevented from entering any water.

In addition, owners or operators of all pleasure boats must insure that the boat, while in any water, is equipped with containers suitable for the storage of sewage that is not of human origin and that such sewage is retained on board in these containers "until such time as it can be lawfully discharged or deposited ashore".

HE'S RE BIG SPENDERS

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario department of tourism and information says Toronto families spent about $270,000,000 on travel last year with an average outlay of $480 on 12 out-of-town trips. But Ontario's tourist industry received only 45 per cent of this revenue with most of the remaining 55 per cent being spent in the United States.

Claudia Cardinale of Italy Making Mark in Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—There is a difference between men over 40 in the United States and in Europe, says Claudia Cardinale, and she adds: Vive la difference.

Latest of the Italian sex queens to invade Hollywood, she admits to being little known to the American audience while being a top favorite in Italy. The situation will soon be reversed.

While enjoying a day off from her current film with Tony Curtis, Don't Make Waves, she volunteered some comparisons on American men vs. European, particularly the Italians.

"When a man reaches 40 in Italy, he is virtually finished," she remarked. "His youth is gone, and he starts falling into old age.

'RETAINS HIS YOUTH'

"But in America, it is different. Here, a man who passes 40 is still youthful. His interests and attitudes remain young, and therefore he looks young."

She reported she recently placed No. 1 in a popularity poll of an Italian magazine, edging ahead of Sophia Loren and Marcello Mastroianni.

To maintain her following, she has been alternating American-made films with those of Italian producers. She admitted that she has not become famous in the U.S.

"I hope I may do it with the Richard Brooks film, The Professionals, she said. "I play a Mexican girl in it, a different kind of role. It is different for audiences and producers alike in this country to accept me as something more than the traditional Italian movie star. I'm not like that at all."

Take-home Pay of Stars Impossible to Estimate

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—In this land of make-believe and magic it is easy for the visitor to become confused about where reality ends and acting begins. The alternative is to conclude that everything here is like a movie set, where everything is a facade.

Take the matter of money in Hollywood. After a while, it almost seems that there are two classes of greenbacks: those in the kind that most of us work for, and there is the kind that is shoveled out for a few talented creatures in the entertainment capital.

"I don't really want to work in Vegas," a well-known but not really top-drawer singing star told this reporter casually. "It just didn't seem right, though, to turn down $60,000 for just two weeks' work."

It has been widely circulated in the trade that the Bonanza stars, under contracts signed last year, receive $20,000 an episode, which is more than most series regulars make in a season this could add up to $200,000 a hero—not counting, of course, extra money for appearances, royalties on records and appearances at state fairs and rodeos.

One of the trade papers recently headlined a story about what is top prices paid guest-stars in TV series. It appears the supply of available actors exceeds the demand.

CHOPS PRICE

Bob Hope's astrology series is reported to have chopped the top price from last season's $50,000 to $7,500. That is high for dramatic actors and usually is given only on the top variety shows for big stars—Ed Sullivan's hour and Hollywood Palace.

There was a time—when Sullivan was so annoyed at Jack Paar for attracting some of his high-priced talent for only the $250 minimum, plus the lovely exposure—when $10,000 was not at all unusual for a single entertaining only a few minutes.

Batman's villains, Variety says, pick up $2,500 an episode. Cash, too, since the Lucy Show ceiling is reported to be only $2,500.

Take-home pay of most stars is almost impossible to estimate. Most of them operate amid a welter of companies and corporations supervised by tax lawyers. One star of a series that was cancelled after a short run still managed to total an income well over $150,000 in the period.

It was recently estimated by the trade paper that a number of big TV personalities, including Sullivan, Miss Ball, Garry Moore and Bob Hope actually hit close to the $1,000,000 mark most years.

Napanee District News

Mrs. H. C. Fife — Phone 354-4990

Napanee Fair Opens Monday

NAPANEE — Napanee Fair opens Monday and will continue for three days. This is one of the oldest fairs in Ontario, dating back to 1895.

Tuesday is "Black and White Day," and horses and other livestock will be judged Wednesday.

The Fair is sponsored by the Lennox Agricultural Society, with Bruce Ainsworth as president. Vice-president is Vernon Ackerman, with Clarence Baldwin, Harvey MacLean, Hugh Walker and Garrow as secretary-treasurer.

Directors of the Fair for 1966 are: Adam Milligan, Thornhill Dupre, Clafford Fraiken, Harold Connor, Manley Hart, Earl Harnden, Homer Jackman, Everett Lennox, Clarence Milligan, Harvey MacLean, Hugh Walker and Lorne Woodcock.

Special projects for all 4-H clubs must be in for exhibition on Monday and the ushers themselves by four o'clock, Monday, all 4-H Club field crops, grain, corn and potatoes; Tuesday will see the judging of the 4-H Club calves. Calves Wednesday the dairy section of the 4-H mixed calf steers will be judged and the ribbons will be judged for showmanship. The Experimental Clubs will be judged that day, also.

Post Express Taken for Post Office

NAPANEE — The Napanee Beaver has been having troubles this summer, and this week an editorial tries to clarify the situation for tourists. The building marked "Post-Express" is not the Napanee Post Office, the editorial says. But a lot of people seem to think it is, as in recent weeks the staff in that building has received 17 requests for postal information, and one morning lately a dozen post cards were dropped through the mail slot in the Post-Express building, all destined for United States readers.

Where possible the information asked for, is given, and in other cases the person is referred to the Post Office a few doors up the street. The post cards were duly mailed.

After the Napanee Beaver purchased the Napanee Post-Express a year ago, the latter moved its offices for the editorial and advertising staffs to the building formerly occupied by the other paper — hence the "Post-Express" is not the same as "Post Office", the editorial points out. Nor is it Post Express any more. It is Napanee Beaver.

Car Vandalism At Hospital Reported

NAPANEE — The OPP answered two calls from the Lennox and Addington County General Hospital Wednesday, in the last morning, and belonging to members of the staff had been tampered with. Some articles were stolen, a transistor radio, among other things, and an aerial had been damaged. Air was let out of one motor tire, on several cars and in most cases the valve caps were gone.

The cars are checked every half hour, and children were seen not long before the damage to the aerial occurred. Two cars were also seen, but were not identified. Some of the children are known. The police are still investigating.

Late in the evening police were called again to investigate cars which were hanging around the hospital and were away before the police arrived.

Napanee police were called to investigate a number of incidents at Hillcrest Lodge. They made good their escape, also, but not before damage was done. An aerial had been damaged on one car at the nursing home.

U.S. Economic Opportunity Act Outlined

NAPANEE—Speaking to the Napanee Rotary Club this week Jack Auld of Worchester, Mass., outlined the United States's Economic Opportunity Act.

Mr. Auld, a YMCA director in his home city and a summer visitor to this area for 17 years, has had an active part in the various programs in his city, as a member of the community action council, composed of representatives of various organizations. The community action council, although supported by the city manager, is not responsible to the city council.

The act originally provides 10 per cent of the funds used in the work, and the city the remaining ten per cent, and this may be in services, the speaker said.

The part of the program of the council is directed toward children of low income families, parents incapable of preparing the child while at work or unable to find work, and those who do have a low life must be given some teaching before mingling with more fortunate children.

The speaker was introduced by Dr. Garrett Vink, a long-lived Rotarian who regularly attends summer Rotary meetings here.

Past-president Harry Vine voiced the appreciation of the members to the guest speaker.

Belleville One of 9 Cities Where Union Votes Awaited; PC's, NDP Dislike Rail Bill

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition spokesmen served notice in the Commons Friday that they are digging in for a long and hard fight on the government's proposals for a massive overhaul of railway legislation.

Their fire was directed mainly at the plan to give the railways unprecedented freedom in rate-making, allowing the forces of competition to replace all but the most essential federal control.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker charged that the legislation would leave the carriers "virtually untramelled" and its tensity the freight rate discrim-

TORONTO (CP)—Railway workers stayed off the job in at least nine Ontario centres today, but throughout most of the province they returned to work in accordance with new federal legislation.

The week - long rail strike, forcibly ended Thursday night by Parliament, caused a minimum of economic hardship, according to Ontario manufacturers.

Most of Toronto's 3,500 workers returned to work Friday but locals in nine other areas voted to remain on strike until more details on the government's order to end the strike are heard and further direction comes from local officers.

Decisions against returning to work were taken in Belleville, Windsor, Chatham, Hamilton, Niagara Falls, Fort Erie, Capreol, Brantford and North Bay. Most locals planned meetings today.

A spokesman for the 13 Toronto members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers said about 300 workers were still on strike but planned meetings this week.

In Belleville this morning, members of Local 128, C.B.R.T., convened at Club Canara to hold the secret ballot cancelled at a meeting yesterday.

Herb Pointer, representative of Local 128 in a number of talks with federal labor leaders, described this morning's assembly. "The question we were voting on today is not 18 per cent or anything else — what we are deciding is whether or not we will accept government legislation and return to work, or will we defy government regulations and stay on the picket lines.

"There's only one person to blame for this mess," said Pointer, "and that's the Prime Minister."

Laying the blame for government intervention at the door of "politicians playing both sides of the road," Pointer said "it was actually only the NDP, Mr. Douglas and Mr. Lewis, that tried to fight our battle in Parliament."

Canadians Head Into Holiday With Rail Transportation in Country in State of Confusion

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadians head into the Labor Day holiday weekend today with rail transportation in a state of confusion across the country.

Some trains, mainly freights, were moving sporadically.

But inter-city passenger runs were few and far between, and a number of trains that set out hopefully Friday never reached their destination.

Behind the confusion are rebel groups of railway workers from Vancouver to Moncton who have voted to remain on strike, in defiance of Parliament and their own national leaders.

A government bill which became law late Thursday night ordered 138,000 railway workers to end their week-long strike against the CNR, CPR and five smaller railways immediately.

Some men did, and trains began to move again. But many did not, and the ranks of the rebels swelled following membership meetings from coast to coast.

Many union locals had not yet announced any clear-cut decision early today, but reports from across the country indicated that the CPR was having somewhat better success in getting its trains moving than the publicly-owned CNR.

The CNR reported no train movements at all in Western Canada or the Maritimes, and only a slight situation in most other places.

Freight trains moving out of Montreal and Toronto had been halted at such key points as Belleville, Ont., and Charny, Que., where switchmen failed to show up for work.

Belleville is on the Montreal-Toronto line and Charny, 10 miles south of Quebec City, straddles the main Montreal-Halifax artery.

CNR passenger tickets were being sold in Toronto and Montreal, but there was no immediate promise of transportation between the cities. The crack Halifax-to-Montreal Ocean Limited was turned back at Moncton.

In contrast, the CPR reported at least 74 freight trains in operation Friday, including 45 non-stop trains, and its transcontinental Canadian departed on schedule.

CPR employees returned to work in Edmonton, Calgary, Regina, Saskatoon and a number of other points, and CPR freight yards in the Toronto area were in full operation Friday.

Both major railways reported services back to normal for Montreal's 42,000 rail commuters, and the CNR's Montreal-Ottawa and Montreal - Sherbrooke runs were operating on near-full schedule.

There was discouraging news for rail travellers in British Columbia and the Maritime provinces.

Neither the CPR nor the CNR was moving trains in B.C., where some railway workers had returned but thousands more voted to remain on strike.

In Moncton, about 1,100 members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen decided to re-establish picket lines, indicating a serious disruption of rail service.

In Montreal, about 2,000 members of the railway shop craft unions decided at a noisy meeting to stay off the job.

Most of Toronto's 3,500 strikers returned to work Friday, but railway men in at least eight other Ontario centres voted to remain on strike for another day.

Almost 2,000 B.C. strikers voted to stay out and about 300 to resume work in Vancouver, Kamloops and Port Mann.

Calgary had all of its 4,600 railway workers back on the job, but the picture at Edmonton was split. Its 300 CPR employees were back, but 1,400 of the 3,000 CNR men decided to stay out and the other 1,600 were planning membership votes.

There was a similar split in Saskatoon, where CPR men returned and a big freight pulled out for Winnipeg but no CNR trains were moving.

Regina reported both CPR and CNR employees at work while Winnipeg strikers were awaiting official word from union leaders. No trains were moving in the Manitoba capital.

In Charny, an important CNR centre, 900 employees decided to hold a 48-hour "study session" to consider the federal legislation ordering them back to work.

Among the few bright aspects of the situation was the resumption of service across the country by Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Telecommunications.

Another was the return to normal operation of the Northern Alberta Railways, which is operated jointly by the CNR and CPR, and the Sydney and Louisburg division of the Cumberland Railway Co. in the Maritimes.

Others of the smaller railways affected by the strike, the Midland Railway Co. of Manitoba, the Ontario Northland and the Algoma Central, remained tied up.

The act of Parliament ordering a return to work awarded all strikers a guaranteed 18-per-cent pay increase for 1966 and 1967, and government leaders stressed that this figure could be increased in continuing railway-union contract negotiations.

Compulsory arbitration would be ordered unless the talks were making some progress by Nov. 15.

Strikers have been outspoken in criticizing both points. They say the interim pay increase is too low, and the provision for compulsory arbitration threatens the principle of free collective bargaining.

There have also been widespread complaints that the government bill contains no job security provisions, a sore point because of the increasing numbers of railway employees.

About 98,000 of the 138,000 strikers are non-operating employees, those not involved in the actual running of the trains, and the increase averaging roughly 30 per cent of $2.23 hourly under their last contract and are seeking increases averaging roughly 30 per cent.

The other 20,000 are trainmen, who want a reduction in working hours or miles run as well as a 35-per-cent pay increase.

Air Show Pilot Killed At Toronto

By NEIL LOUTTIT

TORONTO (CP)—An American navy pilot was killed Friday when his F-11A Tiger crashed and exploded before thousands of spectators during an air show at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Dead is Lt.-Cmdr. Richard Oliver, 31, of Fort Bliss, Tex. He was a member of the U.S. Navy's Blue Angels aerobatic team.

Lt.-Cmdr. Oliver was a solo pilot with the team. He had just completed a low-level fly past and a series of rolls when the crash occurred on the shore of Toronto Island.

An eyewitness said about 100 children had been watching the air show from near where the plane crashed but had left about five minutes before when a heavy rain shower soaked the field.

Athletic Centennial Program

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP)—When 5,500,000 school children return to classes Tuesday, they'll find posters announcing a centennial athletic awards program for all aged six to 18.

There will be three compulsory events: A one minute speed sit-up, a 300-yard run and a standing broad jump.

Entrants may also choose one of three optional events—swimming, skating or a cross-country run.

Standards for each age group have been drawn up to allow the kids to compete for gold, silver, bronze and red cresta, in that order.

But the federal centennial commission, which organized the program has ordered only 3,500,000 cresta.

"We hope we're severely underestimated the number who will take part," said commission employee Sue Coleman in an interview.

SOME MAY MISS

There are a number of reasons why 2,000,000 children may not be able to participate but most fall around organization.

The commission, for instance, is trying to discourage one province from scheduling its tests for a single day because absenteeism could be high. Bad

4 Armed MenSteal Aircraft

WINNIPEG (CP) — Four armed men stole a private aircraft early today after forcing an unidentified man to drive them to the Steinbach, Man., airstrip at gunpoint.

RCMP said they believe the men are four fugitives from the Headingley provincial jail, the last of 10 who made a mass break Thursday to remain free.

They include resourceful Kenneth Leishman, 34, who has been described as an experienced pilot.

Police have declined to identify the person taken hostage and abandoned at the airstrip, 30 miles south of here, when the four took off in the single-engine Apache.

TOWARD THE U.S.

The beige and red aircraft was reported seen flying south, toward the United States, about an hour after the theft occurred. It bears licence number CF-RYN.

Move to Study Labor Laws

OTTAWA (CP)—The government moved swiftly on two fronts Friday to get mediation set up in the national railways dispute and to obtain expert advice that would help the country's labor laws.

Only hours after Parliament passed a bill ordering 138,000 striking railwaymen back to work:

—Lt. Carl Goldenberg, 58, a Montreal-born lawyer with 30 years experience in labor relations, was appointed mediator in Parliament - ordered negotiations on outstanding issues in the rails dispute.

—And Dean H. D. Woods, head of arts and sciences at Montreal's McGill University, was named to head a "task force" to conduct an exhaustive study of current labor laws and recommend changes to bring them up to date.

ination against Western Canada and the Maritimes.

"It will bring about an accentuated distortion of the inequalities of today," he said.

Alvin Hamilton (PC—Qu'Appelle) and NDP Leader Douglas took a similar line, demanding provision that would prevent shippers in the West, the Maritimes, northern Ontario and northern Quebec from cut-off of line with those levied in the big industrial regions.

SETS UP AGENCY

The $4,000 - word bill, introduced Monday as part of the government's formula for settling the railway strike, would establish a single federal agency to regulate the entire field of transport and also implement modern railway leg-

Allard Appeals to All To Assist in Unification

TORONTO (CP)—Gen. Jean V. Allard, chief of the defence staff, Friday night appealed to all Canadians to help make unification of the armed forces a workable reality.

Gen. Allard, speaking at the annual Canadian National Exhibition Air Show dinner, said civilians and servicemen must comprehend Canada's needs to adapt its armed forces to meet new demands in "the realities of this present age."

He said, "We have had to adapt ourselves to a new form.

"We had to adapt to something short of the total war that no one wants. Canada had to change to meet these demands.

Gen. Allard said he has undertaken to retain the tradition of the three services.

"Regardless of what people are saying, we will go through with a program which will make all Canadians proud of the Canadian forces.

"We want to spend our dollars where they count . . . to buy more planes and equipment."

Massive Traffic Jams in Good Weather Likely Over Holiday

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A massive traffic jam precipitated by delays in settlement of the railway strike was forecast today as it's country-started the three - day Labor Day weekend.

The Canadian Highway Safety Council has predicted 77 persons will die on the country's highways during the weekend. Last year, 124 died in accidents across Canada, 70 in traffic.

Police and safety organizations were braced for the thousands of weekend travellers and the traditional flood of cottagers as summer homes begin to close and residents returned to cities and towns.

In Quebec, heavy trucks will take to the roads Sunday by special permission of the department of transport to try to clear some of the freight stockpiled during the rail strike.

Provincial and city police are on special alert in Montreal and the provincial force will have 800 men on duty across the province. The provincial safety council has predicted at least 35 deaths on the highways.

W. G. McInnes, chairman of the traffic division of the Saskatchewan Safety Council, says Labor Day across the province will be a day of "speeches" and "safety" slogans in an effort to curb Saskatchewan's skyrocketing traffic death toll.

The Alberta Safety Council forecasts more than 300,000 cars will jam provincial highways during the weekend. Officials of bus lines say every available vehicle will be moving and Air Canada has scheduled extra flights because of uncertain rail travel.

Police in New Brunswick say they expect "exceptionally heavy" road traffic during the weekend and RCMP detachments in Nova Scotia are planning extra patrols and maximum motorist coverage.

Sports events hold the weekend recreation spotlight in the Maritimes with harness racing, a golf tournament and numerous softball playoffs scheduled in Prince Edward Island.

Exhibitions are in full swing in Nova Scotia with a provincial fair at Truro and county exhibitions in Yarmouth and Pictou. Other weekend events include harness racing, a sportsmen's meet near Shel-

Caledonia Welcomes De Gaulle

NOUMEA, New Caledonia (AP)—President de Gaulle of France flew into this flowered Pacific isle today after a three-day state visit to Cambodia where he declared that all foreign troops get out of Viet Nam.

In a major speech in Phnom Penh, Cambodia, Thursday, de Gaulle made it clear he meant U.S. troops, but the wording of a joint communique today, signed also by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, chief of state of Cambodia, was broad enough to include Soviet and Chinese technicians in North Viet Nam.

There was no immediate inside of North Vietnamese troops because, informed sources accompanying de Gaulle said, the French president did not consider this the same sort of intervention as the American.

said police stake-outs at the Warren strip likely frightened off the fleeing men.

Because R. Leishman's flying ability, police had assigned several men to watch various small airstrips in the Winnipeg-Hedingly area and warned plane owners to secure their aircraft.

Leishman faces trial on theft and conspiracy charges in a brazen hijacking of $360,000 in gold bullion from Winnipeg airport March 1.

Also hunted were Barry Kay Duke, 24, held indefinitely after acquittal on a non-capital murder charge by reason of insanity; Joseph William Dale, 26, facing a rape charge; and George Wayne Leclerc, 26, of Montreal, accused of false pretences.

Jules Chippeway, 31, involved with Duke in the rape charge; Riley Earl Nelson, 37, awaiting appeal on a capital murder conviction; and Ernest Lavallee, 35, serving time for robbery, were the first to be collared in the bush in Manitoba's entire 450-member RCMP force and all municipal police units.

GOOF A HOSTAGE

They took Donald Fast, 37, son of a jail guard at Headingley, hostage but crashed a stolen car into a ditch in front of a pursuing police car near Portage la Prairie, 30 miles east of here.

Two other escapees — Larry Ross and Marvin Martin — hijacked drove into Langdon, N.D., in a jail-owned station wagon and were apprehended by Patrolman Al Thiede.

A revolver and knives were found in the abandoned vehicle. Cass, 18, was serving time for robbery and manslaughter. Funk, 21, faced a theft and arsonce charge. They were later returned to Winnipeg, 85 miles north of Langdon.

A sixth fugitive surrendered to Winnipeg police after his lawyer arranged a meeting at a downtown hotel. Donald Wayne Joseph Poole, 22, held on a robbery charge, contacted lawyer Kenneth D. Klein through his mother.

The man Klein believed Manitoba's worst, began about 7:15 p.m. when two prisoners crashed a guard into their cell on pretext of illness. They jabbed a sharpened table knife at his ribs, beat him, took his keys and freed the others. Overpowering other unarmed guards by surprise, they made their way to the guard office where they forced open the arms locker.

Taking three rifles, five revolvers, and 800 rounds of ammunition, the 10 men fled in two stolen cars.

The executive of the Moira River Conservation Authority will be asked to approve a recommendation from its water advisory board calling for the repair of the west wing wall at the Lingham Lake dam 20 miles north of Madoc.

Estimated costs of repairs for the dam wing wall has been given at $10,500, but Authority water advisory board members state that the work must be done, as a further deterioration could result in losing storage water left in the Lingham Lake reservoir.

Built by the Ontario Department of Public Works, the Lingham Lake dam carries the upper reaches of the Black River was taken over by the Authority some years ago. A float valve was installed in the dam to facilitate discharge of water during the dry summer months.

Repair of the west wing wall told increasing its height by 18 inches, is expected to cost in the region 3,000 acre feet of water storage. Present effective storage is 14,000 acre feet.

Reports on two other water storage projects on the Moira River system will be given at a special meeting of the Authority advisory board.

PLAN OTHER DAMS

Members were told that it would cost an estimated $2,000 to repair the Flinton dam recently acquired by the Authority. Completion of a small control dam at Lime Lake near Marlbank, planned to go into operation next year, will maintain the summer level of that lake.

Advisory Board chairman Graham Bell received board members' advice to go into operation into the feasibility of a small storage dam for Gawley Creek in Hungerford township.

It seems that in former years beaver have maintained a dam which flooded a marsh but, with the disappearance of food, the beaver have left the area and the dam has deteriorated.

In the future the Authority will take a dim view of anyone dumping garbage or refuse into the Moira river.

Following a discussion of fill regulations, board members voted to direct the field officer to undertake an enquiry particularly interested if courses include personnel administration, economics, political science, public administration or psychology.

The board does not exclude those who have at least one year beyond matriculation and hold considerable qualifications, but experience relative to the above courses.

Persons are also qualified to apply, regardless of formal education, if they have a bachelor's degree in personnel administration, employment, staff training, industrial relations or similar high experience.

A knowledge of the English language is required. For some positions a knowledge of both English and French will be an asset.

Any person interested, and requiring further information, should enquire at National Employment Service, 334 Church Street, Belleville.

EMPLOYMENT NEWS

By: R. T. Voss, NES
Supervisor, Special Services

At this time of year foremost in the minds of young people will be preparation for returning to school.

From an employment point of view, it has been interesting to observe this shift from the school students who have been working during the summer.

Those with an intelligent outlook have seen how limited their chances of progress in business and industry are without further education.

Others, who are concerned only with the present, have let the money earned dominate their thinking and will not be returning to school.

This decision between school and work is not as simple as it first appears. It affects the whole of one's future and will make the difference between a job and a career. School is the foundation upon which to build a career.

By a career, we mean a position requiring responsibility and offering good stable employment and possibilities for advancement.

Education is not learning for the sake of learning, but has a very real purpose. It equips us for the future and whatever that future may hold.

A graduate from High School has always got something to fall back on if circumstances decree or he or she wishes to change positions.

EDUCATION ESSENTIAL

There is no doubt that today's labor markets demands are much more exacting than ever before. A good education or trade training are fast becoming essential pre-requisites for employment. For those who have these pre-requisites, good opportunities are available.

We at the National Employment Service know how important this is and we take this opportunity of encouraging students to do their best and to work well at their studies, for one can ask more of them.

This week, we again call attention to the need for Employment Service Officers with our own service, the National Employment Service.

These are career positions, highly desirable as university graduation and are very particularly interested if courses include personnel administration, economics, political science, public administration or psychology.

This does not exclude those who have at least one year beyond matriculation and hold considerable qualifications, but experience relative to the above courses.

Persons are also qualified to apply, regardless of formal education, if they have a bachelor's degree in personnel administration, employment, staff training, industrial relations or similar high experience.

A knowledge of the English language is required. For some positions a knowledge of both English and French will be an asset.

Any person interested, and requiring further information, should enquire at National Employment Service, 334 Church Street, Belleville.

grandstand area, one from the east and the other—Lt.-Cmdr. Oliver's plane—from the west. They passed in front of the grandstand and did a series of rolls as they flew away in opposite directions.

WAS 90 FEET UP

An air show spokesman said the aircraft were flying at about 450 m.p.h. some 50 feet above Lake Ontario.

Witnesses said Lt.-Cmdr. Oliver's plane appeared to falter as it completed the last roll. The tail section of the plane hit the water.

The aircraft then appeared to bounce and slammed into s'comcreek and steel breakwater on the edge of Toronto Island.

There was a brilliant orange-flamed explosion and clouds of ash and smoke followed the instant of the impact. Wilkinson said the mid-section of the plane was behind the cockpit—struck the abutment.

The plane disintegrated, scattering pieces of wreckage for a least over the Toronto Island Airport.

Pilot Julian Chabot, 36, of RCAF Station Trenton, Ont., was cut on the left foot when the plane hit the breakwater. He was treated at hospital and released.

Sgt. Chabot was a technician with an RCAF rescue helicopter that was standing at the end of the Toronto Island Airport, about 200 yards from the crash scene.

Police closed the downed plane burned on the island and water surface.

WATCH

An estimated 6,000 were watching the airshow at the time. Many were not aware of the tragedy because of the noise, the clouds of smoke, Those who actually saw the crash stared in disbelief.

Allan Fry, director of operations for the air show, said visibility in the area was good at the time, although it was raining to the east.

After the crash ground control radioed the five remaining pilots: "Get out your hope' is blown west of the island. Do you want to go on?"

The pilot replied: "Yes, we'll go on."

The five planes made two more passes before ground control cancelled the show. The crash occurred at 3:37 p.m. EDT, halfway through the team's 23-minute act.

Mr. Fry said a joint department-Transport-U.S. Navy inquiry will investigate the crash. He said there could be "any number" of reasons.

Metro Toronto's chief coroner Dr. Morton Shulman said he will hold an inquest into the the dead pilot and an inquest.

Cmdr. Robert Aumack, commanding officer of the team said Friday night that the aerobatic team would take part in today's show.

The crash was the third in the last 12 years of the Canadian-International air show. In 1954 an F-86 Sabre jet went down and in 1956 a CF-100 crashed. Both were RCAF planes.

Church Union Is Workable But Not Now--Ramsey

ST. JOHN's, Nfld. (CP)—Archbishop Michael Ramsey, arriving here Friday for a four-day visit to four northern Newfoundland coastal communities and receive an honorary degree from Memorial University, said Christian church unity is workable but probably not for a while.

He held a news conference about two hours after arriving from Halifax. About 1,100 persons, most of them children, attended a public rally. Immediately after he arrived.

It is the first time a spiritual leader of the Anglican fellowship throughout the world has visited Newfoundland.

Dr. Ramsey said he believed one Christian church will emerge someday with varying customs, but only after agreement on certain essentials doctrines, such as transubstantiation and the assumption of the Virgin Mary, which now help separate the Roman Catholic and Anglican faiths.

PLACE FOR POPE?

He said a united church of some form in the future, with agreement on basic doctrine and possibly varieties in customs, could include a place for the Bishop, of Rome, or the Pope, as "a presiding bishop amongst equals." But the Anglican church was "pledged" to four things—the holy scriptures, the creeds, the historic episcopy and the sacraments.

At a state dinner at Memorial's new dining hall, attended by Premier Smallwood, the archbishop appeared moved by the welcome, which he described as "unfailingly thrilling." Wreathed smiles lined the route the archbishop motorcaded at spots near the airport and the entrance to the city.

The 9-year-old prelate, accompanied by his wife, spends today visiting Newfoundland and flashing smiles by boat along the Conception Bay shore.

Following holy communion, a long eucharist and a service Sunday at the Newfoundland Cathedral here, he will have lunch with Lt. Gov. and Mrs. Fabian O'Dea, lay the cornerstone for a new Queens College and receive an honorary degree of doctor of letters from Memorial in the evening.

The archbishop will celebrate holy communion Monday and confer with diocesan clergymen before leaving for Montreal.

AUSSIES SIGN UP

About 60 per cent of Australian workers are union members, compared with 25 per cent in the United States.

The Quinte Hotel at noon Friday, was the location of a get-together dinner and civic welcome for forty-five public school teachers, with inspectors, supervisors of special subjects, principals, school board officials and members of the school board.

Mayor C. R. Ellis gave a welcome on behalf of citizens and council and expressed both his interest and pleasure in the educational welfare of Belleville school children. Mayor Ellis remained for the duration of the dinner, taking the opportunity to chat with members of the business and industry city. Board chairman Macdonald Smith, chaired the meeting.

The day commenced with a three-hour session at the Queen Elizabeth School when school principals and board officials working with Chief Inspector L. A. Kells and inspectors J. M. Coutts and R. D. Horwood, briefed out a program prepared several weeks in advance. Organization was discussed by Principal of Principal R. A. Wright, welcome was extended by Vice-Principal Murray Workman, President of the Teachers' Association. Building arrangements were under the direction of Principal Miss E. Hackett and J. E. Bateman.

In the afternoon, the new teachers were taken on a tour of all schools where the school principals with other members of the teaching staff, met and were made familiar with the particular school lay-out, classroom procedures, and courses they will need to know for school opening Sept. 8.

The new teachers, forty-one women and four men, included 23 with previous teaching experience; 22 graduates from Sir Mackenzie Bowell School. Mr. R. W. Caswell, B.Ed. Principal of Sir Mackenzie; Miss Ailsa May and Miss Kathleen Fletcher are from the Bridgewater area; Miss Ruth Miss Elizabeth White is from Belfast, Ireland, while Miss Pauline Leakey is from Clinford, Essex and Miss Mavis Alexander is from Blackpool, England.

The recent graduates from the Teachers' Colleges come from the Lakehead, Peel Arthur, Ottawa, Hamilton, Toronto and Peterborough.

Mean August Temperature Above Normal

The mean August temperature of 68.06 degrees proved to be 1.06 degrees above normal although the mean daily maximum for the month at 77.13 was not quite up to the average for August. The Tweed Climatological Station reported today. Reason for this apparent paradox lies in the fact that the mean daily minimum for the month was 59 degrees as opposed to the norm of 54.37.

August precipitation measured 3.30 inches, about 2 inches less than last year. Normal August rainfall is only 2.93 inches however. Total precipitation for January has been 18.24 inches, or over 6 inches less than the same period in 1965. Normal amount for this period is 21.55 inches.

There were 6 forest fires in the Tweed district during August to 3 in the same month last year. The acreage has also 125 fires. Last year there were 9.

The month was notable for increased precipitation over July, beginning with a 1.60-inch rainfall on the 2nd. However it was too late in most cases to benefit corn crop. It provided a recurrence of July's fire infestation and brought up weeds.

lation suggested by the MacPherson royal commission of 1961.

It would set the railways free to abandon uneconomic branch lines and uneconomic passenger services, subject only to a provision that the government could order any line or service continued in the public interest. But in those cases Ottawa would guarantee most of the losses involved, paying 100 per cent on branch lines and 80 per cent on passenger services.

Transport Minister Pickersgill, who said Thursday night he did not expect an easy time getting the bill through, gave Mr. Hamilton an assurance that the government will not allow any harried and wholesale abandonment of prairie branch lines.

The Conservative MP said the prospect of branch-line abandonment is "a most frightening thing" to westerners.

Mr. Pickersgill reported that his department already is drawing up a list of lines that will be listed "five or six years" during which no abandonment applications would be accepted, Ottawa would build a network through Western Canada.

AGREE TO WITHDRAW

He also said the presidents of the CNR and the CPR have agreed to withdraw the dozens of applications already made for the closing of western lines. This would be done immediately after the new legislation is passed.

Mr. Douglas said the bill is a "timid step" towards an effective transportation policy. The ultimate remedy would be a merger of all transport systems into a single public utility.

The new agency, to be known as the Canadian Transport Commission, should be more than a mere regulatory body. It should have some effective control of transport development.

Wasteful duplication in transport services should be wiped out as quickly as possible. It was ridiculous to have two railways and a highway running side by side handling the same kind of traffic, Mr. Douglas told repeatedly in the West.

H. A. Olson (SC—Medicine Hat) said he is "taunted by suspicion" that the railway strike was promoted by the companies to pressure Ottawa into passing the transport bill.

He suggested a minimum three-week delay before the bill is sent to a committee.

It was a farce for the railways to say their hands were tied under present law. At least 95 per cent of their rates were already in the hands of the Board of Transport Commissioners, Mr. Pickersgill said the new commission would apply its own costing techniques.

The transport bill is supposed to give the railways more elbow room in obtaining revenue and avoid, among other things, the need for federal subsidies to pay for unprofitable wages. The wage subsidy policy has been in effect since freight rates were frozen in 1959.

L. A. Kells, Superintendent of the Belleville Public School Board, this morning announced the appointment of Burle D. Summers as principal of the Sir John A. Macdonald School. Still under construction, the school is expected to be completed by January 1967.

Mr. Summers recently received word from Queen's University that he had graduated with a Bachelor of Arts degree. He received his teacher training in Australia where he taught for several years before coming to Belleville in September, 1964. Last year he served as vice-principal of Park Dale School.

Optical Firm Given Award For Safety

It has been announced by the Industrial Accident Prevention Association of Ontario that the management and employees of American Optical (Canada) Limited - Lens Manufacturing Division will be presented with an award for completing one million man - hours of work without a compensable accident; a record of a continuous safety program.

The previous and last lost time accident in the Belleville plant occurred in November of 1963. It is interesting to note that during this period, operations in the plant were increasing and computerized employment normally tend to have more accidents than experienced operators.

Safety records of one million man - hours without a compensable accident was reached by teams of this year and accident free hours have continued to increase since that date.

Gumfre Foils Escape of East German

BERLIN (Reuters) — Submachine-gun fire foiled today the escape of an East German as he tried to slip over barbed wire fences into West Berlin, police said.

Witnesses gave two versions of the incident and a police spokesman said he could not say which was right.

One report said the man, about 25 years old, collapsed and was dragged to a nearby car by comrades where the shots originated.

But other witnesses in West Berlin said they saw the man being led away at gunpoint by East German border guards to the border and then taken away by ambulance.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, J. R. Ellis, Mayor of the City of Belleville, proclaim that SEPTEMBER 5th to 10th, 1966, be designated "LABOR WEEK".

put the railway worker back in the position he was in the Thirties, when he stood about fourth on the scale of wage-earners in this country."

Referring to Prime Minister Pearson's television address of last week, Pointer told the group of some 100 C.B.R.T. members, Mr. Pearson came on the air and tried to make us feel as if we're undermining this country," and "a one-sided picture as far as railway people are concerned".

MEETING MILITANT

Pointer told the meeting that a penalty of up to two years' imprisonment could result from defying the controversial government bill C-230, and he was met by cries of "let's go" from the floor, showing the militant nature of the meeting.

Bob Ladouceur took the floor, and accused the intelligencer of quoting the proceedings of Local 126 "out of context".

Ladouceur introduced a motion to exclude all members of the press as well as other railway workers present who were not members of Local 126. An amendment to this motion was made after the meeting. The motion, as finally ratified, was to read: "that the railway union executive member be remain, but the three members of the press on hand for the meeting were refused admittance.

Said Ladouceur "I told the press yesterday that I didn't want this newspaper. Do you think this is fair? I understand this meeting is secret. Yesterday I said to hell with the press so I'm saying again, 'Let's throw them out now'."

His motion was carried just prior to the secret ballot to be taken by the members.

President Henry Hall, President of Local 126, said "some of the men might have in mind taking things to the Labor Gazary — to hold out until Tuesday. This would force the government to make a move, one way or the other."

NO CHANGE

At shortly after eleven o'clock this morning, C. H. Fast, CN Rideau Area manager, said that as far as management was concerned "there was no change from yesterday.

"We are sitting here waiting to see what comes out of the local union meetings here and in other centres," he said.

Mr. Fast said that union pickets were still patrolling outside the station and that the "pickets" took about a week apart so to leave Belleville yesterday at noon was still at the station.

A pilot train which left Montreal yesterday morning was forced to stop at Brockville, as had it come on through to Belleville there would have been no trainmen to take it on through.

Trainmen here yesterday refused to cross the picket line set up just before the noon hour.

Through rail traffic between Toronto and Montreal had still not resumed because of the strike situation at Belleville.

Mr. Fast said, however that all passenger service on the Montreal-Ottawa line was in operation while a freight train also was operating on the same line.

Ways to Tighten Economic Noose on Rhodesia--P. M.

By CARMAN CUMMING

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson made clear Friday that he believes there are ways to tighten the economic noose on Rhodesia without resort to force.

On the eve of his departure for the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in London, Mr. Pearson told the House of Commons he could not be wise to take "firm and public positions" on matters that will be discussed.

But he hinted that Canada would favor strengthening sanctions against the white minority government of Premier Ian Smith.

The effect of sanctions so far has been disappointing, he admitted. But there was no doubt that sanctions are "having an effect" on the economy of Rhodesia.

"In my view there are still further steps that could be taken to strengthen economic pressures through sanctions."

STEP IS POSSIBLE

One possible proposal at the conference might be to ask the Rhodesian issue to the United Nations, where mandatory sanctions could be applied.

These would be binding on all members and would bring the U.N. into confrontation with South Africa, chief ally of the Smith regime.

But such sanctions would not imply the use of force in the Rhodesian crisis, Mr. Pearson said, "and I am certain that before any force were attempted ... there would be an examination of whether economic sanctions could be applied and had been applied."

Mr. Pearson's attendance at the London conference was in line with a Throne Speech promise, Mr. Pearson said, that "passage of the strike-ending railway bill would make it possible for him to leave today.

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker said he was happy the prime minister would be able to attend, but he felt it was "very unnecessary" to hold the meeting now.

FIFTH PRIME PROBLEM

Rhodesia was a British problem and responsibility and could not be solved by a prime ministers' conference.

As he had predicted, Mr. Diefenbaker said, the United Nations failed to work. Prime Minister Wilson of Britain had depended on his sanctions policy and "now, apparently, the responsibility is again to be disembodied from the Commonwealth nations."

Mr. Diefenbaker said next week's meeting would be—the third prime ministers' conference this year, adding: "Three meetings in one year is at least one too many. It does not make for unity to meet together regularly and not have anything particularly in mind. . . ."

Social Credit Leader Thompson intervened later to point out that the conference was only the second this year.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the prospect of submitting the question to the United Nations was "not very helpful."

He suggested that Prime Minister Pearson and External Affairs Minister Martin make personal visits to Rhodesia by air at first hand to do that which has not been achieved by the British government.

NDP Leader Douglas disputed Mr. Diefenbaker's statement that the prime ministers' conference was unnecessary now.

"We can destroy the Commonwealth by inaction," he said. "We can not do any harm by having the prime ministers meet."

The NDP leader said the only solution which appeared to be in sight now was the imposition of mandatory economic sanctions by the UN, even though this might mean sanctions against South Africa and Portugal.

This path would involve considerable financial sacrifices by Britain, Mr. Douglas said, but "peace, like everything else, has a price."

At a press conference later in the day, Mr. Pearson brushed aside Mr. Diefenbaker's suggestion that either the prime minister or external affairs minister should go to Rhodesia.

He said Mr. Diefenbaker had started his speech by calling for a probe into British one and ended it by suggesting Canadian interference.

When the conference ends, the prime minister added with a broad grin, "I think I'll come straight home."

PARADES SET

Newfoundland, in the midst of Come Home Year celebrations, has special Navy parades scheduled in St. John's. The holiday is marred by threats of strikes by electrical, carpenters and iron ore workers.

Cardinal Roy opened the Labor Day weekend in Quebec Friday night with a special Mass for labor leaders. The Canadian Labor Congress is also meeting in the city and delegates plan a Labor Day parade.

In his Labor Day message, Premier Jean Lesage said there are "clouds on the horizon of unionism" in Quebec. The leader of the Liberal opposition said Premier Johnson's government was threatening labor with possible nationalization of the Labor Code and "rebirth of the monster of political favoritism."

Air Canada has scheduled 14 extra flights a day from Toronto during the weekend and bus terminals were ready for a heavy influx of passengers.

The Canadian National Exhibition mark the holiday with a special parade of 10,000 union members Monday in a march from a downtown.

ITS FOOTBALL DAY

On the Prairies, sports events include an interlocking Canadian Football League game in Regina with the Saskatchewan Roughriders meeting the Montreal Alouettes.

The weather forecast for the Prairies calls for temperatures in the 70s and mainly sunny skies. Two finals of the Canadian soccer championship tournament will be played today in Winnipeg.

Forestry officials in British Columbia have put restrictions to use extreme caution in the woods during the weekend. A total of 36 new fires was reported in the province last week and dry weather has increased the hazard this weekend.

The Pacific National Exhibition closes Monday and other events include drag race championships at Mission, the Canadian senior lacrosse championships at Nanaimo and in international yacht race in Vancouver.

Must Match Gains in Wages By Productivity

--Nicholson

OTTAWA (CP)—Labor Minister Nicholson warned Friday that gains in wages and working conditions must be matched by gains in productivity if Canadian workers are to enjoy a continued increase in living standards.

In a Labor Day message, he said that despite special problems there are ways open of achieving this aim.

During the last year Canadians had continued to advance and prosper.

Mr. Nicholson said productivity—the measure of output per worker — has not been increasing in recent years at the high rates of the early 1950s and is not matching U.S. increases.

Marchers Will Be Protected By Guardsmen

CICERO, Ill. (AP)—Officials of this tense all-white suburb of Chicago have received assurance from Governor Otto Kerner that 2,000 national guardsmen will be on hand Sunday when civil rights marchers stage a protest march.

Kerner acting Friday on a request from Cicero and Cook County officials ordered the guardsmen, to be joined by local, county and state police.

Robert Lucas, chairman of the Chicago chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality and a leader of the march, said he expects 400 to 600 persons to take part.

Two years ago, three days of rioting resulted when a Negro family tried to move into an apartment in Cicero.

William H. Morris, the head of the Illinois state police, said that the state police will guard the border between Chicago and Cicero while Cicero police line the parade route.

EXPLAINS STAND

Christy Berkos, Cicero town attorney, said he issued a permit for the march because he knew the marchers would proceed without it and he wanted to avoid violence.

A spokesman for the midwest division of the American Nazi Party said party members were to be in Cicero Sunday. The spokesman did not say for what purpose or how many would be here.

In recent weeks, uniformed Nazis have held rallies in all white neighborhoods that were visited by marchers advocating open housing.

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. has given his approval to those who plan to march Sunday, but he has urged their leaders to reconsider.

Maj-Gen. Francis P. Kane, commander of the guard, said:

"The troops will be given the same orders they have had for previous disturbances. If fired upon, they are to return the fire and shoot to kill."

Athletic

weather, a fit bag, a circus, good fishing—all could influence participation.

The program also depends heavily on a teacher's inclination. Many types would power in the setting up of class-rooms. While some may brush off the program, others may drill kids for the next nine months in a bid for coaching fame.

That the standards are fairly tough is indicated in the fact that the nomination has ordered 200,000 of its two-cent cross against 3,300,000 red cents which will go to anybody who doesn't hit gold, silver or bronze standards.

Maenale on how to organize and score the tests are being sent to teachers.

To win a gold crest, a six-year-old should be able to jump four feet, three inches from a standing position. For a child of 12, the standard is six feet, one inch, and for an 18-year-old, seven feet, five inches.

At six, they must do 30 sit-ups in a minute, at 12 a total of 46 and at 18 a total of 52.

They should be able to run 300 yards in times of 70, 59 and 50 seconds.

The cross - country run is scaled from 440 yards in 1:45 for a six-year-old to 1,760 yards from 16 on.

A 14-year-old must do the course in 6:30, an 18-year-old in 6:10.

Standards also are tailored by age for swimming from 25 yards to 100 and for skating from 92 yards to 368.

The long-term plan means a training program, with plenty of helpful hints to student and teacher.

Some eventually are aimed at red crosters. For instance: "When skating for swimming, one skate across the front of the other skate."

For its participation that counts, says the commission. And even red crests will bring the golden memories of the centennial year some day.

Police Cannot Stop Car for Check, Ruled

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP)—A police officer has no legal right to stop a car for a routine check, Kenneth Langdon, chief magistrate for Halton county, ruled Friday as he dismissed charges of obstructing police against Morris Turchynski, 24, of Burlington.

He said the Highway Traffic Act indicates an officer may stop a car only if he is going to charge an occupant with a specific charge as outlined in the act.

Turchynski was a passenger in a car driven by Wendy Johnson, 22, of Oakville on Aug. 28 when the car was stopped by Constable Martin Keene of Burlington police. No reason was given. Turchynski got out of the car and a scuffle ensued.

The magistrate said any citizen has the right to know why he is being stopped by police. He fined Turchynski $100 for creating a disturbance.

Budget Deficit Of $39,000,000 In Fiscal Year

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada finished the 1959-60 fiscal year with a budget deficit of $39,000,000 Finance Minister Sharp announced Friday.

Final figures for the year that ended last March 31 showed revenues of $7,986,000,000 and expenditures of $7,985,000,000.

Work-to-Rule Slowdown Now CBRT Slogan

OTTAWA (CP)—A work-to-rule slowdown is being organized by the officers of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, the national president of the union announced Friday.

W. J. Smith said the CBRT was seeking the support of railroad unions involved in the railways dispute.

There was no immediate explanation of what the work-to-rule plan would involve in railway operation. Generally, it involves strict adherence by unionized workers to all rules and regulations, which has the effect of eliminating any voluntary services and time-saving shortcuts.

The CBRT statement said:

"As a result of our considerations and deliberations the officers of the brotherhood are undertaking to organize and plan a work-to-rule slowdown in our efforts to bring rail management to the bargaining table forthwith to conduct meaningful negotiations in good faith."

The union has 15,000 members on the railways, 21,000 on the CNR and 1,000 on smaller lines, mainly the Ontario Northland.

A handful of CPR employees would be involved at joint CPR-CNR terminals.

The CBRT men are mainly freight handlers, truck delivery men and clerks.

R. C. Smith, chief negotiator for the seven international and operating unions representing about 30,000 workers, largely with the CPR—said the group had no plans to work-to-rule.

"I want to see what Carl Goldenberg is going to do," he said. Mr. Goldenberg, a Montreal lawyer appointed chairman in the rail dispute, "is a pretty good man and I have hopes for a full settlement before too long," Mr. Smith said.

De Gaulle Appears to Have Exploited U. S. Position To Enhance Own Popularity

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

President de Gaulle of France appears to have deliberately exploited a weak and vulnerable United States diplomatic position to enhance his own popularity and prestige among anti-American leaders of Southeast Asia.

There undoubtedly is a great deal of truth in his argument that the people of Asia are unlikely to bow to the power of the West or remain subservient to Western ideas and influence. The people of India and China are made that sanply clear in 1947 and 1949.

But that still leaves the question why de Gaulle, in his cardinal speech at Phnom Penh, Cambodia, should call on the United States to timetable for withdrawal of its forces from South Viet Nam without pleading with Premier Diem to broaden the base of his forces across the border.

The tone of de Gaulle's speech would suggest that when issues of the war must be blamed on American interference — a device that Hanoi and other infuriate Washington which feels it is carrying the torch of freedom despite the lack of support and assistance from indifferent allies.

The de Gaulle argument could, of course, be based on the contention that North and South Viet Nam really make only one country, populated by the same people and that American policy in thwarting the Pacific, represents the only true foreign intruders.

The nicetles of diplomacy would suggest that if de Gaulle seriously had hoped to develop a new approach to an acceptable compromise, he would have communicated the results of his efforts to Washington before making a public announcement.

Instead he chose the public forum, largely to reiterate his old policy. His host, Prince Sihanouk, immediately agreed to the idea that the whole of Indochina be neutralized and all foreign influence withdrawn.

That he knows what they're shooting for is obvious, but two leaders mean "American."

Some British commentators immediately concluded that de Gaulle hoped to achieve in Cambodia was not fresh hope for a Vietnamese settlement but public relations to obliterate the poor reception he received in Djibouti, a split of colonial French and Somalilland, where troops had to bayonet rioting crowds clamoring for independence.

More on Integration

With integration of the armed services now in effect, Defence Minister Hellyer is now battling opposition to the final stage in the process — outright unification.

What the distinction is between the two is a moot point, but presumably it may be regarded as the merging of the three services under one command, with a common uniform and a common rank structure.

At least, that is how retired generals Guy Simonds (chief of the general staff from 1951 to 1955) and Chris Vokes (former chief of Central and Western Commands) view the controversial issue.

They are the latest high-ranking military men to take up the cudgels against Mr. Hellyer's revolutionary changes in the structure of the forces. Being retired, they can speak their minds without fear of retaliation by the government. Unlike Rear-Admiral Landymore and his navy colleagues they are not putting their careers on the line.

"What purpose is to be served by throwing our three services into a common pot. . . ?" is the question posed by the two generals in a joint letter and memorandum which has been made public.

But reading on, the generals arguments seem to contribute little of value to the issue. Their statement that "nothing can possibly be gained by producing a military hybrid who is a jack-of-all-trades and a master of none" does not allow for the fact that integration is a very new and delicate plant which must be given time to mature.

In another part of their memorandum, however, General Simonds and General Vokes do concede that integration should be given a fair trial since it is now in force. Nevertheless, they still have reservations about its potential.

"It must be seen whether it (integration) would stand up under mobilization tests. . ." In this regard the former officers suggest that current Canadian policy is too concerned with peace-keeping tasks to have the forces in shape for mobilization in the event of a major war.

But unification — the throwing of the three services into the generals call "a common pot" — is in their view "something else again." And therein lies the crux of the whole matter. Theirs is the cry of tradition and resistance to change for its own sake. In other words, if integration of the services is not to prove a flop it will have to show ultimately, in addition to the savings Mr. Hellyer says have been effected, a degree of efficiency and esprit de corps that will have made the whole process worthwhile.

Chinese Anarchy

By western standards, the behavior of the so-called Red Guard movement in communist China suggests nothing less than a rabid bunch of witless anarchists.

"The mob is a weak and brainless thing," Irish writer St. John Ervine once said, and nothing could bear out his words more accurately than the events that have been causing so much hysteria in China of late.

Admittedly the fervor of the masses has achieved spectacular results in China. It has given the country a sense of national purpose, instilled a form of discipline unknown anywhere else and accomplished such offbeat successes as the extermination of the fly population, greatly reducing the incidence of disease.

But this selfsame enthusiasm and purposefulness have been manipulated and twisted by the Peking regime for political purposes. This has manifested itself in the form of hate against the United States which has made the Chinese thoroughly convinced that the Americans plan to attack any day.

The Red Guard movement is an extension of this propaganda campaign and is aimed at eradicating western influences within China itself. The deportation of the Western nuns reflects this sudden push to "purify" Chinese society.

However, any sympathy the Peking regime may have drawn to itself by reason of it being refused admittance to the United Nations, or for any other reason, must now have evaporated as a result of the conduct of the young hoodlums who massed on the border to taunt the nuns as they crossed into Hong Kong. The women had not slept for eight days and had been under armed guard during the three-day train trip from Peking to Canton. Two of the nuns fainted after the ordeal and one has since died in hospital.

Whatever is happening in China it is certainly not the evolution of the kind of society the western world can take any comfort in associating with. The incident at the Hong Kong border is typical. Indeed, a kind of political madness seems to have overcome the Chinese masses.

Porphyria Rare Ill And Cannot Be Cured

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am a woman, aged 35, and my problem has been tiredness. The doctor says I have porphyria or porphyrinuria. These of course, are new words to me. He also said it's nothing to really worry about and that it has something to do with the liver. — Mrs. C. C.

• • •

Various chemicals give color to parts of the body. Pigments called porphyrins give blood its red color.

Some individuals cannot tolerate and get rid of these red compounds. It is a rather rare ailment and an inherited trait.

The disease is called porphyria; urine becomes discolored, a dark burgundy, and that is called porphyrinuria.

It is incurable, but its seriousness can vary. Sometimes a person gets over the disease spontaneously. Your problem is to ease or prevent annoying symptoms.

Muscle weakness is one of them, as in your case. Violent abdominal pains are another. Various parts of the body may be affected. The liver is one, as in your case. There can be mental symptoms.

Attacks come and go and your goal (and your doctor's) is to avoid as many of them as possible. Sometimes too much sunshine is one of the problems, so watch out for excessive exposure, especially if your skin seems to be more sensitive as an attack.

You may need sedation at times. However, don't use barbiturates as they can touch off attacks. Tranquilizers may be helpful. Infection also can be triggers, so they should be combated as strongly as practical and pain can influence attacks.

Steroid (cortisone-type) drugs sometimes are tried. If they help, fine, but this cannot be predicted in advance. In some instances removal of the spleen is beneficial. Your doctor should be the judge of whether your case warrants that.

The disease can affect either sex but is much more frequent in women.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have noted that doctors diagnose tumors as carcinoma, sarcoma, angioma, etc., not necessarily all malignant. Why then is the eye disease, glaucoma, called a tumor, but pressure in that organ, is glaucoma really cancer? — A. S.

"Oma" means a growth, or tumor. Carcinoma, sarcoma and others are cancerous; angioma, angina, and many others are not, although all are growths.

Glaucoma was so named in advanced cases the look of the eye has a grayish appearance, hence supposedly a grayish growth in the eye, has become known, but the old name remains. In fact, glaucoma once was used to mean cataracts, which of course is a quite different disorder. Glaucoma has no relation to cancer.

Dear Dr. Molner: Some years ago I read about eating raw egg yolk for gall bladder. — Mrs. C. H.

You certainly didn't read it in this column. First, it wouldn't help. Second, it would always insist that eggs be cooked. In raw eggs there is always a potential risk of germs.

Women In Dentistry

Financial Post

Canada's Labor Force Gazette contains some surprising figures on dentistry as a woman's profession. Barely 2% of the members of the Canadian Dental Association are women. By contrast, a 1958 survey showed that women formed 96% of all dentists in Lithuania; 71% in Russia; 70% in Israel and 8% in Luxembourg. In the U.S., South Africa and New Zealand the figure is only 1%.

To go into the situation further, a study on dental manpower in Canada by Professor Bruce A. McFarlane of Carleton University finds that two-thirds of practising women dentists in Canada were born outside of North America. An estimated 60% came from the Baltic or other European countries.

An American survey advances a variety of reasons why women flight out of the profession. One is that dentistry is regarded as a man's job, requiring physical strength. But much of this feeling may surely date back to the time when people associated dentists more with pulling teeth than with preserving them.

With the great need for dentists it seems obvious that woman power might be tapped. A high proportion of women dentists here are either engaged in public health work or work among children. Plainly there's room, even in that field alone, for many more.

Shadow and Substance

St. Catharines Standard

The tragedy of this age is that so many seem to be willing to trade-in the substance of their traditional liberties for the shadow of security in some shape or form. And, in furtherance of the shadow, jettison tolerance and respect for other men's convictions and rights.

They should be heedful of the warning given by Alexis de Tocqueville more than a century ago: "Habits are formed in the heart of a free country which may some day prove fatal to its liberties."

Haves And Have-Nots

St. Catharines Standard

The most clear-cut division in the world today is between the well-fed and the hungry.

A minority, the 1,000 million or so people living in the highly developed countries of Europe, North America, Australia, New Zealand and Japan enjoy comparative affluence and plenty.

The rest of the world's population, some 2,000 million people, is poorly off. Broadly speaking, these people live in Asia, Africa and Latin America. Many countries in these areas are very poor, many of them are potentially very rich but lack the money needed to develop their natural resources.

The Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations says that 300-400 million people suffer from actual hunger and another 1,000 million suffer from malnutrition.

Worried MPs Consider Lowering the Boom

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Back at work a week now, the Honorable Members, their Summer holidays cut from the initially-planned three months to less than two, are in a strange new mood.

It is an odd blend of embarrassment and frustration.

Embarrassment that easily foreseen events have caught them out. And far out, holidaying when they should have been coping with situations they themselves have thrust upon the Capital could develop into something approaching national calamities.

Frustration that there is no instant cure for the plague of strikes that has slithered the economy with a fever of inflation — no cure at least that they yet have the political courage to administer. It isn't just the railway strike, but the whole eruption of labor unrest, much of it violent, some of it bordering on anarchy.

Confronted by the continuing explosion of crisis, the MPs are deeply worried, even maybe a little frightened, too.

NO SECRET

When they adjourned last July 15 to holiday until October 8 — and by and large they have — not any other name, the Prime Minister himself has referred to it as the Parliamentary vacation — they were very well, even acutely aware of three critical crunch-cases.

There was the railway dispute headed even then, as Labor Minister Allmand and Pitcher conceded, for a strike.

There was the runaway cost-of-living with the DBS Consumer Price Index at a new record altitude of 144.3 in a dizzy level where even "low lousy living" as an angry housewife called it when she shipped it to the Prime Minister, cost $1,000 a year.

And there was the Armed Forces unification issue.

These were the three big ones — although there was no shortage of not much less urgent problems, from pollution to the petition in the public interest.

But the Honorable Members, Government and Opposition, playing like a team, turned their backs, and beheld their holidays, headed for the hills of home.

You should hear them talk now.

About integration of the Services, and the rising costs. And especially about strikes.

Like most other Canadians, the MPs are sick of a lot of things. But they are particularly nauseated by union leaders who can't control the wild-catters, by mediators who don't mediate and by the general labor malaise that more and more this Summer has erupted fire, bombs, beatings and sabotage as legitimate strike weapons.

With government — federal and provincial — blessing, the strike fever has been infecting the public service.

And you should hear some of the MPs — who like their provincial MLA counterparts are responsible for it — now.

When postal workers refuse to deliver the mails, the MPs concede it is something approaching a revolution in responsibility.

When striking teachers threaten the livelihood of children's students, it is a social revolution.

When hospital staffs walk out, it is a revolution of morality.

When a gang of longshoremen can tie up the St. Lawrence and imperil the nation's multi-million dollar wheat contracts, it is economic blackmail — and off by a Prime Minister in a 30 percent wage-deal that set the match to a whole string of strike firecrackers.

But it is worse when 130,000 railwaymen, in the second time in 16 years, are in a position to bring the country to its economic knees.

Saying all these alarming things, some of them true, one may be in a mood to do something beyond having strikes outlawed. And that is what, instead, repair the broken-down labor legislation to solve disputes short of the wild-cat.

Embarrassed, frustrated, deeply worried and even perplexed Parliamentarians left Ottawa from a guilt complex. For votehungry, they shied along, secure in the belief that no matter how vicious the tax rates already were, the cost of strike settlements could always be charged to the national treasury.

Now, for a sudden change, they are thinking and openly talking of the urgent need for a measure of discipline.

Australians In Viet Nam

Montreal Gazette

The heaviest of the defence commitments of Australia at present is in Viet Nam, where it has 8,000 soldiers and airmen. It is one of the United States' strongest supporters in that controversial war.

The strategic location of Australia makes it sensitive to the political situation in Asia. During Indonesia's confrontation of Malaysia, trying to contain the maladies of President Sukarno.

Now that the Indonesian confrontation seems to be at an end the Australians can turn their whole attention to Viet Nam. The increase in the defence budget indicates that they are doing this.

Beside the United States' commitment to Viet Nam, the Australian contribution is relatively small. But it is the support for the American policy and the American aims which makes the Australian contribution valuable to the United States.

He Thinks of The Victims

I'll tell you, I feel like kicking these fellows up. I've got guys up there doing 30 years to life wishing they could cut my throat and I'm not going to be baby. I don't feel bad about them at all. Because I think of the victims.

"I went for a long time on a case, once, and somewhere near the end of the district attorney says to me, 'George, what's the name of the victim, the victim's family?' I started to say no deep le litigation that no one could remember the name of the victim. Whenever I start to feel sorry for these animals I think of the victims, and I'm all right again. But most of the cops today don't think of the victims. They don't want to get involved." — New York detective George Barrett, from an article in life, quoted by Reader's Digest.

The top 30 students graduating from Montreal Protestant high schools this year all had better than 90 percent averages in high school leaving examinations (equivalent to Grade 13 in Ontario).

Twenty of the 30 and all of the first 12 scholars were boys and the best of them all was 16-year-old Geoffrey Goodfellow with a 97.8 average, believed also to be a provincial record. Geoffrey had three perfect 100s and his lowest mark was 94 (geometry), but he says he didn't work particularly hard except during the last two weeks.

"During the year I do the homework and just a little bit of studying," he explained. He is

U.K. Women in Decline

Regina Leader - Post

A professor at Oxford University came up with some figures the other day to show that many British women are unable to such an extent within 20 years that the practice of polygamy may have to be considered in Great Britain.

Polyandry defines the situation where one woman has a number of husbands or mates at the same time.

Solomon had 700 wives and ever since it has been considerary for Near East sheiths to set that target for themselves, nobody else has matched him to date because they didn't have his staying powers. He also had 300 concubines, just to be having and had scores to money.

With the situation changed, if the professor is right, the women of Britain will have something good going for them by the year 2000. They'll be able to pick and choose as never before. With five or six husbands all bringing home pay envelopes and each one vying for her favors, a woman will be able to play Solomon in reverse. And she may need some of his wisdom to keep peace in the family now and then, particularly if she happens to be a Flo and winds up with six Andy Capps of cartoon fame.

Investors' Watchdog

Financial Post

Investors who are well informed and adequately protected can make a tremendous contribution to economic growth. Theirs is the capital which builds plants and finances enterprises. It will only be forthcoming if investors are confident they will get fair breaks that enable them to preserve. A federal securities act could cooperate with provincial commissions to ensure adequate and regulatory checks that commissions of smaller provinces might not be able to afford—but which adequate investor protection demands. It could provide the uniformity needed to bring about better securities laws and high standards right across the nation.

Carved teakwood furniture was shown at the St. Louis Exposition in 1904. This chair was in the Chinese exhibit at the fair and was sold to benefit Chinese charity.—(Cole County Historical Society, 109 Madison St., Jefferson City, Missouri).

Carved Oriental Teak Was Furniture Fad During 1904

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Oriental teakwood furniture was a fad in this country after the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis, Missouri in 1904. The Chinese exhibit at the exposition had heavy, black, teakwood furniture with dragons and pagodas featured in the carving.

This type of furniture became very popular for a short time and examples of it can still be found in many homes.

Some of the teak pieces had inlaid mother of pearl. Other similar furniture was made of rosewood stained black.

Q. I have a toy that intrigues me. It has a small head made of lead and about 1½ inches overall. The "mouth" opens to receive a cap like those used in cap pistols. The head is hung on a string. When it is slammed against a hard surface, the cap is fired. Was this a common toy? How old is it?

A. You own a "toy cap exploder," patented by C. Coester Jr. in 1876. After 1870 toy makers began making many types of cap exploders. A repeating cannon and many other guns and toys appeared. In the late 1870's and 1880's all sorts of animated figures were made that could hold caps. The dog's head, Yellow Kid, Admiral Dewey, Washington, monkey, liberty bell, and powder barrel were just a few of the designs.

Several companies including E. R. Ives of Ives and Grey Iron Casting Co. of Connecticut made these toys.

Q. My Dad just purchased a "tierdo" that is a brown square bottle. One side is printed in big glass "Lash's Bitters." The other side has the words "Natural Tonic Laxative."

A. Lash's Bitters was a tonic-like medicine that was first made in 1884. It must have made you feel just fine because it was "23 percent alcohol by volume." The firm was still working in 1913 in "New York, Chicago, and San Francisco."

BOOK REVIEW

"English Furniture" by Margaret Mae Donald - Taylor (Putnam $8.95) is a newly published book about a well studied subject.

"Adam and Hepplewhite and other New-Classical Furniture" by Musgrave (Taplinger $17.50) is a beautiful book about toys of the 18th century English furniture.

Women Do Most Smuggling

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) When it comes to robust smuggling, the culprit is usually a woman, says a woman customs and excise officer here.

One of Abbie Flinn's posts is at the Rainbow bridge linking this city with Niagara Falls, N.Y.

"We've had people trying to smuggle in things as large as television sets," Miss Flinn says. "But more often I am appalled at the junky toys and cheap souvenirs they will bring back."

Residents who have been out of Canada for 48 hours or more and returning from the United States may import $25 worth of certain goods free of duty every four months.

Long, coiled hair used to hide extra money back in the currency restriction days of the late 1940s, when Miss Flinn was new at her job. Shoes were another favorite hiding place.

STANDARD ANSWERS

The customs officer said three stock answers are offered in defence of attempted smuggling:

—I forgot all about having the item.

—I didn't understand the regulations.

—Someone else must have put it in the car.

Cutting labels out of new clothing and sewing in old ones is a favorite ruse with women. It doesn't work because customs officers can spot amateur stitchers.

A woman may argue that a coat she has just bought is three months old. But the examining officer can tell the buttonholes have never been used.

Miss Flinn recalled one woman who wore 11 fee shirts on a recent trip across the bridge. The traveller stoutly maintained it was because it was a cold day.

Some cars are given a cursory examination. Others receive a detailed inspection. Customs officials say they have no set system.

"I've often wondered, myself, how we figure out whom to stop," says Miss Flinn. "It's not the way people answer questions . . . it's an intuition . . . something is wrong with this car."

MADE INDECENT CALLS

ANN LANDERS

Hairy Son Called Ape, Should Accept Facts

DEAR ANN LANDERS—My husband died when our son was two years old. Mike is now 17 and I am very proud of him. His scholastic record is excellent and he has earned recognition in sports.

Mike has always enjoyed swimming and he used to go to the pool often until this year. When I noticed he was making up excuses not to go with his friends I became suspicious. Yesterday I learned the reason and now need your advice.

Mike was mowing the lawn when one of his friends walked by and yelled, "Hi, Ape. Tried out for any Tarzan pictures lately?"

Mike's face turned crimson. He did not answer. I asked Mike what it was all about. He replied, "I have hair growing all over my back shoulders and the kids call me "Ape."

Do you recommend shaving, hair removal creams or perhaps electrolysis in a case such as this? Please tell me what is best for my son. — R.R.R.

DEAR R.R.R. — Shaving, hair removal creams or electrolysis is no answer where a man's back and shoulders are involved.

Mike needs to talk to someone who can get through to him and make him accept his hairiness without shame. This will not be easy since his friends have already made him extremely self-conscious. Ask your family doctor for guidance.

DEAR ANN LANDERS—My children are 5, 7 and 5. Their father has a hot temper and when they misbehave he really wallops them.

The kids are afraid of their daddy. When they do something wrong they beg me not to tell him. I usually say, "O.K. if you promise not to do it again."

Yesterday the two older ones were playing with matches. I caught them twice. They promised to do it again if I didn't tell daddy. Am I overprotecting my children?—UNDECIDED.

DEAR UNDECIDED — You are under-protecting your children and I hope you see this answer before somebody catches on fire.

Don't make deals with those kids. Work on your husband to be less harsh with them. You'll have better children and a better marriage.

DEAR ANN LANDERS—For years our mother complained about aches and pains although extensive examinations failed to show anything organically wrong. She also lied constantly. We all covered up for her because we believed she was a mental case.

Last month a psychiatrist told us that mother's mind is perfectly O.K. and that she has kept us all under her thumb by pretending to be ill.

My brother and sister and I are furious. We have decided to tell our friends the truth. Father continues to lie and says since she is our mother we should lie, too.

I say he is encouraging us to do wrong, and, mother or no mother, we do not owe her that. What do you say? — HONORABLE BETTY.

DEAR BETTY — It's hard to believe a psychiatrist told you your mother's mind is "perfectly O.K." If he did, he must have played hooky the day his class studied hypochondria.

Any person who continually complains about aches and pains when the physician can find no organic illness is ill in the head and this can be more crippling than an organic disease.

Your lack of compassion is revolting.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problem. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self - addressed envelope.

for the price of a morning paper electricity can cook your breakfast for three months

It's a fact. A dime's worth of electricity will make three months worth of bacon and egg breakfasts for two people. That's the kind of bargain you get with electricity.

Low-cost electricity has hundreds more uses today than it had back in 1906 when hydro first began. Yet, surprisingly enough, it costs less now than it did then. As a matter of fact, you pay less for electrical power here in Ontario than you would almost anywhere else in the world. Any way you figure it, electricity is the biggest bargain in your family budget.

The above example is based on the average cost to Ontario Municipal residential customers of 1.15¢ net per kilowatt-hour.

Successful Living

Says Don't Wait For Miracle, Prize Every Precious Day

DEAR DORIS — A dear friend of mine is suffering from a muscular illness; it is hereditary in her case. She feels she is doomed, and that there is no permanent cure. She is middle aged.

I tell her in this day of miracles, doctors will find a cure. She has a specialist on the case now. What do you think? —UNHAPPY FRIEND.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR FRIEND — To hold out for a miracle seems to be shrieking it. Doctors are highly skilled and may indeed bring about the seemingly impossible; but who am I to even hint this, while knowing nothing of your friend's disease?

I will say this: that many thousands walk around for years with a death sentence hanging over the heads, and have a very good time of it. Most of us have one or another handicap.

What about the heart case who lives to ninety? And the diabetic who administers his own insulin and carries on into a productive old age?

Then there are the crippled arthritics, the stomach ulcers, the amputees of various kinds who love life and get a lot out of it.

The doctor says the way to live to a ripe old age is to get yourself an incurable disease and take care of it. Otherwise we tend to dissipate God-given health!

Aren't we all doomed for that matter? It is quite likely there'll be younger people in your friend's acquaintance who will die before she does. Urge her not to hasten death with her pessimism. Help her to prize every precious day.

DEAR DORIS — Someone asked you for information on the War on Poverty.

There was an excellent article "Our Invisible Poor" by Alan Phillips in MacLean's of February 20, 1960.

The sub-heading reads "The paradox of poverty: the expanding gross national product we so proudly hail as the index of our affluence has inflicted a startling backlash poverty on millions of rural Canadians."

Several people I have told have obtained the issue of MacLean's from their reference library. — May Neal, Saskatchewan Department of Welfare, Regina.

DEAR MAY — Thank you. Quite a number have written in for the Hamilton material and will be glad to know about this article.

DEAR DORIS — Some time ago you carried an item which suggested that free riders make a contribution to gas or give the car owner an occasional gift. This could be costly.

If a rider pays a little a week, this puts the car in the class of a commercial vehicle. If there is an accident, the insurance company may well disclaim responsibility unless the car is insured for commercial use.

One man was sued for damages of $12,000 after having accepted two dollars from a passenger. — LEGAL BOOMERANG.

DEAR LEGAL — Thank you. My legal consultant considers that an occasional gift would not be seen as the purchase of a ride. But if a driver invested such monies in the additional insurance, this could be a great blessing in the event of an accident.

(Longer, fuller replies went privately to those correspondents who enclosed a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Octogenarian Honored at Party

Mrs. William A. Wannamaker was entertained by her family at a surprise party in honor of her 80th birthday, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Scott, 16 Elvins Garden, Belleville.

A three-tiered birthday cake centred the white linen covered tea table. Those pouring tea were Mrs. G. Welsh, Mrs. J. Homan, Mrs. William Scott, Mrs. F. Thrasher, Mrs. M. Wannamaker and Mrs. S. Homan. Among those who served were the grandaughters of the guest of honor: Jane and Ruth Wannamaker, Jo-Anne Scott and Carol Homan, Mrs. F. Rushlow was in charge of the guest book.

Mrs. Wannamaker was the recipient of many gifts, including a matched jewelry set from her family.

Guests were present from Lakefield, Florida, Havelock, Queenboro, Trenton, Foxboro, Halloway, Frankford, Corbyville and Belleville.

SCHOOL HOUSE CHARM

Teacher: "Why are the days shorter in winter than in summer?"

Pupils: "During the cold winter months, the days get cold and contract. In the summertime, they get hot and expand." — N.Y. Times concerning a true incident in Lamar, Miss.

Although unknown to us, this is an innocent, with a "come-hither" looking road. So we drive down its leafy cathedral-roofed length, today, while enjoying the late summer countryside surrounding Belleville.

Upon following a graceful curve, behold! — a small green valley, just wide and long enough to accommodate a white frame country school house, located on a country road between Belleville and Trenton.

It is a sight as lovely as it is unexpected.

Tall and stately stands the school, richly endowed in a canopy of shapely elms and maples, of distant hill vistas, of plowed fields, of an apple orchard, of a meadow brook, of LOTS of wild flowers. Rather like roughhewn paradise, especially furnished, that adolescent inquiring senses may explore: Where Nature's invisible fingers fashion the feet of rail fences with snow draperies or frost small pools or assign assorted colors to her flowers from the modest buttercup to showy scarlet-blossoms delicately tinged with pink.

Where the orchestra of leaves and of AIR plays the baton of the wilder command; where the brook faithfully chants its endless litany; Where the green moss embosses the bark like velvet; where a luxury of scented seasons are individually monogrammed with foot - prints of tiny woodland and field furred creatures.

The school house, couched in beauty, dedicated to the achievement of the "Three R's" by sterling effort, and wed with childhood's golden rapport with the world of nature, the joyful gasps of discovery over its secret treasures, and subtly implant in ardent hearts cherished shrines to grace adult hood and years.

The road bends. The white Shangri-la for elementary learning disappears as swiftly as it appeared.

But bathed in the lilt and charm of its atmosphere, the vision lingers, endears and recalls by its warmth and homliness, an old Lancashire poem:

"Give us, Lord, a bit o' sun,
A bit o' work, an' a bit o' fun;
Give us health our keep to make,
An a bit to spare for poor folk's sake;
Give us, too, a bit of a song,
An' a tale, an' a book, to help us along;
An' give us our share o' sorrow's lesson,
That we may prove how grief's a blessin'.
Give us, Lord, our chances to be
Our gradely best for oursels an' others,
Till all men lars to live as brothers."

A Lift For Living

Work Can Be a Curse But More Often Blessing

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

If God had left the creation of the universe up to you, would you have included in the makeup of the world the necessity to work? Many people would not, for they regard work as a curse. . . .

Of course, work can be a curse. When it means monotonous, meaningless, fruitless, futile toil, the mind may rebel in bitterness.

Work seems like a curse when it is done under compulsion, rather than willingly, and for ends of which the worker cannot approve. Whenever men are exploited by an economic system they are cursed by work, as are some sharecroppers who are purposefully kept in heavy debt to the landowner so that they cannot escape to independence.

And men are profaned by their labors where the conditions of industry are such that the inhale and bodies of the workers are stunted, as was true with little children who worked in factories in the early days of the industrial revolution in England and in America.

But while work can be a curse, it is more often a blessing. In fact, it is a vital moral and emotional necessity if a person is to maintain sound spiritual and psychological health. The virility of man has not developed in the tropics where the creature comforts are easily available with a minimum expenditure of thought and energy.

STURDIER STUFF

The temperate zones, where nature has compelled men to struggle for a living, have produced sturdier stuff in human beings. Hardship has developed hardihood. So closely connected are advanced civilization and hongest-tail that we can expect civilization to weaken, totter, and collapse if hard, purposeful work ever goes out of style.

Work is a primary human need because it provides an element of contrast that makes pleasures both possible and meaningful. Only the hard worker knows the pleasure of rest.

Moreover, work provides the necessary link between aspiration and fulfillment. A person sees what he wants, or finds evidences of human need, and he hopes his desires will be satisfied or that the needs may be relieved. Then work sets out to meet and to answer desire and need. Work feeds the hungry, clothes the naked, enlightens the mind and inspires the heart.

Again, hard work, rightly used, helps form strong character, I suppose God could have given us easy answers for all our questionings and spared us the necessity of searching, seeking, working. We would then be like the youngster who faces his final examinations in school with the disadvantage of having parents who have insisted on doing all his homework for him. The lad is, wholly unprepared for testing. The hard work of learning is necessary preparation for life's testings.

FOR SOUL'S SAKE

The Creator arranged matters not for our convenience, but for our soul's sake. The best things of life are not easily obtained. If they were, life would soften rather than strengthen us. Life demands labor, and physical and mental work are here not to curse us but to bless us.

While drudgery damns us with boredom and bitterness, because it is labor without meaning, significant work blesses us by drawing our attention outside ourselves. When we have nothing worthwhile to do we are like machines running without a load, shaking themselves to pieces. So unused nervous energy turns inward and is squandered on discontents, foolish fears, idle wishes, self-pity and other disintegrating occupations. Worthwhile work is a preventive and cure for overmuch self-interest.

Lastly, in useful work we find fellowship with God. Every devout person should have hanging over his door, or at least over his mind, a sign reading, "At work: God and Company, Builders." For God is a Creator, and man is a builder, too, when he is at his best.

Studdert Kennedy, a British poet and chaplain in World War One, described what he expected of the Last Judgment. When he stood before the Eternal One he expected God to ask him especially his handling of life: "Well, what did you make of it?"

This is the next to the biggest question one can ask about his life's work. "What did you make of it?" A still greater question is, "What did you become by it?" Stronger? Better? A partner with God?

Lighting the Way

IF WE ARE UPSIDE - DOWN

Miss Edna Lawrence of Belvidere, Illinois, was threatened with arrest by the Pontiac Illinois police, for failure to pay a parking ticket. She knew something was wrong, for she had never been in Pontiac. Then, an insurance company called her about a recent traffic accident. Again, something had to be wrong, for she had never been in a mishap.

She finally learned from State Police what the trouble was. Charles E. Harsha of Wilwood, Illinois, had received a parking ticket in Pontiac, and was also in an accident. He had been displaying his 1964 automobile license plate upside down. His number was 660-898; her number was 868-099.

Each one of us exerts an influence upon others, for good or bad. If we are upside-down . . . when our thinking and conduct is not right . . . we are not only get ourselves into trouble, but we are making life difficult for others. Conversely, mentally and morally, we owe it to ourselves as well as to others, to keep right side up.

TEXT FOR TODAY: "None of us liveth to himself." (Romans 14:7)

Lines on Life

Know Yourself

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

"Identify yourself!"

When we want to claim something from the Post Office, or to pay by cheque in a place where we are not known, or when we cross from one country to another, this is the imperative we must satisfy. The implied question is clear: "Who are you, so that we can know, for sure, it is you and no one else?"

In such simple cases, of course, the explicit act we are asked to perform quickly answers the question. We can easily establish our identity by showing a driver's license, a passport, or some other official document which lists our name, address, date of birth and perhaps some physical characteristics of our person. Together these facts are intended to tell us apart from anyone else. Pictures, photos, signatures establish an identity. They are fixed and definite.

But is that who we are? Are things that simple? Is our identity, in fact, established by these artifacts? Far from it.

Psychologically, things are otherwise. Many of us feel that we are travelling through life on forged passports, living in disguise under an assumed identity. We wish that we could have a fixed and definite identity. We long to reflect in the mirror of our souls the image we cast outward. Physically, we can prove who we are with a simple paper form. But spiritually-sensitive people are often plagued by most simple questions, which, alas, have no simple answers: "Am I the person I say I am?" "Am I the man people think I am?" "Is this really me?"

HARD TO KNOW

We are, of course, expert at knowing who others are or are not. With our minds we penetrate the most perplexing problems — problems external to ourselves. We successfully explore vast and complex enterprises. It is quite a different thing to penetrate the real "me" living within the four walls of my own skin. It is not easy to live inside out!

Perhaps the single major reason for this disability is the fact that our mass society encourages us to play the role of spectator rather than to engage life as a willing participant. As a result, in almost every area of our private lives, we have the feeling that we are looking on, watching what is happening to us, as if it were not happening to us. We go around with the eerie, uncanny feeling that we can do nothing to change, what is, in fact, changing us.

Maybe we can't change the world. Maybe we can't enter into intimate, crucial relationships with the larger problems that beset our time. But more and more of our own selves to discover, and to make still more desirable, and what is more, an achievable goal.

Politics and international decisions have indeed made us into faceless statistics, powerless in the teeth of mass conflicts. Still, there is more to us than our social, civic, or political sides.

Remember: we are fathers and mothers, husbands and lovers, sisters and brothers, teachers and students, friends and neighbors. If we can see them precisely in our relationships as these — we may yet recover something of our lost identity.

We may find it in the home and on the street where we live.

One-Time Pro Footballer Pastor of Church for Deaf

TORONTO (CP)—Rev. Robert Rumball preaches without saying a word.

Once a professional football player for Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Argonauts, Mr. Rumball is pastor of the Evangelical Church of the Deaf, with a regular congregation of 125.

The services are given in sign language, and this is what amazed Mr. Rumball in 1956 when, as a young 26-year-old minister, he was invited to preach there for the first time. He was unforgettably "at a loss for words" and found myself talking to myself. The congregation didn't look at me—they looked at the interpreter who communicated my message through sign language."

Later he was invited to become their regular minister and faced learning sign language himself, which usually takes three to five years to master. He told the church board he was looking for a sign from God that this ministry was for him. Then, after only a month, he was asked to interpret in court for a deaf defendant and understood the task after seeing the judge he doubted he could handle it.

"I had no trouble at all," Mr. Rumball said. "I went home and told my wife this must be where we belonged.

"The strange part of it was that my wife learned the language almost as quickly. Just conversing with me," and now the four Rumball children know sign language as well.

"Our psychologist friends say the secret was simply that we were highly motivated. But we call it God."

'SING' IN SILENCE

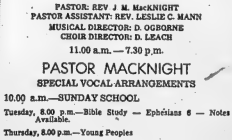
Worship in the Deaf Church takes place in absolute silence but with lusty readings, a sermon, and even hymns "sung" without a sound.

"Yes, deaf people love to sing," says Mr. Rumball.

"Deaf people have no conception of melody but they have plenty of rhythm and the heart of singing is sign language is rhythm. The movements are more graceful than in speaking."

His congregation dates back to 1872 and membership is restricted to the deaf.

"I'm not a member and have no official vote in church because I'm not deaf," says the minister.



He was ordained by the United Church but the Deaf Church is interdenominational.

On weekdays Mr. Rumball is a sort of mofficial spokesman for the city's deaf.

He interprets in courts and a few years ago faced a theatre audience wearing white gloves, to put into sign language the entire movie sound track of Ben Hur.

His most unusual assignment was in an operating theatre, conveying messages between the surgeon and his deaf patient, who was under a local anesthetic.

Old Fashioned Grading System Disappearing from Schools

By DONALD PHILLIPSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

About 525,000 young Canadians will register in Grade 1 this fall but the odds are not one will reach Grade 12.

By the time they reach the last year of high school, the whole grade system will probably have disappeared or have been changed out of all recognition.

Saskatchewan and Quebec have both announced plans to end the old system. In the former it is being replaced by four divisions of three years each and "subject promotion" is the new policy in the eastern province.

By this method, if a student fails one or two subjects, he won't have to repeat the whole set for the grade all over again. Ontario teachers, most of them relieved that the end of Grade 13 departmental examinations has been officially announced, expect to use a similar system.

FRENCH STARTS YOUNG

French is becoming available to more primary school children, although the beginning level still varies from Grade 1 to kindergarten in different parts of Canada.

Montreal schools for English-speaking families start French normally in Grade 4 but there are experimental classes in lower grades and in Nova Scotia, where Grade 7 is the last, some schools begin at Grade 5.

Grade 9 used to be the starting point in British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan, but cities in all three provinces are lowering the current Grade 6 or 7. In Manitoba the regular program begins in Grade 7 but some experimental French classes are held in Grades 1, 2, 3, and 4.

In the West, until limits French teaching is lack of teachers, British Columbia is short of 300 teachers in all departments and Howard Loewen of the Manitoba Teachers' Society estimates that 15 per cent of last year's 1,200 teachers have left the province.

There's a similar problem in Quebec where women but a shortage of 500 male teachers. It is the first year without graduates of the new abolished two-year teachers, course.

New Brunswick is short of French - speaking teachers, though the English-speaking districts have enough, and there is a real crisis in Newfoundland five areas of affiliated systems report vacancies double last year's. One reason appears to be Memorial University's abolition of tuition fees, which has noticed away young people's academic flow to improve their own qualifications.

FIND LARGE AND SMALL

The Salvation Army's school system in Newfoundland is one of Canada's tiniest with 9,000 students. Prince Edward Island's is the smallest provincial system, with fewer than 30,000, while Ontario expects to enrol 1,778,700 students this year.

The whole school population now exceeds 5,000,000, so diversity and variety is to be expected.

In Ottawa it's computer mathematics in Grade 11 of course. In British Columbia, R's the 44-character reading alphabet, tried out last year in six schools and to be used in 40 this year. Invented in England, it is to bridge between the sound of words and their look on paper. Young sters learn to read faster and change to the conventional alphabet after a couple of years.

Newfoundlanders too are looking forward to new ideas. A brand - new mathematics course will become universal in 1967 but many schools have asked to start it this year.

In British Columbia, the whole high school syllabus was revised in 1960 and this year's Grade 12 classes are the first o have worked their the way right through it.

Every where, educational television has developed more slowly than was expected, but its uses are increasing. For example, Ottawa's board plans to give every Grade 2 child at least one French lesson on TV this year.

Without calling it "new math," Nova Scotia is revising its mathematics curriculum for kindergarten and Grades 1, 2, 7 and 10, and modernizing high school biology, physics, German and economics.

The post-war "baby boom" has by now been absorbed into the primary schools so it is high schools that have to expand next. The Millidgeville school, near Saint John, N.B., plans a campus of 250 acres for 3,500 students, with 21 buildings distributed in a checkerboard pattern.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

How Wives Might Collect On Husbands' Pensions

By THOMAS COLLINS

This is for the wives of men who are now between the ages of 59 and 65.

It ought to be for their husbands, too. But husbands don't like to read this sort of thing. Which is one reason why so many older widows have to live with their children.

As the wife of a man who is now getting within shouting distance of retirement, you have a very serious stake in whatever pension his employer is going to pay him. Because this pension is probably not just a no-strings-attached nest for the rest of life, but a many-splendored thing that could keep you independent and sassy to age 86.

Nearly all pension plans are different. But, in general, working men are given several choices as to the manner in which their pensions will be paid to them . . . or to their wives.

These choices, in a typical situation, would be about as follows: According to the Institute of Life Insurance, which keeps tab on such things:

Straight life income — The husband lets nature take its course, takes no action himself, and starts drawing his full pension for life following his retirement.

Joint and survivor pension— The husband applies to his employer for a split in his pension that will provide both him and his wife a lifetime income.

In an average situation, the husband would be, say, 65 and his wife 62. He would be entitled to a full pension of $100 a month. Under this plan his pension would be reduced about one third, and a cheque for about $67 a month would be coming into the house until both husband and wife died.

Joint and two-thirds survivor pension — the husband applies for a different kind of split in his pension. Again he is 65, his wife is 62, and his full pension would be $100. He elects to take a one-fifth cut in this pension, or $80 a month, and a cheque for this sum will come into the house as long as both the husband and wife live. Then when either dies the survivor would get two-thirds of the $80 for life, or about $53 a month.

GUARANTEE FOR WIFE

Guaranteed period pension — The husband elects at 65 to take a 3 percent cut in his $100 pension and thus guaranteed that the pension will continue to his wife for 10 years if he should die. If he should die at 67, for instance, his wife would continue to get his same cheque for eight more years.

Now these pension options are only a general idea of what most working husbands can get. It would not be wise for a wife to demand that her husband go pick up any one of the plans given here because his employer might have a dozen different kinds of options. It is generally true, however, that any modern employer has in his pension system some plans for the protection of the wife after the husband dies.

A few other pointers about a husband's pension:

— If he has contributed, any money to his own pension, and if he dies shortly after retirement, that part of his contribution remaining is usually paid in a lump sum to the wife.

— Most employers require that a husband apply for any option to benefit his wife at least two years or somet i m e s five years before retirement. Some husbands after they decide to pass and thus by default fail to provide a lifetime income for their wives.

— The husband with the $100 pension who elects to cut it by a third, to $67, to insure his wife a lifetime income is likely to be stuck with the $67 for the rest of his life if his wife outlives her later. He'll not get his $100 back. But it is usually the husband, not the wife, who dies first.

SWIMMING CLASSES OVER

NAPANEE — The Red Cross Swimming and Water Safety classes in Lennox and Addington are over for the year. Tests were made, and awards were won by 148 children who had attended the morning classes at Bath, and by 142 who took the classes afternoon classes at Beaver Lake. In all, 400 took the classes.

At the Beaver Lake classes there were 58 tadpole graduates, 49 beginners, 21 juniors, 12 intermediates and three seniors graduated.

Erik Poulsen was the chief swimming instructor for the summer. Classes were held from mid-July in the bay of Quinte for children in and near Napanee during July.

GLIDER DROPS IN

Napanee had a weekend visitor who was not here by choice. Wilf Price Deshaurat of Toronto, last year's national glider champion, left Bellwood's Lake, 30 miles northeast of Toronto, about noon, intending to land at Gananoque. He sighted two landing strips near the village of Peterborough, and decided to land at Napanee instead. He came down near the intersection of Highways 401 and 41, his glider making a perfect landing in a field.

FAMILY STILL VICTIMIZED

It was the same old story at the home of Miss Shirley Johnston Thursday night. In spite of the fact that everybody is on the watch, vandals managed to get open a side window, but they were frightened off before the police arrived. Evidently they are watching the house closely and are familiar with everything that is going on. One boarder was away, and into hiding, unseen he thought, when a stone was hurled at him. Only telephone calls are still coming in.

"It's a pity to have an innocent family involved like this," Constable Tom McCrae says. "The Johnstons have had nothing to do whatever to do with the CIL, and yet we are sure it is irresponsible strikers who are making life miserable for them. I just wish we could catch them."

Dunk Jaycees To Raise Funds At Lennox Fair

NAPANEE — The Napanee and District Jaycees are planning to create a bit of fun at the Lennox Fair, and at the same time to raise a bit of money which will be used, as always, for some community project.

They are selling tickets on a post 58 inches high and 12 feet in diameter, and the winner will be announced on the day the last night of the Fair.

Meanwhile, during the three days of the fair the post will be put to good use. A trap door is built over it and one after another, a Jaycee will be perched on that door. When he is hit by any one of the five balls anybody can buy at the poolside the trap door springs and the Jaycee down get a dunking.

Mike Knott, who is chairman of the project, says the Jaycees are hesitant about asking any of the town dignitaries to participate, but they are hoping to secure some of each.

Canadian Markets Fall Again After a Three-Day Recovery

By LARRY DWORKEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Investor hopes that Canada's stock markets might be on the road to recovery this week were set back when a three-day rally didn't extend through Friday.

Most analysts a g r e e d the rally would be of short duration and that it was something more than a technical recovery resulting from an oversold position.

David Frame, an analyst with J. H. Crang and Co, said "nothing has happened which could account for any sustained recovery."

"Interest rates are still high and the market hasn't experienced a selling climax which historically signals the end of a major skimp."

At Toronto, the industrial index, an indicator of how key stocks move, eased .16 to 146.71. At Montreal, the index lost .49 to 144.81.

However, volume remained light with only 13,395,893 shares changing hands compared with 13,291,222 last week.

LOWEST SINCE 1964

Plunging prices on the Toronto stock exchange Monday sent the industrial index to its lowest level since March 31, 1964 when it touched 144.39.

The slide, paced by the New York Exchange, was heightened by the countrywide railway strike.

However, on Tuesday the market started its rally behind the strength of the New York Market.

The index made its shortest rise Wednesday, climbing 1.42 points but only added .30 Thursday.

Among major losers were Argus, down 2¼ to 16, Canada Cement 1 to 26, Bell of Canada 5¼ to 132 and Alcan ½ to 39¼.

CPR jumped 1¼ to 56½, despite the rail strike, on appraisal it would benefit if management continuing subsidies that would help the company meet its labor bill without seriously affecting earnings.

General Motors moved up 3 to 85 and Sicley, which recently settled a wage dispute, ¼ to 22¾.

BANKS STRONGER

Banks were stronger with Nova Scotia ahead 2¼ to 65¾, Royal ½ to 57¾ and Imperial-Commerce ¼ to 57¾. Toronto-Dominion was off 1¼ to 54½.

Uranium was mixed with the only major group to gain on the week and the base-metal index retreat by .07 to 27.28. Consolidated and Pine Point each gained ¼ to 36¼ and 53½ and Rio Algom ½ to 22¾.

Inco, facing a possible strike, retreated 1¼ to 84¼ and Hudson Bay ¼ to 22¾.

In western oils, Scurry Rainbow declined 1 to 20¼ and Husky and Hudson's Bay ¾ of each to 11¾ and 17. Dome was up ¼ to 11¾.

Giant Yellowknife fell ¾ to 10¾ in pacing golds lower. Campbell Red lost ¼ to 24½ and Kerr-Addison ¼ to 21¼.

Speculative activity was light with Anglo United ahead 25 cents to 1.23 on 273,900 shares and Spooner 22 cents to 1.05.

On index, golds were off 3.29 to 160.31, western oils 1.25 to 97.33 and the TSE .18 to 139.89.

At Montreal, utilities were up 1.07 to 132.37 and banks .51 to 110.00. Papers were down .01 to 52.02. Volume was 1,132,659 shares compared with 5,811,152 last week.

Blaze Damages Picton Garage; Police Checking

PICTON — Since the arrest of two men who were charged with arson relating to a series of fires at Picton, three new fires have broken out. The third was early this morning, was started in a private garage at 27 Pill St. on the property of Mr. George Diagnan.

Firemen, answering an alarm turned in at 1.30 a.m., were prompt again and managed to save the building as they did yesterday's early morning fire at Bazard's garage on York St. All recent fires have been located in the same general area.

Police are working on the case.

Pinch Hitting

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

The Quinte Riding and Driving Club has three more Saturday nights of harness racing at the Fairgrounds, including this week, and one of them will be something special.

One week from tonight, Saturday, September 10, the card will be known as "Don Gallenger Benefit Night."

Gallenger, as the fans still remember, is the Kingston driver who was injured here earlier this year. He has been in a Kingston hospital since the accident and was unconscious for a month following the spill.

The local club has generously decided to donate 50% of the net gate receipts to the Gallenger family.

It's a darn nice move and all racing enthusiasts should turn out for this one.

Plans also call for a collection from fans in the stands and from horsmen in the barns. And anyone wishing to send a donation can forward it to "Gallenger Benefit", P.O. Box 454, Belleville, Ont.

Closer at hand is the 36-horse racing card lined up for this evening beginning at 8:00. There will be nine heats.

After what started out to be a sparse season of racing here, matters were cleared up, some fine heats have been run, some big money paid out to the smart (or lucky) bettors and it has been a good summer.

And who knows, with three nights left, you might even get your shirt back!

The rejected bid for a National Hockey League franchise in Vancouver will stay with that cities' residents for a long while, we expect.

Dexter Brent of the better sports columnists, who pens his stuff for the Vancouver Sun, dreamed up a rather amusing bit on it a short while back.

He took a look into the future, to the day that Montreal Canadiens' coach Hector "Toe" Blake applies to St. Peter for passage through those pearly gates.

"Welcome coach," said St. Peter, "you are just in time to take over our hockey team."

"Hockey team?" replied Blake. "It was hockey teams that got me here. What the devil — sorry — makes you think I would ever want to coach another hockey team?"

Attempting to change Blake's mind, St. Peter strung off names of players he would be coaching, names such as Howie Morenz, Aurel Joliet, Lionel Conacher, George Hainsworth, George Vezina, Number Jackson, Chuck Gardiner, Dick Irvin, Babe Siebert, Nels Stewart and so on.

"Wonderful!" said Blake. "I'll do it. I'll call practices starting tomorrow. When does the season open?"

"Oh, we just play exhibition games," said St. Peter. "God applied for a franchise but the NHL turned him down."

ODDS AND ENDS

As if my beloved Yankees aren't having enough trouble this year, second baseman Bobby Richardson says he is retiring from baseball at the end of this season. This is the sparkplug's 11th year. . . The city sports progress is very light for a holiday weekend. . . Times are changing: Ray Scrimshaw, Negro colleger in Virginia, have enrolled seven white players for their football team, claiming that all the bigger schools are grabbing off the best colored athletes. How's that for a reverse? . . . Peterborough's OASA Junior "A" entry is said to consist of all juvenile ex players with the exception of catcher Mickey Redmond.

No coach has been named for Belleville's Ceniccial Midget team but Lou Sarke is a natural choice. Sarke did a fine job last year, he knows his hockey and is highly respected by the youngsters. . . It was "Blue Thursday" for Belleville OASA teams this week with Bobcats, Trenton and Napanee all contributing defeats. . . Is there any truth in the rumor that the junior hockey club will lose the right to the promised Friday night home games at Memorial Arena, and if so, why? It was first announced they would split Fridays with the Senior team.

Layton Gets Nod

Bunny Muzzles Bulldog

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

'Well, you have to admit, it was a pretty tough start to miss.

Dick "Bulldog" Brower didn't.

And this bullseye won him a disqualification in the main bout of last night's wrestling card at Memorial Arena.

Brower tangled with the stately Lord Athol Layton in a two-of-three falls affair before the best crowd of the year here.

The pair, two of the bigger, tougher men in the game, traded falls to send it into sudden death.

The referee for the night was one Al "Bunny" Dunlop, who must have shed at least 50 pounds around the middle since his last appearance here.

That's what gave Brower such a good target.

The Bulldog opened the deciding fall with a furious attack on Layton. He dropped him to the mat and put the body to him best good. Layton fought back, into an upright position along the ropes.

Brower aimed a hard boot at Layton — and that's when Mr. Dunlop's large co-operative got in the way.

The Bulldog's boot landed square in the middle of Bunny's tummy. Down went Dunlop.

He regained his feet as the battle raged and promptly disqualified one Mr. Brower, giving Layton the match.

Layton appeared to toy with the ball-chewer for the first ten minutes, ragging him about at will, but the villain pounded our hero down for the count to snatch the opening fall.

Athol ripped back in a battle of brute strength to win the second on a series of solid judo chops.

In the night's first match, a 190 - pound Whipper Watson Jr. showed plenty of speed and agility — and promise for the future - to earn a draw with rough-and-tumble Gene Belbin.

The youthful Watson displayed the benefit of his famous father's scientific training but appears to have a few more tricks to learn before tackling the heavyweights.

Mesnis Karl Von Eric gave Harry Jones a good workout while Johnson, a rough going over before copping the semi - final affair.

Last night's crowd should be doubled for the Sept. 13 card here. Headlining the show will be Whipper Billy Watson and Hans Schmidt. Also on the card will be "Terrible Ted", the wrestling bear, plus Billy "Red" Lyman, Stan Stasiuk, Sweet Daddy Siki and "The Beast".

Kerbow Puts Eskimos In Top Spot Tie

BY JOHN SHORT

EDMONTON (CP) — Randy Kerbow was given the reins of authority Friday night and, after one full game as a quarterback, the little sophomore proved he had all the essentials to handle the job fulltime.

He scored one touchdown and directed a masterful ground offensive as Edmonton Eskimos routed British Columbia Lions 13-6 for their third successive Western Football Conference victory.

Mathandled by Saskatchewan Roughriders and Winnipeg Blue Bombers in their first two starts, the Eskimos now share the lead with the Roughriders and Blue Bombers. Each club has four wins but Edmonton has played one more game.

Kerbow's touchdown, in the second and third quarters, came on identical one - yard plunges set up by three directed marches. Tommy - Joe Coffey, who missed both converts, added the other point late in the first half on a 25-yard field goal attempt that went wide. Bill Lancaster added the final point.

Joe Kapp collected British Columbia's touchdown, also from one yard out, as the Lions failed to scrape the league cellar they share with Calgary Stampeders.

GUN ENDS THREAT

The Lions threatened late in the game but the gun sounded on the Edmonton 20 with fullback Bill Munsey corralled by linebacker Greenerd Poles.

Kapp scored with less than three minutes remaining and a penalty for blocking from the rear ended Edmonton's bid to run out the clock.

Taking over at the Lions' 37, Kapp threw to Larry Eilmes, and Billy Moore to real estate. Edmonton 28 with one every pair remaining. Kapp's flip to Munsey put the ball right where it looked dangerous until Poles intercepted the hard - running fullback.

Poles was replacing Jim Stibbetts, who suffered a torn Achilles tendon earlier in the game.

Edmonton marched 95 yards in six plays for its first touchdown. Jim Thomas and Terrell Walters sparked the running game and Kerbow fired passes to Willie Shaw and Coffey to move the ball to the three.

The Eskimos scored immediately after the second - half kickoff. They moved from their 36 to B.C. eight in eight plays. Thomas and Butch Pringle smashed to the one and Kerbow slid over left guard for the score.

SETS UP SCORE

A roughing penalty set up the B.C. touchdown. Kapp then moved the ball to the Eskimo 40 and Kapp scored five plays later.

Thomas, leading ground gainer in the West, paced the Eskimo attack with 122 yards in 16 carries. Pressley rambled for 35 in 12 and Walters for 36 in five as Edmonton rushed up 229 yards on the ground.

Kerbow completed 10 of 17 passes for yards as Kapp connected on picked up 22 first downs. Kapp had 14 passes for 144 yards as Edmonton picked up 22 first downs. Kapp had 14 completions in 31 attempts for 227 yards. The Lions added 97 yards. Munsey four for 58.

Kerbow also averaged 52.4 yards on seven punts, nearly 30 yards better than Neil Beaudoin of B.C. accomplished in the same number of tries.

Win Two, Orioles Lose

Tigers Gain On Slumping Birds

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Al Kaline began his vacation by sparking one victory.

Detroit's slumping slugger was benched in the opener of Friday night's doubleheader at Cleveland but played 10 innings in the second game as the Tigers took a 4-3, 7-5 sweep over Cleveland Indians.

The victories moved the Tigers within 9½ games of American League-leading Baltimore Orioles.

Willie Horton walloped a three-run homer in the first game, backing the four - hit pitching of Denny McLain. Mickey Stanley rapped three hits, including his first homer of the year, in the nightcap and scored the tie-breaking run in the 10th.

Detroit manager Frank Skaff scratched Kaline from the lineup Friday afternoon, explaining that he needed the All-Star outfielder "strong for the finish." Kaline, weakened by a persistent cold, had skidded below the .300 mark and had driven in only 15 runs in the past seven weeks.

CHASE ORIOLES

The Tigers picked up 1½ games on the Orioles, who bowed to Chicago White Sox 9-8 in 11 innings for their eight loss in the last seven games.

Elsewhere, Minnesota Twins outcegred New York Yankees 8-5, California Angels edged Washington Senators 6-5 and Kansas City trimmed Boston 5-1.

The Indians jumped on Joe Sparma for five runs in the first game of the doubleheader but Detroit fought back, finally tying it in the sixth. Stanley singled home the tying run and the go-ahead run on Jim Northrup's force-out grounder.

RELIEVED BATTERS

Stu Miller, Baltimore's unlikely brilliant relief specialist, hit 44 batters and Minnie Agee with pitches in the 14th inning, forcing across the winning run. Tom McCraw opened the 20th with a double and Tom Bedord drew an intentional walk before Miller's control disappeared.

Earl Battey's three-run double in the first inning and pitcher Jim Grant's tie-breaking single in the fourth sparked the Twins to their fourth straight victory.

Joe Adcock smacked a two-run pinch hit homer in the eighth, lifting the Angels past Washington. Bobby Knoop delivered three California runs with a pair of triples and a homer. The Athletics clubbed past Boston into ninth place behind the six - hit pitching of Lew Krausse. Danny Cater knocked in two runs with a single and sacrifice fly, and Phil Roof hit a bases-empty homer.

Mildenberger Eyes Title

Clay Faces First Pro Lefty

BAD SODEEN, West Germany (Reuters) — Karl Mildenberger, handsome 28-year-old German who fights Cassius Clay for the world heavyweight title here Sept. 10, figures he has two things going for him — he's a southpaw and Clay is a Negro.

"Negro boxers always have trouble with my southpaw style," Mildenberger said. "They're instinctive people and find it hard to adapt themselves to a different style."

Clay has admitted the German's left - handed punching could cause him some trouble. He has never faced a southpaw in his unbeaten professional career. Twice as an amateur he lost to left-handers.

Mildenberger, European heavyweight champion and unbeaten for 49½ years, is the first German to fight for the world title since 1938, when Max Schmeling was knocked out in one round by Joe Louis.

LOST IN 1962

The German's last defeat came in 1962 when he was stopped in one round by Dick Richardson of Wales in a fight for the European heavyweight title.

In 54 pro fights, he has won 47, lost four and had three draws. Mildenberger won the vacant European title by knocking out Sante Amonti of Italy in the first round in 1964.

In his two fights this year, he has defeated Californian Eddie Machen in 10 rounds and won a decision over Ivan Prebeg of Yugoslavia in a 15-round contest for the European crown.

Mildenberger has been sparring with light-heavyweights to build up his speed and reflexes. He feels he has as much speed as Clay and a stronger punch.

Mildenberger, six feet, one-inch tall, is two inches shorter than Clay and has a reach of 75 inches—four inches less than the champion.

At 194 pounds the German will probably be outweighed by eight pounds.

Mildenberger was ranked No. 2 contender for Clay's title by Ring magazine last month.

Junior Star Turns Pro With Blues

NEW YORK (AP) — Alan Hamilton, 20, one of the top junior hockey prospects in Canada, has been signed to a professional contract by New York Rangers, general manager Emile Francis announced today.

Hamilton, a six-foot-two, 185-pound defenceman, excelled in a four-game tryout with Rangers the last season and is given a good chance of making the jump to the National Hockey League this year.

Last season, Hamilton helped spark Edmonton Oil Kings to the Memorial Cup championship.

Hamilton and Bobby Orr, a Boston Bruins' farmhand, are rated the top two amateur defence prospects in Canada. The two played against each other when Edmonton beat Oshawa Generals in the 1966 Memorial Cup finals.

Hamilton will be one of the youngest prospects in the Rangers training camp, which opens Sept. 19 in Kingston.

B.C. Finishes First

Tie Not Enough For Ontario

WINNIPEG (CP) — Neil Elliott's goal with seven minutes left to play gave British Columbia a 1-1 tie with Ontario and a first-place finish in Group A of the Canadian championship soccer tournament here.

The draw gave B.C. six points and sent them into a final match today with Quebec. The first place finishers in Group B by virtue of a better goal average over Saskatchewan.

In Group B action, saskatchewan 4-0 Winnipeg. Quebec wasn't enough to keep the eastern outs of the final. Saskatchewan meets Ontario in the playoff match today to decide third and fourth spots.

Manitoba and Alberta finished out of the playoff picture Thursday night. In previous action B.C. downed Ontario 6-0 and Quebec beat Saskatchewan 5-1.

Ontario, needing a victory to advance, got a first - half right winger Robert Benedetti in the 27th minute. B.C. attacked in waves but were forward Ian McKay and inside forward Robert Goodheart, were stopped cold by a strong defense picked by a standout performance of goalkeeper Ken Kushner and centre half Carlo Mauti.

Tight defensive tactics by Ontario in the second frame failed in the 53rd minute when Goodheart passed a free kick to Elliott, at 22 the defence member of the B.C. team. Elliott's high booming drive from 40 yards left carrooms the sides hand of Kushner's net for the equalizer.

In Saskatchewan's victory on a goal from Adolf Traweger, Quebec goalkeeper Peter Greco caught the spotlight. Looking for a 3-4 victory to get a third place group standings, Saskatchewan pressed with dangerous attacks but was be smothered by alert Greco.

Goalkeeper Willie Hausnperger in the Saskatchewan net kept his club's chance alive when he saved Danny Sopata's penalty kick in the first half.

Bids To Play Nationals

The Belleville club also announced that bids had been entered for the meeting for several big exhibition games.

The Canadian National team will be scheduled to play three games against OHA clubs, one of them in Kingston on October 15. Belleville has bid for a game as well as another against a touring team from Japan.

Another bid from the local team is for a trip to Halifax to play the junior "A" Halifax Canadiens. Canadiens, sponsored by Montreal, do not play in a league, but fly in visiting clubs, all expenses paid, for which Belleville, Crawford said he hopes to be at least one or two of the bids accepted.

Outlasts Shannonville

Latta Deadlocks Finals

A seven - run first inning blighlighted another high-scoring South Hastings Baseball League finals game at the Fairgrounds last night.

Latta outslated Shannonville in this one, 16-13, to even the four-of-seven set 3-3.

The clubs claim that shadows and overall bad lighting at the Belleville Fairgrounds is one of the main reasons for the high - scoring games.

The fifth game goes Sunday afternoon, at 2.00, and no date is set beyond that. There is some chance the clubs will wait until next Sunday in order to avoid playing under lights.

Latta had a 11-3 lead after three frames but Shannonville had narrowed the gap to 14-13 after seven innings. Latta's pair in the eighth wrapped up the decision.

Bob Smith started and Gerald Cronkright took over in the seventh for Latta. They gave up ten hits, struck out seven and walked three.

Bill Barberstock opened on the losers' mound. Larry Lewis came in in the fourth, then Barberstock was back in the seventh and Lewis again in the eighth. They gave up nine hits, fanned six and walked nine.

Larry Mavety clouted two triples, Doug Chisholm a triple and single and Bob Smith a double and single, to spark the winners. Doug Bolton, Gary Ray and Ron Parks also hit safely.

Larry Lewis collected a double and two singles, Barberstock singles, Jack Hughes hit a three - run homer and a single, Doug Dafoe a solo homer, Bud Hill two triples and Mike Brant and Bob Detlor a double each.

There were 26 errors in the game, nine by the losers.

Stroke Behind Nagle

Casper's 69 Makes 4-1 Odds Look Good

SOUTHPORT, England (AP)—Those four-to-one odds the gamblers put on Bill Casper to win the $200,000 world championship golf tournament looked like a good bet today for those who backed the American.

Casper strode into the final round of the 72-hole, medal-play tournament with 216 shots, one behind Kel Nagle of Australia, who was leading the field.

Nagle held his lead Friday by shooting a par 73 over the 7,037 yard Royal Birkdale course. Casper, the U.S. Open champion, fired a four-under-par 69 to keep back-to-back contenders.

Bert Yancey, of the U.S., who had a 68 Thursday, shot a 76 for 217 which put him two shots off the pace.

DEVLIN TIES YANCEY

Bruce Devlin of Australia also had 217. At 218 were Roberto Bevicanzo of Argentina, Peter Thomson of Australia, Terry Dill of Mule Shoe, Tex., and Neil Coles of England.

Equalling par of 219 for the 36-hole route were Colin Johnstone and Barry Coxon of Australia, and Bob Charles, the left-hander from New Zealand.

Only two Canadians of nine were still in contention. Moe Norman, from Clifford, Ont., was in a six-way tie at 225. He shot 77 Friday to go with earlier rounds of 75 and 73.

Will Homenuik of Winnipeg, the Canadian PGA champion in 1963, shared 229 with nine other players. He had 80 Friday after rounds of 77 and 74.

There still are 32 players in the match. In addition to the Canadians there are 6 Americans, 11 Britons, eight Australians, six South Africans, four Spaniards, one Argentinian and two Irishmen and a New Zealander, Argentinian and Frenchman.

Minor Baseball Results

Lions Club and DeMille Construction advanced a step further along the playoff trail in Belleville Minor Baseball League action last night. Lions Club knocked off Jaycees 9-3 at CNRA Park and at Alexandra Park, DeMille got by Bolder's Little Giants, 10-3.

Both winners took care of their scoring in the early innings. Lions Club scored four times in the first inning and completed its scoring with five in the second. DeMille erupted for eight runs in the first and two more in the second.

Lions Club pitchers Ron and Don McTaggart gave up five hits while striking out nine and walking six. Bruce Clark and Doug Wood pitched for Jaycees. They allowed four hits, fanned eight and walked six.

Ron McTaggart had two singles for the winners while Don McTaggart and Jack Cole each connected for one. Bruce Clark banged a triple and a single for the losers and David Sulivan supplied two singles. Greg Bradshaw singled for the other Jaycees' hit.

Tom Coughlin and David Ruth, afford shared the pitching for DeMille in the win over Little Giants. They held Giants to four hits, struck out one and walked nine. Robin Guest and Jed Forster took care of the Giant pitching. They allowed 12 hits, fanned one and walked eight.

John Venuti slugged a home run and a triple for the winners and Peter Crawford checked in with three singles. Tom Coughlin had two singles while Steve Kirby tripled and David Ricketts, Mitchell Yost and Rutherford doubled. Andy Peter Rissi also hit safely. World Hockey
New Set of Regulations

TORONTO, Australia (AP)—The International Ice Hockey Federation issued a new set of regulations Friday for world amateur championships, to go into effect in 1969.

One of the key decisions made by the annual IIHF conference here was a reduction of the number of teams playing in the top group, the A group, from eight to six. The six top teams will play each other twice instead of only once in future world tournaments.

Reason for the change is that there have been three or four weak teams in the A group every year.

The number of teams in the eight-team B group remained unchanged, while the number of C group teams was not limited.

The 1967 world championships are in Vienna.

Idle Leafs Lose Ground To Leaders

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The last time Toronto Maple Leafs were idle they took over first place in the International League.

The Leafs weren't that fortunate Friday night. They slipped from one-half game to a full game behind the leaders when their scheduled contest against Buffalo Bisons was rained out.

Elsewhere, the league-leading Rochester Red Wings walloped Syracuse Chiefs 9-3, while second-place Columbus Jets defeated Richmond Braves 4-2 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing the nightcap 6-1. Jacksonville Suns defeated Toledo Mud Hens 2-1.

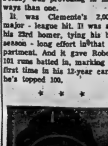
John Mason led the Red Wings attack with four hits and three runs batted in. Cam Carreon and Dave May also collected two hits each for Rochester, while team-mate Steve Demeter drove in two runs with a first-inning single.

Dave Wissman, with a two-run home run and a sacrifice fly in the third accounted for all the Columbus runs in the Jets first-game victory. But the Braves knocked the Jets out of top spot in the second game behind the standout relief performance of Chi Chi Olivo, who retired the nine men he faced.

Darrell Sutherland pitched a four hitter for Jacksonville, collected two hits and drove in the Suns second run in the sixth inning.

DRIVER KILLED

ELKHART LAKE, Wis. (AP) Don Skogmo, a veteran sports car driver from Minneapolis, was killed Friday when his car smashed into a guard rail during a practice run in the race for Sunday's 500 - mile Road America road race. He was travelling more than 100 m.p.h. when his new Lola-Chev T70 spun out of control coming up a hill.



Dodgers Win

Roberto Clemente's three-run homer against Chicago Cubs Friday was provoking in more ways than one.

It was Clemente's 2,000th major - league hit. It was also his first homer, tying his total season - long effort in that department. And it gave Roberto his 100th batted in, marking the first time in his 12-year career he's topped 100.

But most important, the fifth-inning shot boosted Pittsburgh Pirates to a 7-3 victory and insurance of first place in the National League. San Francisco Giants tied with the Pirates when the day's action began, but 6-5 in St. Louis Cardinals in 13 innings.

"For years, I have been pleading with somebody in the Pittsburgh Field to put up the clay instead of sand in the batter's box," Clemente said. "Suddenly, this year, they put clay in. Now I have firm footing. I can get a toe-hold."

Elsewhere in the league, Los Angeles Dodgers beat Cincinnati Reds 8-1, Philadelphia Phillies shut out New York Mets 4-0 and Atlanta Braves won a doubleheader from Houston Astros 6-1 and 2-1.

TAGS JENKINS

Clemente's home run came off Cub pitcher Ferguson Jenkins of Chatham, Ont.

Orlando Cepeda popped up to haunt his Giant former teammates, doubling in the 12th inning and coming home on Mike Shannon's single for St. Louis's winning run. The Giants had taken a one-run lead with four runs in the seventh, but an error by Tito Fuentes sent the game into extra innings.

Claude Osteen and Bob Miller combined for a three-hitter and Ron Fairly drove in three runs, two with a homer, as the Dodgers stayed two games back of the Pirates.

Jim Bunning pinned the Mets back on six hits and Rich Allen clubbed a pair of homers for the Phillies, his second victory in their last five games. Allen now has 25 home runs.

A pair of Canadians, Ron Taylor of Toronto and Claude Raymond of St. Jean, Que., worked for the Astros, with Taylor taking the loss.

Hank Aaron hit two homers in Atlanta's opening victory and Pat Jarvis stopped Houston on seven hits in the finale. It was Atlanta's first doubleheader victory of the season.

Outdoor Tips And Tricks

BY BOB BLAIDD

Half the lake trout fishermen in the Belleville area have taken off by now or will be leaving for the north country over the weekend in search of the speckled beauties.

Darrell Sutherland pitched a four hitter for Jacksonville, collected two hits and drove in the Suns second run in the sixth inning.

Dave Wissman, with a two-run home run and a sacrifice fly in the third accounted for all the Columbus runs in the first-game victory. But the Braves knocked the Jets out of top spot in the second game behind the standout relief performance of Chi Chi Olivo, who retired the nine men he faced.

Darrell Sutherland pitched a four hitter for Jacksonville, collected two hits and drove in the Suns second run in the sixth inning.

Opeongo, Dickson, Hogan Source and Lavielle and Smoke Lake are being viewed as the last time this year. I know of at least 40 ardent grey trout fishermen from Belleville who will be spending this weekend trolling in Opeongo for their favorite fish.

Desert, Canoe, Birch, Lemi Brule and Bark are the choice of many more of this lake trout fraternity.

For the pickerel fishermen, Lake Ontario still the best location.

Although the heaviest fished body of water in the area, this lake keeps producing year after year with hundreds of out of town fishermen catching limits day after day.

Many large pike, up to 12 and 14 pounds are being caught in Smiths Bay in Prince Edward County while Point Traverse is still tops in the bass department.

The bass in Bay of Quinte are starting to hit, mostly on minnows.

While on the subject of minnows, fishermen in the Hastings and Prince Edward area have been very fortunate in being able to purchase all kinds of live minnows.

The rest of the province's bait dealers have been supplying up to 500 miles seeking minnows in quantities up to 100,000.

Minnows from the Belleville area are being shipped to places such as Ottawa, Brockville, Madoc, Picton, Peterborough, Toronto and Hamilton with enquiries as far as Windsor and North Bay.

The bait dealers and seine fishermen in these centres are unable to supply their customers with good bait and if they want to stay in business must purchase these minnows wherever they are available.

Perch fishing, out of town fishing spots, for minnows have doubled. A dozen small minnows in most places now sell for $1.00.

The main reason for shortages of minnows is poor water conditions, pollution, more fishermen and more and more bait fishermen.

Wholesalers for live bait have sprung up overnight but are unable to provide the amount of bait fish to service Ontario. The Department of Lands and Forests are making every effort to assist the dealers and wholesalers in whatever way they can, showing new ways to catch minnows, methods of transporting and control of disease.

Handing bait is not done in the sloppy old way it used to be 20 years ago. Much more care must be taken today.

Your bait fish dealer must know how to catch, transport and keep good healthy bait in order to keep you, the fisherman happy and well supplied.

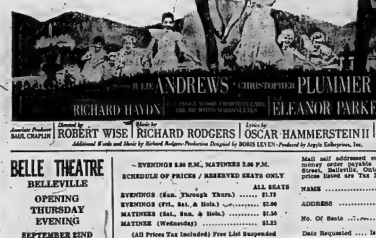
Gary Cowan Four Back Of Leader

ARDMORE, Pa. (CP)—Gary Cowan of Kitchener, playing it safe over tricky 6,500-yard Merion Golf Club layout, was within four strokes of the leaders going into today's final round of the United States Amateur golf championship.

Nick Weekes of Toronto was six strokes behind the leaders after Friday's third round with 220 after carding an even-par 70 Friday.

Leading the field going into today's final round were Bruce Berman and Downing Gray with identical 214s.



Gray fired a third round two-under-par 68 Friday to make up eight strokes on the front running Berman.

East York Shares Lead

TORONTO (CP)—East York Argonauts gained a tie with Oakville Black Knights for the lead in the Ontario Rugby Football Union senior series when they downed Knights 27-3 Friday night.

Argos now have two victories in as many games. It was Oakville's first loss in three games.

Argos held a 20-0 lead at the half on touchdowns by Ray Williams, John Groves and Ted Naiplavochuk, a single and a convert by Jim Walker.

Oakville's two points came midway in the third quarter when an Argonaut snap on third down went over Walker's head. He fell on it in the end zone for a safety.

Williams counted the fourth touchdown for the winners and Walker scored another point when his field goal attempt went wide.

Would Buy Pretty Boy's Contract

TORONTO (CP)—Fight manager Vince Bagnato of Toronto said Friday he has received an offer from 11 Miami businessmen to purchase the contract of Toronto heavyweight Bob (Pretty Boy) Felstein.

Bagnato, who manages the 21-year-old Felstein for a Toronto syndicate, said he spoke to promoter Chris Dundee of Miami by telephone Friday night and the latter said he was acting as a spokesman for the Miami businessmen.

Bagnato said he was sure the Toronto group would not sell Felstein's contract.

Felstein, listed as top contender to George Chuvalo's Canadian heavyweight title, is currently training with Ernie Terrell, World Boxing Association heavyweight titleholder, in Pleasantville, N.J.

Felstein has won 13 of 16 professional fights since turning professional 16 months ago, lost twice and drawn once.

Harness Records Beaten

VERNON, N.Y. (AP)—Bret Hanover smashed the world one-mile harness record with a clocking of 1:54 flat in a time trial at Vernon Downs Friday night.

The previous record was 1:54 3-5, set by Adios Butler Oct. 4, 1960, in a time trial at Lexington, Ky.

Frank Ervin drove the four-year-old Bret around the track in fractions of 26.4, 44 and 1:23 flat. The last quarter, in 30 1-5 seconds, was against a strong head-wind.

About 12,000 fans were on hand to see the record-breaking trial as Bret sped the mile prompted by a thoroughbred named Little Red.

Vernon Downs is a three-quarter mile track with a starting chute.

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Speedy Rodney broke his own world record for the mile on a half mile track Friday night, trotting the distance in 1:58 3-5 en route to an easy victory in the Yonkers Trot at Yonkers Raceway.

The 5-2 favorite set the record at 1:58 4-5 July 7 of this year at Goshen.

The Lone Ranger to Start Appearing in Cartoon Form

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hi-yo, Silver, the Lone Ranger rides again—and again.

There seems to be no end to the western travels of the masked rider, who began his battle against injustice bedtime a third of a century ago on radio. He eased into the television saddle 18 years ago and can still be seen on channels throughout the world, although the series showed filming seven years ago.

Now the Lone Ranger (a misnomer since he is usually accompanied by his redskin pyman) is beginning a new phase. Next Saturday morning he will start appearing in cartoon form on the CBS network.

Jack Wrather, the Texas oilman who owns the Lone Ranger, previewed a couple of the cartoons in the basement of his Beverly Hills building, and they proved splashy in color and vigorous in action. The animation was especially good.

"We use twice as many drawings as other television cartoons," he explained. "We feel the audience deserves to have more realistic action instead of the semi-animated films which are really cheaters."

"But I think it will be worth it," he said. "After all, the Lone Ranger is an important, proud property that has made millions over the years. I honestly believe that the cartoons will open up brand new areas for the show, and we're prepared to go in every direction."

Cookie Knocks Football

TORONTO (CP)—Cookie Gilchrist says Denver Broncos of the American Football League, own him $50,000.

This is the amount owing, he claims, on his one-year no-cut contract which included bonuses.

Cookie, working for a mining firm with holdings in Northern Ontario and Europe, said in an interview Friday he hasn't heard from his Denver employers in the last month.

He also said he prefers retirement to the "abuse and treatment" he has received in professional football.

MAY BE THROUGH

The 31-year-old fullback, one of the high scorers in the AFL, says he could be through with the game.

Cookie, who played for Sarnia and Kitchener of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, the Hamilton Tiger-Cats, Toronto Argonauts and Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Canadian Football League, says he would not play football in Canada again.

"What do you think I went to the U.S. for? Money? Certainly."

In the U.S. he played for Buffalo Bills and Denver.

"I'm only demanding what I feel I'm worth."

Coughing Virus Affects Horses At Greenwood

TORONTO (CP)—Officials of the Ontario Racing Commission said Friday night a mild coughing virus has affected some horses stabled at Greenwood Raceway.

Three of eight scheduled starters were scratched from the third race of Friday night's card.

There are about 580 standardbred horses stabled at Greenwood, but only a small percentage of them have been affected, said Dr. D. J. McLellan, ORC veterinarian.

Trainer Sues After Track Bars Horses

DETROIT (AP) — Horse trainer Sherman Armstrong, who had his licence revoked by the Michigan racing commission Aug. 17 for alleged irregularities, sued Friday, charging his horses were illegally barred from out of competition at the track.

Armstrong and his wife, Margaret Greenwell, 52, filed the suit in Wayne County. Named as defendants were the track, the state racing commissioner and three race course stewards.

The Armstrongs contend the stewards had no legal authority to revoke Armstrong's licence or have his horses removed from the track without a hearing before the racing commissioner.

At the time, officials said an investigation by agents of the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau revealed falsifications in stall applications made by Armstrong.

Hear Wilson Is Willing to Accept Limited UN Sanctions Against Rhodesia

LONDON (CP) — The Commonwealth prime ministers' conference opened today with a decision to keep Prime Minister Wilson in the chair during discussions on the crucial Rhodesian issue.

Canada's Arnold Smith, Commonwealth secretary - general, announced after the opening formalities that Wilson's offer to vacate the chair during the Rhodesian discussion was declined. by the delegates.

There had been earlier reports that Prime Minister Pearson or some other leader might be asked to preside during the Rhodesian wrangling.

Some observers speculated the retention of Wilson is linked with a desire by some leaders to keep Pearson as free as possible for a mediation role between Britain and African members who are demanding tough action against Rhodesia.

Retention of Wilson as chairman during the Rhodesian debate accompanied reports that Wilson may yield some ground on the crisis to prevent a Commonwealth break-up.

As the sharply - divided Commonwealth leaders opened their 10-day conference, the information said Wilson would agree to limited United Nations mandatory sanctions against Rhodesia, such as an oil.

But he would continue to resist demands for full mandatory sanctions which could bring complete disruption of Britain's trade with South Africa, a strong supporter of the illegal Ian Smith regime in Rhodesia.

Britain has persistently maintained that its balance of payments is so precarious that it cannot afford a cut-off of exports to South Africa which undoubtedly would not conform with UN demands that it block all shipments to Rhodesia. It therefore would become subject to UN trade penalties.

Indeed, Wilson, who has promised Britain's Conservative opposition he contemplates no change in government policy on Rhodesia, is understood to be determined that any request for mandatory oil sanctions against Rhodesia would not involve a naval blockage against South Africa. Oil has been trickling into Rhodesia from South Africa which has declined to support a voluntary oil embargo.

There still is some question whether the African delegates would be satisfied with the Wilson compromise. They want full mandatory sanctions, a pledge by Britain to use force against Rhodesia if Smith's administration and a pledge not to grant Rhodesia independence without majority rule. This would ensure eventual control by the black majority.

Some Dissidents Seen as Railways Return to Normal

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stubborn strikers at the Lakehead today represented the only immediate obstacle to regional nationwide freight and passenger operations by Canada's railways.

Eight heavily - laden freight trains rumbled eastbound out of the lower mainland section of British Columbia Monday. The movement apparently signaled the end of the strike in B.C.

The potentially explosive situation at Kamloops, B.C., took a turn for the better Monday as 200 rail workers—last of the holdouts in the province—voted to go back to work today.

Both CNR and CPR officials expressed hope that passenger service out of Vancouver could be resumed today.

All rail traffic in the Atlantic provinces was reported moving normally today, after striking rail workers at Moncton, N.B., voted to return.

Picketing at Moncton had severed rail service between the Atlantic provinces and central Canada.

However, a shadow was cast on the optimistic outlook of the country's rail service by a rebel group of 7,000 employees who have decided to continue the week-long strike that was declared by an act of Parliament last Thursday.

MAY DISRUPT RUNS

Shop workers — whose members include machinists, carmen and electrical workers — are not immediately involved in the operation of trains, but the railways say they could not get along without them for more than a few days.

The CPR reported early today that its freight and passenger services across Canada was "largely back to normal" with the exception of a trouble spot at Fort William, Ont.

The publicly-owned CNR reported normal or near-normal operations across the country.

The extent of the rebellion among shop craft workers was not immediately clear.

Many of Montreal's 7,000-odd shop workers voted at weekend meetings to stay on strike, and

Four Are Captured In Raid

By GERALD BAYLES

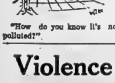
CROWN POINT, Ind. (AP)—Kenneth Leishman sits across a small table in a jail anteroom, bare chested and sucking on a mint.

He discusses with equal intensity a $10,000 Toronto bank robbery in 1954 for which he served 44 months of a 12-year sentence and his belief that Gary police men needlessly risked their lives in capturing him and three other Canadian escapees.



They were seized in a massive police hunt Saturday night after a tavern owner recognized them. Authorities said the four men escaped from the provincial jail at Winnipeg, stole a single-engined plane and landed 12 miles southeast of Gary Saturday.

Also arrested were George Laforte, 25, awaiting trial on charges of rape and possession of a dangerous weapon, and Barry Duke, 21, awaiting transfer, to a mental hospital after acquittal of murder on grounds of insanity.

Liberal Leader Hopeful

By DAL WARRINGTON

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—"I have been fighting a war against poverty in Newfoundland and Labrador from the moment I started the campaign for Confederation and from the moment I became premier," Joseph Smallwood tells Newfoundlanders as he appeals for a sixth vote of confidence in Thursday's provincial election.

The 65 - year - old Liberal leader, Newfoundland's "father of Confederation," attributes his province's booming development to that event in 1949 and to his own untiring efforts to raise its standard of living to the level—that of wealthier—provinces.

He quotes Dominion Bureau of Statistics figures that show personal income in Newfoundland rose 194 per cent from 1950 to 1964 compared with 161 per cent in Canada as a whole. He says new capital investment increased 266 per cent, more than double the Canadian average of 130 per cent.

Painting with a different brush is the Progressive Conservative leader, Dr. Noel Murphy.

EIGHT DAYS BEHIND SCHEDULE — This Toronto - Montreal passenger train arrived at the Belleville CNR depot around 12:30 Sunday. It marked the first time in eight days that a regular CNR run had passed over the tracks in Belleville, due to the recent rail strike.

Rideau Area Rail Workers Back on Jobs and Train Service Returns to Normal

CNR train service in Belleville is virtually back to normal today after local 126 of the Brotherhood of Railway, Transport, and General Workers on Sunday reversed a decision taken 24 hours before to stay off the job.

In a stormy Saturday morning session of Local 126 the membership voted 69 to 43 against returning to work. Herb Pointer, the union's representative on the Joint Protective in Ottawa, refused to call the move a wildcat strike, but said it was "a protest, not only against government legislation, but also against the union." Pointer had told the assembly earlier that they were not voting for an 18 per cent wage increase, but to decide whether the local would defy government legislation calling a halt to the train strike.

Following the result of the secret ballot, Pointer told reporters that the "protesters" would be receiving no strike pay, and that whether or not they bore placards depended on the individual.

At about 9 p.m. the same day, however, members of Local 617 of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, last group of local rail-

White Man Kills P.M. With Knife

CAPE. TOWN. (CP) — A white assailant killed Prime Minister Hendrik F. Verwoerd today by plunging a knife several times into his neck as he sat on his bench in Parliament.

The 64-year-old leader of the apartheid Republic of South Africa was stabbed several times in the neck by a man dressed in the uniform of a parliamentary messenger.

A man believed to be of Greek descent and employed as a messenger in Parliament was taken into custody soon after the attack.

Verwoerd was stabbed to death in the House of Assembly, debating chamber of the lower house.

The leader of the house, Transport Minister Ben Schoeman, said Verwoerd was certified dead on arrival at the Groote Schuur Hospital in Cape Town.

It was the second attempt on Verwoerd's life since he became prime minister in 1958.

Expect TUC Will Back Govt.

By PETER BUCKLEY

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Harold Wilson's no-nonsense lecture to the powerful Trades Union Congress in Blackpool Monday has renewed the general confidence that the congress will support the labor government in its wage-freeze policy.

But there was widespread feeling that Wilson had made few converts among the substantial body of union members who bitterly oppose the government's harsh measures to cure the economic ills of Britain.

The 1,000 delegates — representing 170 unions and more than 8,000,000 members — vote Wednesday on a series of measures which will test the government's strength among a section of organized British society which has been the backbone of the Labor party.

There are predictions that the wage-freeze policy will get the support of delegates representing about 4,500,000 union mem-

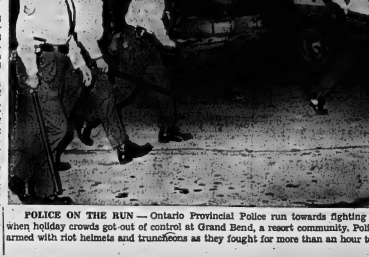
Arrest 23 in Two Nights of Riots at Grand Bend

GRAND BEND, Ont. (CP)—It's judgment day today for 23 persons arrested during two successive nights of mob violence in this resort community on Lake Huron, about 30 miles northwest of London.

All are to appear in magistrate's court this morning facing charges varying from creating a disturbance to carrying concealed weapons. All but five are charged with liquor offenses.



An enlarged force of helmeted police with riot sticks used tear gas guns both Saturday and Sunday nights to quell the disturbances, which resulted in a dozen arrests the first night and 11 the following.

There were 34 police officers in the village when hundreds of persons, mostly teen - agers, surged up Main Street Saturday night and massed in front of the police detachment building to demand the release of a youth arrested for drinking under age.

When police tried to clear the street their action was the signal for bottle and rock throwing in which two policemen were injured, one requiring treatment for a cut hand.

Violence and Death Marred Canadian Labor Day Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Violence and death marred the 1966 Labor Day weekend in Canada with teen-age riots in Grand Bend, Ont., and more than 100 deaths in accidents across the country. Traffic fatalities alone far exceeded the Canadian Highway Safety Council's prediction of 77.

Violence flared Saturday night in Grand Bend, 30 miles northwest of London, as police fired tear gas into a chanting crowd of teen-agers who hurled bottles and rocks up and down the town's main street for nearly an hour.

Scattered outbreaks of vandalism broke out again Sunday night after police arrested 16 persons during the two days of rioting. One policeman was injured during a fight in front of a detachment office.

In the Maritimes, record crowds attended a sportsmen's meet at Beaver Dam in Nova Scotia, an exhibition at Pictou, N.S., and the Maritime go-kart championships at Greenwood, P.E.I.

It rained in Halifax and Truro, ruining sports events and making the heavily-travelled roads treacherous. Harness racing cards were staged Monday afternoon in many Maritime centres.

Provincial police leaves were cancelled in Quebec as heavy traffic was reported Monday on all main roads. More than 800 troopers using a helicopter, patrol cars and motorcycles patrolled the province in an effort to keep down the death toll.

A traditional Labor Day parade was held in Quebec City.

In Ottawa, Parliament Hill echoed for the last time this summer to the trumpets and barked orders of the changing of the guard, a daily ceremony that has drawn a record attendance of 300,000.

DISCUSSES EARLY DAYS

Leishman, 34, father of seven, expressed bitterness about his early days; at leaving school at age 7 to work in farm fields; of being shuttled to foster homes.

He said he logged 4,000 hours in single- and twin - engined planes before going to prison in 1954 and then recalled the four escapees working 40 minutes in a sheltered hangar south of Winnipeg to cross the wires of a Mooney Mark-21 — a type of craft he never had flown before.

Leishman said he picked northwest Indiana as one of two intended landing spots but wouldn't identify the other. Someone he planned to see in Gary had moved, he said, and closed the subject.

After the tavern owner's tip, police traced the getaway car to adjacent hotel. Three patrolmen found four men had just registered, taking two rooms on the second floor.

Duke, discovered alone in one room, surrendered after a policeman poked a shotgun at him. The officers kicked open the door of the next room and Leishman surrendered. Leclerc appeared with a gun and one of the patrolmen fired, wounding him in the wrist.

Leclerc and Lafortune fled out a window to a roof but were captured a short time later.

"This one chap kicked in the door and found himself in a bad situation," Leishman said. "He was looking into the darkened room and there were two guns trained on him. He was very fortunate.

"Once there's one policeman shot, there's no harm in going on. But nobody had any intention of shooting. We weren't looking for trouble."

11,000 Pupils Back to School As Estimates Prove Accurate

Around 11,000 high school students, and public and separate school pupils went back to classes today in Belleville as summer holidays came to an end.

And as far as the city public schools are concerned the estimate of enrolment was almost right on the nose.

Schools Superintendent L. A. Kells said that a total of 9,157 pupils had been registered up until noon, but by the time enrolments were complete, it was expected this figure might be raised to about 9,300.

Mr. Kells said there were always a few requests for admission of kindergarten pupils from the Separate Schools system and for out of town pupils in all grades. Such admissions were being restricted, however, until it was learned whether there was accommodation for the additional pupils.

Mr. Kells said that all the city's public school classrooms were in use, including the two portable classrooms at Hillcrest School, and that all the repairs to the twenty 175 teachers were on the job.

One new school, the five-roomed Sir John A. Macdonald building now under construction, will not be completed until January.

NEW SCHOOL OPENS

At the new Centennial Secondary School on Palmer Road in West Belleville approximately ninety 450 grade nine and ten students registered but registrations were expected to go as high as 475.

"We haven't any shops or home economics classes but we got all the students in classes," School Principal W. J. Musgrove stated.

Only 19 of the new school's close to 50 teaching areas were ready for school opening today.

Mr. Musgrove said morning assembly was held in the still unfinished locker rooms space.

"It was too wet to go outside," he said.

Contractors hope to have most of the new school finished by the end of October although the actual date will be dependent upon delivery of materials and other factors.

Students Request Pearson To Ensure a Democratic Government for Rhodesia

HALIFAX (CP)—Gerald Caplan of Toronto Monday appealed to the Canadian Union of Students to take a stand against Rhodesia's white-minority government and the union responded with a similar appeal to Prime Minister Pearson.

"We are now our spokesman" Caplan told delegates to the union's 30th annual congress.

"I want you to take a stand. . . . Philosophical or intellectual—that's irrelevant, but take some material stand."

Caplan, 28, a university history lecturer expelled from Rhodesia in July, said students at Rhodesia's University College wanted to denounce the government's unilateral declaration of independence, but were forbidden by their principal.

He said more drastic actions are required to handle the situation in Rhodesia.

"Sanctions have been neglible," he said. "Certainly, I am in favor of the threat of military intervention as a suggestion to those that have already been taken."

Asked if there is any way of getting arms into Rhodesia to end the white regime, Caplan said "the best way is for them to be carried in by British soldiers."

The delegates drafted a resolution calling upon Prime Minister Pearson as the Commonwealth conference to take all necessary measures to bring about democratic government in Rhodesia.

Meanwhile, three universities announced their withdrawal saying the Quebec student union, l'Union Generale des Etudiants du Quebec, is becoming the voice of students in their province.

A spokesman for CUS said attempts will be made during the week-long sessions to formulate a principle stating that formal education is a right and should be free for students.

The spokesman said that the basis of the principle is that students should be accepted solely on intellectual capacities and academic achievement.

Some delegates said student affairs and other co-curricular activities offer educational values and should be rated as credit courses.

Seek Identity Of Dead Woman Washed Ashore

LACKAWANNA, N.Y. (AP)—Medical examiners planned to take fingerprints today in hopes of determining the identity of a middle-aged woman whose body was washed ashore Monday from Lake Erie.

Officials said she may be Celia Truchon, a 47-year-old ship's cook who tumbled overboard Aug. 26 from the Canadian freighter Gleneagle. The woman was reported lost off Dunkirk, south of here.

The body was discovered by security officers of the Bethlehem Steel Corp., on whose property it was found.

Labor Day Traffic Toll Sets Record for Canada

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Traffic deaths during the Labor Day weekend soared to at least 100, an all-time high in Canada for any holiday weekend.

The figure far exceeded the Canadian Highway Safety Council prediction of 77 traffic deaths for the 78-hour holiday.

In addition to the weekend fatalities, a Canadian Press from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Monday included many drownings, four fire deaths, one hunting fatality and eight miscellaneous deaths, bringing the total to at least 122.

The total was the fifth straight Labor Day holiday toll to surpass 100, but it was below the 124 dead in 1935 which included 70 traffic fatalities.

It compares with 136 persons killed in the three-day Dominion Day weekend four per cent of during the Victoria Day holiday. The record holiday toll is 172, set in the 78-hour Dominion Day holiday of 1953, and that included 85 highway deaths.

Previous holiday traffic fatalities, since The Canadian Press began keeping records in 1948, was 96 in the Victoria Day holiday 1962 when the overall accidental death total was 120.

Pearson Pays Soccer Bet To Wilson

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson admitted, with a somewhat defensive air, that he paid off a $5 bet to British Prime Minister Wilson.

Pearson maintained straight-faced that he only paid off $5 of the $25 Canadian's strained financial situation by making the wager.

The Soccer bet between Wilson — when they met briefly in Ottawa July 29— that West Germany would beat England in the World Cup soccer championships the following day. England won 4-2.

Some persons have been saying it was nothing but Pearson, here for the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference, had bet against the mother country in that way.

"It was a form of Commonwealth aid," Pearson told a press conference.

College Street Bridge Will Be Closed Sooner Than Expected

The system of one-way traffic scheduled to go into effect in conjunction with the reconstruction start on College Street Bridge, will go into operation tomorrow (Wednesday) but the bridge itself will be closed sooner than expected.

This was the word today from city hall as city building inspector Wilbur Purcell noted that the contractor was anxious in get working as soon as possible.

Accordingly the one way street system will go into effect tomorrow as previously announced, while the College street bridge will be closed some time Thursday morning.

Mr. Purcell said city work crewmen have been busy installing street islands for direction of traffic on the one-way street system. New traffic lights are also being installed in some locations.

GOOD PROGRESS

When the one-way street system goes into effect, Moira Street will become an eastbound artery for local traffic — from westbound cars to use Dorset and Strachan streets.

Traffic which would normally use the College Street Bridge, will be routed along Station St.

Mr. Purcell said that the gas company was making good progress in getting their temporary pipeline around the river completed. The general contractor for the new bridge wants to commence tomorrow to be old bridge decking while the old gasline on the bridge is being removed.

men besides the C.B.R.T. and G. W. to remain off the job, and whose jobs are not affected, had been honoring, returned to work. Some three hours later, the executive of Local 1 called a special Sunday afternoon meeting at Club Canada to discuss what course of action should be taken following the overnight return to work of the carmen.

Mr. Pointer said Sunday morning that the move by the other rail workers had brought about a "change in climate" among the C.B.R.T. membership and that another vote would likely be taken to decide whether Local 128 would return to work.

Shortly after 12.30 p.m. Sunday, a group of about thirty C.B.R.T. and G. W. members stood across the street from the Belleville CNR depot as a diesel horn shrieked the arrival of an eastbound passenger train from Toronto. The Toronto-Montreal train was the first regular schedule CNR run through Belleville in eight days. The train was only sparsely occupied by passengers, but nevertheless, it was a train.

VOTE ON RETURN

Less than three hours later, the members of Local 128 voted 94 to 28 to return to their jobs, and the rail strike in Belleville was over.

President of Local 128, Henry Hall said yesterday that all rail workers in the Rideau area are now on the job, and trains in Belleville, as in the rest of the country are running as usual.

White Man

Verwoerd's face in Pretoria, April 9, 1960. The bullets were removed and the prime minister was released from a Pretoria hospital within a month. Fratt was sent to a mental hospital.

Today, before the members sitting near the prime minister realized what was happening, the man plunged his knife into Verwoerd several times. Blood spurting from his neck made a large pool on the green carpet alongside his seat.

The man was dressed in the black and green uniform of parliament messenger, and members took it for granted he was on official duty.

GRAPPLE WITH ATTACKER

Members of Parliament grappled with him and pinned him to the floor until he was removed from the chamber.

Soon after Verwoerd had taken his seat on the front bench the assassin walked toward him.

Verwoerd looked up as if he expected the messenger was going to speak to him. The assassin then plunged the knife into Verwoerd's neck.

Verwoerd was stabbed at least three times. His assailant was arrested on the spot, leaving one of which looked like a dagger.

FAIL TO REVIVE HIM

Verwoerd slumped at his desk, his head down, his face white. One doctor tried to revive him, giving him the mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

About 15 minutes after the attack, Verwoerd was carried on a stretcher to the main entrance of the Parliament building. The chamber was hushed and shocked.

Several doctors who are members of Parliament rushed to the side of the man who became the symbol of South Africa's racial segregation.

The white-haired architect of race separation would have celebrated his 65th birthday in two days' time.

He was killed at the peak of his controversial career.

The assailant struck as the prime minister was about to make his first parliamentary speech since his ruling National party was returned to power with an increased majority in last March's election.

BACKS SEPARATISM

Verwoerd had steered South Africa's problem was one of insuring the survival of the white race and he has been doing so long justice to the non-whites.

When the United Nations Security Council censured South Africa to abandon apartheid, Verwoerd denounced the resolution as interference in the country's internal affairs and a violation of the charter of the United Nations.

In eight years as minister of native affairs before becoming prime minister, Verwoerd established South Africa's segregation policies. He also devised new schemes for the political rights of the Negroes — but always within their own reserves.

He has moved many out of shantytowns near white residential areas to quarters just outside the towns.

At the same time he began introducing racial laws in keeping with his creed that separation was the only solution for the two races of South Africa.

CLASSIFIES RACES

Using such criteria as the shape of noses and kinkiness of hair, he classified blacks, mixed - bloods, Asians and Asians by race, then allocated to each a racial place in society in which residence, travel, and employment were determined by the government.

Verwoerd was born in The Netherlands. He came to South Africa at the age of 2, the son of a Dutch Reformed mission minister.

In 1937, he helped found the newspaper Die Transvaaler and became its editor-in-chief until 1948. The paper is printed in Afrikaans—the form of Dutch language used in South Africa.

During the Second World War his editorials brought charges from the Johannesburg Star that he was pro-Nazi. Verwoerd sued The Star for libel but lost his suit.

During his years as editor, Verwoerd became well known for his political and social theories and soon became known as a theorist for the dominant Nationalist party.

He became a leader in the South African Senate in 1948. Speaking both Afrikaans and English, he was noted in Parliament for his well-documented speeches.

He married Elisabeth Schoeman in 1927. They had two sons, children, five sons and two daughter .

And on one trip to the woods south of the Redneersville Road young Mitchell Yott of R. R. 1 Carrying Place reaped his share. Quinte Residents Enjoy Last Holiday of Summer

With the last of the big-warm-weather holiday weekends relegated to the realm of memories, city residents this morning began getting back into the swing of things. For many, this morning marked the first definite details to be looked after as youngsters headed back to school. And for all came the sobering realization that there are fewer than 100 shopping days until Christmas.

No matter how one chose to spend the Labor Day weekend, there is little doubt the chief aim was to get away from it all for one last fling, before being forced into acceptance of the fact that fall is just around the corner. Whether it was relaxing at the lake, visiting—out-of-town relatives or friends, enjoying a final trip to the cottage or just plain loafing at home, the motive was the same — but time refused to stand still.

Today, it's back to school, back to the office, back on the rails — back to reality. And forward to the fall season.

Some Expect

bers. The predictions have changed hardly at all since Gordon's speech, the first by a British prime minister to the Congress since 1950.

Wilson told the delegates that even after the current six months of total freeze on wages and the further six months of severe curtailments, there would have to be stringent safeguards to keep paycheques in line with productivity.

HIT FEATHERBEDDING

He attacked "scandalous" practices which tend to restrict productivity — deliberate efforts to keep more men on a job than are needed.

Such practices in the end threaten the jobs they are designed to protect, Wilson said, because they make Britain less competitive.

The alternative to current government policy, he indicated, could well be a "depression such as we have not seen in this generation, where the workless might be numbered not as 1¼ to two per cent, but at 1,500,000 to 2,000,000."

National newspapers in London generally described the speech today as one of the toughest ever by a peacetime prime minister.

Most said it was designed not only to convince British people about the government's determination to take drastic measures, but also to impress the international bankers and the world at large on the same score.

65 Calls Answered By Brighton Police

TRENTON — At the past week' officers of the Ontario Provincial Police, Brighton Detachment, patrolled 4,418 miles, laid 18 charges under the Highway Traffic Act, issued 8 warnings, laid 4 charges under the Liquor Control Act, laid 4 charges under the criminal code and responded to 65 calls. They investigated 7 motor vehicle accidents in which 3 persons were injured and laid 3 charges in connection with these accidents.

Among the 65 calls that Brighton Detachment received were 3 thefts which are under investigation.

Tractor Wheel Passes Over Chest of Man

TRENTON — A 25-year-old Colborne area man, Wayne Fyne, is in Cobourg hospital suffering from head and other injuries as a result of a farm accident yesterday around noon.

Provincial police from the Brighton detachment say Fyne was driving a tractor up a three foot grade when the vehicle overturned, the wheel passing over his shoulder and chest. Fyne suffered a lacerated right eye and two broken ribs.

CBRT membership is made up mainly of express and freight handlers employed by the CNR. It represents about 22,000 of the 118,000 railway employees who walked out Aug. 30, tying up nearly 20,000 miles of vital railway track across the country.

The CBRT work-to-rule announcement has not yet enlisted the support of any of the other 17 railway unions involved in the dispute.

Carl Goldenberg, government-appointed conciliator, said in Montreal Monday he hopes all groups involved will observe terms of the strike-ending legislation, which provides for continuing railway-union contract talks.

Compulsory arbitration would be ordered unless some progress in the talks was being made by Nov. 15.

"I am certain that both sides prefer mediation to compulsory arbitration," Mr. Goldenberg said.

"The success of my mediation efforts depends on the cooperation I receive from railway management and from labor."

Meanwhile, 98,000 of the 118,000 who walked out are non-operating railway employees, those not involved in the actual running of the trains. This category includes the shop craft workers and the CBRT.

The 16 non-op unions are seeking increases averaging 30 per cent in their pay, which averaged $2.22 under their last contract with the railways.

The other 20 operating members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, who are paid by the mile, have requested a 25 per-cent pay increase plus a reduction in hours worked or miles run.

All contracts would date from last Dec. 31, when the employees' previous contracts with the railways expired.

The Aug. 26 walkout was the second nationwide rail tieup in Canada's history.

The first, a nine-day strike in 1950, resulted in widespread industrial layoffs and economic losses in the tens of millions of dollars.

Rescue Centre At Air Base Hive of Activity

TRENTON — The Rescue Coordination Centre at Canada's Forces Base, Trenton, bummed with activity this morning as personnel "scrambled" to dispatch aid to no less than four emergencies.

By first light equipment and crews had been alerted to participate in a rescue search and recovery operations that involved the force's land, water, and air facilities.

An aircraft with two persons aboard feared lost between the Lakehead and Toronto activated search operations on both sides of the border. A spokesman at the centre here said an Albatross amphibian from the Trenton base would retrace the route the pilot would normally fly between Sault Ste. Marie and Toronto while U.S. rescue services joined in the operation and searched the longer part of the likely route.

Simultaneously surface and air units from the Canadian rescue service began looking for a commercial airliner missing somewhere in the western expanses of Lake Ontario with three people aboard. Searchers are concentrating on travelled water routes between Port Dalhousie and Toronto for the pilot in their 44-foot lifeboat that had been rigged for sailing.

At the same time a Trenton based helicopter was ordered into the air on another rescue mission. Searchers received a call earlier requesting an airlift for two men stranded overnight on Gull Island in the Georgian Bay 18 miles off Penetang.

In the meantime the Coast-guard cutter Sorel from the Trenton centre reported a cutter had been seen to recover an overturned sailing offshore in Georgian Bay.

CHILD BRUISED

A two-and-a-half year old Carrying Place girl, Sandra Wood, suffered a bruised head when she was thrown against the windshield of a car driven by Kenneth Dunbar of Brighton, when the vehicle went out of control on the Canal Road, Murray Township, around 4.40 p.m. yesterday and skidded down the north ditch. The child was treated at Trenton hospital. Dunbar was not injured.

One is as Canadian as the other

At first glance, the caring seems the more typically Canadian. But if you look a little deeper, you'll find that the phone, too, is astonishingly Canadian. It's not just that Canadians have the "phone" telephone users in the world. (We've had that distinction for a number of years now, and we at Bell could take it as a tribute to the quality and low cost of our service.) No — the Canadianism of the phone is in the fact that over 95% of all telephone equipment is made in Canada; that Bell Canada is owned right here — over 80% of our shares are held by Canadian residents; that Northern Electric, Bell's manufacturing subsidiary, is developing new and unique instruments and services to meet specific Canadian needs.

That's why our advertisements often say — built, managed and owned by Canadians.

U Thant to Retire

Like his predecessor, Dag Hammarskjold of Sweden, United Nations secretary-general U Thant of Burma has had his ups and downs.

A recurring problem faced by both men has been the financial insolvency of the world body, due largely to the refusal of the communist bloc countries to pay their share of peace-keeping operations in various parts of the world.

Another has been the tendency of the rival power blocs, the United States included, to ignore United Nations rulings on the various crises that have come before the Security Council. This has been a factor in the undermining of the authority the United Nations ideally should exert in matters affecting the peace of the world.

Nevertheless the United Nations does represent a moderating influence on world affairs, however weak and ineffectual it may appear at times. Where it has failed may be attributed to the selfishness of the power blocs themselves, and not to any inherent weakness of the organization itself.

What success the international body has achieved is due in large measure to the firm and wise counsel of Hammarskjold and U Thant. Now the Burmese politician has indicated he will not seek another five-year term as the chief executive of the world body.

The strains of such a post are obvious, and it is to U Thant's credit that he has retained the respect of both east and west.

U Thant plans to retire when his term expires November 3. In the meantime he has sounded yet another warning on the increasingly dangerous international situation. In his view events are heading "remorselessly toward the outbreak of major war."

He said the sufferings of the people of Viet Nam were "a constant reproach to the conscience of humanity," and that a "tragic error" was being made in reliance on force in the "deceptive pursuit of peace."

That may be so, but there is the other side of this question — the possibility of communist domination of Asia unless the threat to Viet Nam from that quarter is halted. There is no choice between bad and worse in the U.S. intervention.

Nevertheless, the longer the war in Viet Nam continues the greater the chances of U Thant's fears being realized. Whoever succeeds him may be witness to a swirling-assaulting period from which neither east nor west will be able to extricate itself. On the other hand, if by negotiation a solution can be found to the Viet Nam problem the world may yet step back from the brink of disaster. That no such possibility is in view at present must be regarded as a continuing challenge to men of U Thant's calibre, to explore every avenue that might lead to peace.

Burma's Stability

Speaking of U Thant and of Burma, it is interesting to reflect that the former British colony is one of the better managed and prosperous countries of Southeast Asia.

And this has been achieved by the curious combination of a military government which espouses socialist ideals. The tenor of an article in a recent issue of the Burmese government publication, Forward, is very much in the socialist tradition.

Relating to Workers' Day celebrations, the article (contributed by a "A Worker") tells the form of a letter to his employer, saying, "We have gone along the road to Socialism for four years now and it is time we took stock of our achievements, failures, our difficulties. Only then can we correct past wrongs and make progress ..."

That was on the second day the seminar was chaired by U Hran Oke, a Chin cultivator from Haka. He was one of the nationals sitting in a place respected by the nation. Nobody dared dream of such a thing previously. Now every worker can count on his work to carry him to such a place.

The influence of the military government in Burmese life is all-pervading. Top man in the country is General Ne Win, who is also the title of Chairman of the Revolutionary Council. A middle-aged, studious looking man in a light summer uniform, General Ne Win was one of the speakers at the seminar.

Burma in many ways is indistinguishable from Cuba and Indonesia, from communism Castro-style on the one hand and military dictatorship a la President Sukarno on the other. But the Burmese regime gives a much better impression than either Cuba or Indonesia. It evidently commands the respect of the people and is genuinely interested in their welfare. It indulges none of the flights of Marxist imagination, economic extravagance, acts of repression and sabre-rattling that have been such a feature of life in Cuba and Indonesia in recent years. In short, Burma is a quiet, stable, land in the midst of a vast region of uncertainty in that part of Asia.

President William McKinley of the United States was shot by Leon Czolgosz, a young anarchist, 65 years ago today — in 1901 — and died eight days later. Czolgosz may have been weak-minded but little is known about him because he was executed soon after a speedy trial. The assassination caused a new attitude towards the president's security, because Oblgosz had simply queued to shake McKinley's hand, concealing his pistol under a handkerchief.

Price Freeze?

Brockville Recorder and Times

In the United States there has been a warning of legislation to hold prices unless business, labor and the union leaders act self-disciplined. Nothing as firm has come from the Canadian Government although its civil servant, the Economic Council of Canada, warned it months ago. Those who have just attained new income levels may feel that no special action is needed against inflation; but their relief is only temporary. The cost-of-living index is a measure of the discomfort of all people and of the ineptitude or even indifference of the Government in dealing with it.

Adhesions Bothersome Years After Operation

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I had a bladder operation five years ago. Recently I have had sharp pain and soreness in the vagina and the doctor said it is adhesions — that nothing can be done but surgery. He did not advise that, however. He said to take pain pills and hope it will go away, but they don't help. What is your opinion? — A. W.

In the healing process after an operation, some of the tissues may attach themselves a little differently — the surfaces address, and grow together.

There may have been some sagging, or you may have taken on weight, or some other change may after five years be putting strain on these adhesions and causing the pain.

It is true, as your doctor said, that surgery is the only way to correct the adhesions — if sometimes has to be done following an operation.

Whether to have this subsequent surgery depends on a number of things: your age, your general physical condition, the amount of discomfort, the question of whether the adhesions are in a location to do very much harm, or are merely causing discomfort.

I cannot say whether the pain will disappear. Your doctor is in a better position to speculate on that. Some further stretching of the issue may, in time, relax the amount of strain and make you feel better, but this is hardly likely to occur overnight.

Thus the best I can do is to explain these considerations and leave it to your physician to decide what is the wisest course for you.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am enclosing the required 10 cents in coin and a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your booklet, "Tips on How to Stop Smoking." I pay cards a lot when the ladies all smoke. What do you do with your hands while waiting for someone to play or deal? — Mrs. B.

Your question is a difficult one to answer for smokers who are trying to stop. They pick up a cigarette without really thinking, just to have something to occupy themselves.

There's nothing wrong with folding your hands in your lap.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it possible for persons to have tuberculosis without it showing on large X-rays? My skin tests and those of my children show positive but the X-rays show nothing. What can I do to protect my family and myself? I can't afford expensive tests. Could I have a form of TB that does not show on X-rays? — M.S.

It is possible for early TB to escape X-ray detection but it usually shows up with time. Positive skin tests show that you and the children have been exposed to TB. Whether you exposed the children, or whether you were all exposed to the disease carried by someone else is in question. My guess is the latter.

You could not have exposed the children unless you have clinical TB — that is, an active form of it.

Tuberculosis is distinctly a public health problem, and I suggest that you contact your doctor, local or state health department for such further test as may be needed to learn definitely whether you have the disease. In such instances, periodic check X-rays every six or 12 months are highly desirable.

Note to Mrs. R. L.: It's true that any operation involves some potential risk, just as there is risk any time you cross a street or step into a bathtub. But surgery nevertheless accepts the risk and makes the surgery less difficult.

Beards Versus Conformists

Toronto Star

The controversy over the National Cash Register Company employee who was fired for wearing a beard is one more example of the extraordinary passions — pro and con — which this harmless adornment provokes in some people. The employee's whiskers, a company executive explained, are "not the kind that shelter NCR's 'image.'"

When a guy grows a Bohemian beard, he belongs in Yorkville or in a Siberian salt mine — not in a modern business office."

A companion piece to this incident is provided by the case which the late Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the United States Supreme Court used to tell on himself. As a young man in the 1880s — when beards were in full flower — he applied for a job teaching school. The chairman of the school board found his qualifications in order. Then he noticed a fatal flaw in the applicant's appearance.

"Sir!" he thundered, "you have the beardless air of an egg!"

The children, he pointed out, could not possibly have any respect for a clean-shaven teacher.

So he delivered an ultimatum. If the future Chief Justice wanted the job, he must grow a proper set of whiskers or look on his chin rather than by what is in his head.

Integrity

I keep my privacy by not being controversial. I speak my truth, but there is really nothing in it to be controversial about. It's not in my nature. An entertainer's job is not to get involved in world problems. It would be like something from the White House telling him how to sing songs. I believe we have better leaders than I am. I'm not an expert like the man who has to live with these problems all the time. —Pop singer Bobby Vinton.

Beauty and The Beatles

James Morris in The

Saturday Evening Post

I think one reason why many of us have lately become reconciled to these prodigies (the Beatles) is this: That into their music, into the once frenzied Mersey Sound, there has crept a strain of something sagaciously approaching beauty.

"Yesterday" seems to me a lovely song, and so does "Michelle;" the Beatles have attained the sickliness from the popular ballad, and made of it something less and haunting. To an Englishman particularly, this development offers comfort. A beautiful piece is what I would like my country to be: not a powerful state necessarily, or even an earnest state, or rich one, but a state where, beauty is an objective of policy, beauty in small things as well as the beauty of tolerance as of art, the beauty of generosity and piety and proper pride. The last time England was such a country, it seems to me, was in the first Elizabethan age, which had a sense of beautiful fitness seems to have enriched every level of public life; and oddly enough, that was the very last time in English history when we possessed not a single colony, not a serf, not a gold mine, not a safe sterling investment outside our own shores.

Ambassador To Nairobi

Ottawa Journal

The appointment of Canada's only woman ambassador, Miss Margaret Meagher, as high Commissioner to Kenya is equally flattering to Miss Meagher and to Kenya. External Affairs sends to Nairobi a representative whose sound judgment and quiet professionalism has made her one of the country's most respected diplomats. Her obvious competence has never made it necessary for her occasions to her femininity and if there is a stereotype for lady ambassadors, Miss Meagher is its living reproof.

Kenya is a rather small and still developing country. But sending a representative of Miss Meagher's stature shows that Canada recognizes its importance in the emergence of the new Africa. Kenya's stability makes it one of the hopes of the continent and excellent place to serve as a window on other African countries.

Miss Meagher will be a key person in Canada's aid program to Africa which, it has shown some signs of being beefed up. She will be, once again, a gracious, working ambassador.

Pantomime Performances Brighten M.P.s' Dark Days

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — You'd almost think that some cynical old mousie must have been calling the Honorable Members what a lot of us poor, long-suffering taxpayers have been saying about them.

To wit:

Basically the country libs no problems the politicians didn't create.

They now seem so guilt-ridden. So subdued. Almost sat-upon. Plain humble.

Talking, of all unlikely things, of what the people back home expect of them.

You'd just never recognize the old place;

Perhaps it is that for the first time in successive years of compounding crisis, the enormity of the problem pile-up has been overwhelming them.

The only light moments come, not by listening to their catalogue of crisis, but watching them.

These are some performers so polished they could as well make their presentations in pantomime.

Like Gilles Gregoire, the wildly unpredictable Creditiste-turned-Separatist, known ever since he roared into the Commons four years ago as "The Eggplant" of the House.

CLEAR THE TRACK

When he is tearing along under a full head of steam — and he works up some incredible wordage - per - minute — this Fastest Tongue in the West reaches up with his right hand for what has to be an invisible whistle cord and yanks it down, giving four or five mighty blasts on the imaginary diesel horn.

And when the Gregoire Express is blowing for the Commons crossings, sometimes even Mr. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux feels he has the speed to get over the track with an interruption.

Gilles' invention was paid the Fastest Tongue in the House the other day by the former Party Chief, Creditiste Leader Real Caouette, when somebody remarked that no matter what else Gee you might say about Gilles Gregoire, you had to admit he was capable.

Sure Gilles is capable, cracked Caouette, capable of anything.

The oratorical "athlete" of Parliament is the former CCF-er-turned-Liberal, Sarto Fisher. Argue, known as "The Catcher."

The "catcher" is in reference to two sports.

Fishing and baseball.

When Hazen plays the part of the reluctant fisherman in the Senate, he employs a number of gestures including one known from his House of Commons days as "The Measure."

Involved in "The Measure" is the sticking out of the Angus hands as if the Senator were fishing the size of the one that got away.

TWO WAY STRETCH

Watching "The Athlete" at play in the Senate, women in the fisheries are not so inclined to think of Hazen as "The Catcher" of fish but rather as the "Catcher" salesman selling yard goods.

But to the men in the taxpaying bleachers, if the good Senator isn't the fish "Catcher," then he is certainly the man behind the bat plate.

This is when he goes into an oratorical crouch that looks for all the world like a big league ball catcher, ramming his fist into an imaginary mitt; then scrutinizing up to throw to the pitcher.

In the Senate you may often see Hazen do so first, but you can always be sure it is Hazen "The Catcher" behind the plate.

Second first oratorical athlete in Parliament comes from the Commons, Conservative Dennis MacIntosh of Cape Breton South, who plays the part of the high strung thoroughbred, the sprinter or the fighter.

Always intense, perhaps even tense, he speaks from crouched-trigger stance, bent on ready at the crack of the starting gun, the bell, whistle or announcer, for instant action.

Sometimes Dennis MacInnis looks like a diver about to back-knife off the floor. Other times, when angry, like a fighter in his corner. Or when frustrated, anxiously, in a coiled-spring posture, for Mr. Speaker to give him the floor, like a sprinter wound tight behind the starting line or the quarterback after calling the signal.

But apart from these sparks of light and life, it is a darkly sombre House right now.

Strictly Personal

On Accepting Reality

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

"Who are the people you feel sorriest for?" was the question thrown out by someone at the dinner table.

Each of us reflected before answering. I said, after a while, that the physically ill and handicapped were not to be considered, but only persons who were to all normal in body and mind.

I immediately thought of a girl character in the play, The Rainmaker," I had seen a few nights before. He was a glib and handsome young fellow named Starbuck, and in a rare moment of weakness he confessed that he was afraid he would die before I get it in my hand as when I had it in my head."

I think I feel sorriest for the men and women who cannot accept, or be satisfied with, reality. The sweetest thing in life is never as good as the one they are going to meet next month; the success they achieve sours as soon as they taste it; the wife they always better on the other side of the railroad.

But there is no other side of the railroad, and next month's dream-heart will also look thumpy in the morning, and next year's success will seem as empty as today's. They are the victims not of learning or believing.

Imagination, hope, ambition — all these are traits to have and to hold on to. But they must be rooted in reality: the ultimate must have contact with the earth, or else nothing on earth will still and satisfy the unresting in the mind.

I am not making the prosaic point that we should learn to be contented with their lot — contentment is often just another name for loafing, but I am saying that the ultimate dream must correspond to human possibilities, and must allow concessions to human frailty.

The people I feel sorriest for are not those who fall (for failure can have its own glory and its own bittersweet satisfaction) but those who succeed — and, succeeding, find that it is really the rainbow they wanted without what they want for happiness.

But happiness always eludes the man who always chases them, for they are actually deniers of reality. They repudiate the world, with all its imperfections; and, in revenge, the world refuses to yield up to them the slightest measure of its peace. They end their lives living within their minds; and no prison is more terrible than this.

Emancipated

Portland Oregonian

Speaking to the Soroptimist Congress in Stockholm, a British woman, Philippa Harris, advocated the abolishment of the titles "Miss" and "Mrs." and loud were the cheers from the women assembled from 19 nations.

Mrs. (pardon the expression) objects to the titles reflect a women's success in finding a husband and are ridiculous in this day when women are fighting for independence and their most important accomplishment is to get married.

Harris, as presumably a fully liberated woman should be more sure of her own worth. It would call all women "Mrs," regardless of marital status, and all men "Mr.", as Mr., the equivalent in other languages than English, and to be addressed as "Mrs." it was argued.

Let the cheers the lady called Harris evoked, the paper received mass approbation from its feminine readers. One wonders, however, if the ladies individually would be equally enthusiastic about the abolishing of another symbol of success in snaring a mate — the diamond ring for "Mrs" is expected to buy for her left hand?

Symbols Will Help South Vietnamese Pick Constitutional Assembly Members

An election in South Viet Nam to set for Sept. 11. But it's only to choose a constituent assembly which will decide what form of government the country is going to have. A Canadian Press reporter describes the election procedure.

BY DOUGLAS AMARON

SAIGON (CP)—South Vietnamese will vote for buffalo, coq wheels, torches and other symbols as well as for names when they cast ballots in the Sept. 11 election for a constituent assembly.

Election machinery has been turning for several months in this war-torn country but the 550-odd candidates for 108 seats in the assembly were unveiled until Aug. 28 when they, and the press, were given two weeks to outline platforms.

Until then, South Viet Name'ese daily and hundreds of weekly newspapers were under censorship as far as campaigning was concerned. Political censorship now has been lifted although stories still will be checked to ensure there are no security breaches.

There were two reasons for the short campaign—to prevent the war effort from becoming bogged down by electioneering and to protect candidates from physical harm, even assassination. The Viet Cong have threatened to disrupt the election and it is easier to provide protection for two weeks than for two months.

A candidate must be 25, a resident of South Viet Nam for two years, free from criminal record and sane. Past association with Communists is a guarantee that his name will be stricken from the list.

COMMITTEE DECIDES

There are no deposits, no formal nomination fees as in Canada. A candidate submits his or her name—about 50 women are in the running —to a government election committee for screening and on a certain date those who make the grade have their names posted throughout the country.

During the following month, anyone in South Viet Nam can register a complaint against any candidate. These complaints — maybe accusations of a criminal background or political deviation—are investigated by police who report back to the election committee.

The committee rules for or against the candidate, although a man can appeal for a review of his case if turned down. Finally, about four weeks before the election, there is a second posting of names and these are the approved candidates for whom ballots are cast.

Voters, men and women, must be 18 and without a criminal record. Voting lists, prepared from famy cards already issued as identification, are posted and anyone whose name is missing—a frequent possibility when there is so much movement of refugees—can have it added if he proves identity and eligibility.

About 5,000,000 of the country's 16,000,000 population are eligible to vote.

CHOICE IN SAIGON

Representation mainly is by voting population—one representative for each 80,000-vote district. There are some exceptions—Vietnamese of Cambodian extraction and the mountain tribes—or Montagnards as they are called—have special representation.

Because of its concentrated population, Saigon voters elect five-man slates in their districts. Party campaigning consequently will be more evident here than elsewhere in the country. Most candidates have no announced party ties.

In an attempt to give all candidates an equal chance, each district has an election committee on which candidates are represented. Campaign details are generally agreed upon by the committee—speaking dates and sites, equal newspaper space and electricity for all if wanted.

"This is to prevent a millionaire from getting all the advantage." a Vietnamese man who ran in the last election said. "Even a millionaire doesn't work 100 per cent. If I want to invite the whole community to my home for tea and then talk politics, I am quite free to do so."

GUIDED BY SYMBOLS

On election day there is a ballot for each candidate showing his name and symbol. The symbol is a guide to the illiterate.

If a candidate has directed his campaign to the farmers, his symbol may be a buffalo, the beast of burden; if to the middle class, a torch, symbol of youth, a torch. The symbol is displayed prominently on campaign literature, in posters and other literature so a voter unable to read still will remember the ballot with the buffalo is that of the man who promised to help the farmers at the election rally he attended a few days earlier.

If that is the man he wants to vote for, he drops the ballot in one of the five to 15 boxes at the poll and deposits the others in a wastepaper basket. Voting starts about 7 a.m. and continues to 7 or 8 p.m.

Election committee officials and agents of all candidates are at each of the many polling booths throughout the country. When polls close, boxes are locked, sealed and taken under armed guard to a district headquarters for counting.

Local results will be known election night. Results from the whole country may take a day or two to reach Saigon although full postal and telegraph facilities are being made available to election authorities. In Saigon, a huge bulletin board is being constructed in front of the downtown city hall and results will be posted there as soon as they become available.

DECIDE ON SYSTEM

Because the election is simply to choose the people who will decide the future form of government for South Viet Nam, politics are being played down and the emphasis is on the personal record of candidates. Civil servants, doctors, lawyers, educationists, businessmen, farmers and more than 70 military personnel who have obtained leave of absence are among candidates.

After election, the assembly will meet, argue the merits of French, American, British systems of government and, eventually, make a choice. The assemblymen then may resign so a new election can be held or, possibly, vote themselves in as first members of the assembly, congress or parliament.

With the election campaign limited to two weeks, experts will only guess at the vote turnout. Apathy is reported, Buddhists have threatened a boycott and Viet Cong threats of violence may keep voters from polls. In past elections here, where voting is not compulsory, turnout ranged from 70 to 80 per cent.

"I guess for Sept. 11 to 70 per cent," a qualified Vietnamese official said.

Whether voting will follow the rules and be honest also is another guess in a country where even the premier, admits there is corruption in government. But the same official said:

"With 300,000 Americans, 50,000 Koreans, Australians, New Zealanders and 400 foreign newspaper men in this country, there'll be so damned many foreign observers I think the election will have to be honest."

"Well, you heard wrong — I did not introduce you as my 'meddler-in-law'."

Parliamentarians to Spend Almost Month in Canada

By KEN CLARK

OTTAWA (CP) — Commonwealth parliamentarians come to Canada this week to have a look at the country's constitutional problems and do a little official merrymaking.

Will take the group of 200 almost a month to achieve all three objectives. They begin assembling in Montreal Thursday and will have Canada Oct. 5.

Following their arrival, they spend a few days in Montreal before breaking up into groups for a two-week sightseeing tour of Canada. It will last until the opening of the 12th general conference of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Ottawa.

As delegates to the nine-day conference, they will take a searching look at the Commonwealth and the role of parliamentary government.

The agenda includes both some ivory-tower stuff (the role of the house of Common) and hot current issues (the breakaway of white-ruled Rhodesia from Britain).

TOPICS VARIED

There'll also talk over ways to settle disputes such as Rhodesia within the Commonwealth. Food resources, trade, aid, the population explosion and education also will be discussed in the Commonwealth context—will also get a going-over.

There should be a wide variety of points of view on these questions. All 87 legislatures in the Commonwealth are associate members.

The fact that the association's role is to promote understanding among Commonwealth parliamentarians, rather than make decisions, could also promote free expression.

STUDY NEW FINES

TORONTO (CP)—A new system of traffic fine, which could penalize motorists who run out of gasoline on the Toronto expressway system, is being studied by the city transportation committee. A spokesman said the committee was disturbed Friday by an Ontario Motor League report that in one year 1,232 motorists ran out of fuel on the Don Valley Parkway and Gardiner Expressway.

Lightning Bolt Knocks 25 Cows Down in Stalls, Damages Silo, TV Set

Vandervelde's west of Rechberville must be just about the luckiest family in Prince Edward County.

Or maybe they were a bit unlucky at that.

Early Sunday morning during the severe electric storm which swept the Bay of Quinte area, Jacob Vandervelde 10, was milking cows at one of the family's two farms when lightning struck the barn, knocked 25 Holstein cows unconscious and ruined the milking machine and damaged the silo.

Also struck by the same bolt of lightning was the TV aerial on atop the Vandervelde house. The antenna was ruined and all the TV set knocked off in the living room.

At the stable the Vandervelde youth was dazed and shaken up by the bolt but otherwise was unharmed.

Mr. Vandervelde said the 25 cows were all fastened in their steel stanchions when the lightning struck.

The bolt apparently hit the 65-foot cement silo, knocked chunks of concrete out of the silo walls throwing them as much as 300 feet, and then followed down into the stable.

All of the cows in the line were knocked to the floor and were semi-conscious for about five minutes before they were able to get back onto their feet.

The milking machine attached to one of the cows was ruined, its motor being blown apart, and at least ten windows in the stable were blown out. The barn itself escaped damage.

"It was close enough," said Mr. Vandervelde today. "But the cattle are all right."

Fail to Serve Summons on U.S. Airmen

TORONTO (CP) — Police Monday tried unsuccessfully to serve a summons on the leader of a team of American airmen investigating the crash Friday of a United States Navy stunt plane.

The summons was issued by Dr. Morton Shulman, Toronto's chief coroner, requiring Cmdr. Harry Walker of Greene Air, Mich. to appear at an inquest into the death of Lt.-Cmdr. Richard Oliver, Jr.

Cmdr. Oliver, a member of the USN's Blue Angels flying team was killed Friday when his F-8A Tiger fighter disintegrated after striking Lake Ontario during an air show at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Dr. Shulman ordered the American away from the plane Sunday when they refused to give him one of two reports they had prepared.

The USN officers checked out of a hotel Monday after they were ordered by Washington to return to the U.S. because they couldn't complete the investigation.

Police arrived at the hotel later but were unsuccessful in locating the seven-man team.

Police are standing guard over the wreckage at the airport until the investigation is complete. The hangar has been sealed by the coroner's office.

De Gaulle Pays New Hebrides One-Day Visit

PORT VILA, New Hebrides (CP) — French President de Gaulle flew into one of the quietest receptions of his roundthe-world tour when he arrived here today for a one-day visit.

Flags fluttered from buildings and ships in the harbor and hundreds of people waited to welcome the first French head of state to visit this tiny Anglo-French condominium in the Pacific.

But there were none of the wild scenes that greeted the 75-year-old leader on his arrival in Noumea, New Caledonia, three days ago.

TINY PIECES OF baby clothing often get lost in the laundry. I solved the problem by using a mesh bag to keep these items together in the wash in g machine: little socks, hair ribbons, bibs, undershirts. Saves the fabric, too. And makes sorting easier! I even put our little girl's frilly party dresses in the mesh bag to save the delic a t e trim. (Thanks to Mrs. C. R. Woodward, Granville, Ohio)

This Unwed Father No Bum, Pays Heavily

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Recently an irate mother wrote and asked why you never had any kind words for the unwed father. Your reply was very unsympathetic. You said you had no good conduct medals lying around for unwed fathers and that it was always the girl who paid. You added, "The boy can go about his business. Nothing changes for him."

I disagree. I am the unwed father but my best buddy is. Believe me he has paid plenty.

He got the news when he was a junior in college. He actually wanted to marry the girl but her folks were against it and she listened to them — not to him. His life changed that very day. He began to feel depressed and couldn't study. His grades went to the dogs. He flunked out of school and had to take a laborer's job. He is paying child support and he will continue to pay until the child is 21. The worst of it is the guy feels so guilty and worthless now that he refuses to take out a girl. He doesn't think he's good enough for anybody.

Some unwed fathers may be bums but some are good guys who made a mistake. In this case the girl will make a much better adjustment than the boy, and I'll bet on it — FOR JUSTICE.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR JUSTICE — You are right. I should not have expressed the point in such broadly general terms. Dozens of parents, social workers and yes, even unwed mothers, wrote in protest. Each individual deserves to be judged on his own merits and I am grateful to you and to other readers who reminded me.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I know your column is not bill board for family fights but I hope you'll make an exception and print this letter.

My brother and his wife bought a poodle for their children. When I heard they named the dog Pearl after our dear mother who passed away last November I was shocked. No finer woman ever lived and I consider this a shocking way to honor her memory.

I couldn't believe that grown people could be so stupid and insensitive and told them so. They called me an oddball and said I have no sense of humor. What is your opinion? — TROUBLE IN CARSON CITY.

DEAR TROUBLE — Your brother and wife must have cornflakes where their brains belong. It's lucky these two dumb clucks met because they deserve each other.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My brother phoned from the east and asked if a good friend of his could stay with us while he looked for a job. I said O.K. because once I needed a favor from my brother and got it.

Two years two months ago and Sam is still with us — in a two bedroom apartment. My wife and I, and our two kids, are plenty crowded without company and now it's really a mess.

The worst part of it is that Sam and my wife stay up half the night playing cards and poking around. My wife is too tired to get up in the morning and fix breakfast and pack my lunch.

Sam has no job, no money and no place to go. I'd feel like a heel throwing him out but I've had it. Please advise — NEW-PORT BEACH.

DEAR NEW — Why should Sam find a job when loafing is such fun? Loan him enough for a week's rent at the Y.M.C.A. and send him on his way.

* * *

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

HALIGONIANS HAD ZOO

HALIFAX, (CP) — This port city has the zoo today, but it was the site of the first zoo in North America. The 100-acre zoological gardens were established in 1847 by Andrew Downs, and survived until 1868. Mounted moose heads were sent to European monarchs from the zoo, and a live polar bear was once shipped to King Victor Emmanuel of Italy.

Kids Are So Pushed Around When Orders Stop, So Do Kids

By MARILYN ARGUE

OTTAWA (CP)—Sometimes you'd think that kids were invented so other people would have somebody to order around.

Mums and dads, schoolteachers, other kids—there's always someone pushing valuable information like "Open your books at page 103, class" or "If you do it that way, you'll wish you hadn't"

It gets so that when the orders stop, the kids do too.

"Some people are so used to being shoved around that they can't use freedom very well," says Eleanor Sim.

For the last 10 years, she has been helping children learn to tell themselves what to do at a summer school at Strathmere, her family farm near here.

Called the Valley School of the Arts, it had 103 children from nine to 14 this summer. They were spread over the working farm's 400 acres, singing, dancing, acting or painting with adult counselors, hiking, swimming or playing baseball with other campers.

Or they could just sit around and talk or chew a stalk of hay and think if that's what they wanted to do.

"Ordinary camps are too regimented," says Mrs. Sim, a tall, attractive blonde with three children, Heather, 23, David, 20, and Robert, 18. She is a sociologist and her husband Alex, also a member of the school's board, is an anthropologist.

The kids at Strathmere arrive at 10 a.m. in two buckloads after a 30-mile drive from Ottawa. The commuter-campers are divided into age groups of 12, each with its own teen-age counsellor and club house.

PLAN OWN ACTIVITIES

In the morning each group meets and decides what it will do that day. Its members may decide on drama followed by art and playing in the hayloft. But whatever they do they do as a group.

"We hope they will become good leaders through being good group members," says Mrs. Sim. "Every member of the ideal group is a leader, and they rotate."

School fees are $75 a month. Adult staff includes actor Brian Gordon and Gay Stinson who help the children write and produce their own plays.

Dance counsellor is Elizabeth Langley, an Australian from the University of Ottawa physical education department. She says the job of dancing offends the mind of a young boy but that the kind of dancing she introduces isn't what they expect.

One dance has the boys and girls moving "as imaginatively as possible" around group - designed arrangements of steps and blocks.

Backward somersaults and walking on your hands are permissible.

Groups that choose art are helped by Montreal sculptor Edgard McIntyre in a converted one-room schoolhouse. The young Picasso turned the inside into an aquarium with swinging mobiles and fishy murals.

Music emphasis is on group effort and individual works of art or writing are never expected to mature. "Working together the children learn that their individual efforts mean something in the total picture," Mr. McIntyre says.

Mrs. Sim admits that the freedom confuses some children at first but "they all learn if you give them time."

Successful Living

Dreams an Answer To Pent-up Pressures

DEAR DORIS — I'd like to know the name and author of the dream book. You mentioned the book was a modern interpretation as written for students by an expert psychologist. All I have is a pocket book which is one removed from "good omen, bad omen", and not exactly satisfactory, to say the least. — IMA DREAMER.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR IMA — This one has nothing to do with omens. It works at showing how the subconscious takes dream time to boil over and let go those urgent emotions which civilized behavior prohibits during the day.

Not only do such dreams release us; they can also give us clues as to why we do things, if we have help in interpreting the dream symbols. I'm sending you the name of the book and author.

DEAR DORIS — What 'do you think about the statement of a Canadian fashion editor that gowns will have high necklines and narrow sleeves? — MARDIE.

DEAR MARDIE — That it the cap Sis — wear it! We have to adapt the current trends to our style of beauty.

Not all can wear high necklines. How about the short-necked girl? And to dress a fat arm in a tight sleeve would only be to accentuate a figure fault.

(Don't just muddle along. Do something about what's troubling you. A letter to Doris can put you on the way to more Successful Living).

Susanna's Family Fair

SCHOOL'S IN

Operation "Johnnie's First Day of School" was a success—but his mother hasn't recovered!

As one kindergarten teacher put it, "The children are marvelous. It's some of the parents who take a while to adjust."

But, even you, as a well adjusted parent, might appreciate a clearer look at the other side of the coin. Apart from shoo-really-difficult situations there is a standard area in which mother can cooperate with her child's first teachers.

It is an area where her thoughtful contributions may mean the difference between a wealth and a dearth of experience for Johnny and Jane during their initial months in school.

About taking him, leaving him, and picking him up. You'll feel it is necessary to take him to school yourself the first few times, please no lingering good-byes. Without you there, it will usually take him somewhat less than three minutes to give him self up to the inevitable and integrate happily with the group.

If you can bear to let him go alone there are bound to be responsible older children in the neighborhood with whom you can make arrangements to take over this duty until he can manage it himself.

However, whenever you have made a definite date to pick him up at a certain time, don't be late. Little ones have a horrible fear of being forgotten.

Don't call her "teacher". Learn his teacher's name right from the beginning. If it is Miss Mayberry, then always call her Miss Mayberry. It will make the relationship you both have with her seem more personal.

SEVENTEEN NAVY BLUE TRENCH COATS — SIZE 4X

Save everyone's sanity by sewing or marking his name in everything that is removable. For identifying running shoes, rainwear, etc., a felt marking pen is indispensable.

Keep clothing as simple and streamlined as possible. Frilly dresses and too full skirts on little girls have a way of wandering into the paint mixtures. Braces under sweaters and jackets on little boys also present their own special problem.

Later on, a one-piece snow suit for school is ideal. Zip, zip, and they're dressed. It is painful to always be the last one ready.

WORK OF ART

Never say "What is it?" when he brings home his version of a train (as wild as any art you've ever seen). He knows what it is and expects that you will too.

You've safe on home plate with the question "Tell me about it!" Not only have you avoided insulting him, by sidestepping the "What is it?"-trap but you may have also opened up the floodgates of conversation with him.

Go ahead and bolster his ego with a bulletin board in the kitchen. Instead of letting his artwork and other achievements pile up in the corner or on top of the refrigerator, put them on display each day.

It might be nice to save, in a folder, the art that really stultified you. Some day when he is rich and famous (and neurotic) he may want to discuss them with his analyst—SUSANNA

Freckled and full of fun. You know this little fellow's mother loves him and packs a good school lunch for him every weekday. Mary Moore gives some rules and tips for lunches that will keep him smiling.

(Canada Department of Agriculture)

PACKING SCHOOL LUNCHES

Today your little ones went back to school and all was quietness in your house. Did yours have to carry school lunches. Did you pack proper lunches?

The school lunch is not just a meal to keep your child going until supper time. It is one of the three full - scale meals he needs to nourish him every day, all day long, so he will grow strong and stay healthy.

He must have the proteins, starches, fats, vitamins and minerals that are his daily requirements, but you have to be the resourceful one who packs them in transportable form.

My secretary, Shirley, says lots of kids trade lunch items so it is your job to make his lunches so colorful, varied and interesting that he never dreams of swapping.

GENERAL RULES FOR CARRIED SCHOOL LUNCHES

1. Some form of protein is important: meat, eggs, cheese, fish, peanut butter plus milk.

2. Raw fruits in season or vegetables or both are also necessary.

3 Since sandwiches form the bulk of the lunch; this important carbohydrate should be of highest quality. That means they should be made of whole wheat bread.

4. Treats. Surprise your little one with a different treat each day of the week. If it is a sweet it should be a good one (not candy); 1 or 2 big plump prunes stuffed with nuts or peanut butter; choice raisins of all different varieties candied apricots; nuts of all different kinds.

SANDWICH FILLING IDEAS FOR FIVE DAYS

NOTES:

1. Pack lettuce wrapped separately in wax paper. If it is put into the sandwich it may be soaked and wilted by lunch time.

2. Add seasoning and boiled dressing or mayonnaise to any of the following:

Cheese: Sliced or process or creamed with addition of chopped pickles or olives, parsley, bacon, pimiento, prunes, nuts or raisins.

BOYS DON'T DRESS

MONTREAL (CP) — Riding schools attract few boys because they usually don't like to dress up in correct riding clothes, says Louise Rowell, a young riding instructor. "Only those who go into riding competitively or professionally seem interested."

Is it that "nagging backache again?

If it's backache that's bothering you, it could be due to urinary irritation and bladder weakness. Dodd's Kidney Pills can help bring you relief. Anonymous Callers Are Hard to Apprehend

TORONTO (CP) — Telephone terrorists strike an estimated 9,000 times a year in Toronto. Only three were convicted last year.

William Pilkington, morality inspector with the Toronto police force, says the anonymous callers who make laughing or breathing sounds or short obscenities are among the most difficult criminals to apprehend.

To combat the menace Toronto police have organized a special squad of policewomen and the Bell Telephone Co. has invested $300,000 in equipment and personnel to trace calls.

Women are the favorite victims of callers, and policewomen posing as domestics advertising for work have been successful in apprehending several.

Val Hartman, chief social worker with the department of reform institutions, says telephone perversions are symptoms of larger mental problems. "The obscene caller is frightened and feels inadequate toward the opposite sex."

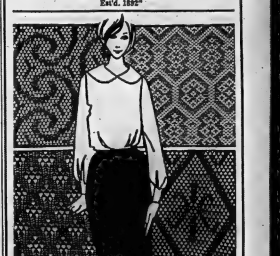
Callers cannot be pinned down to a specific type, however. They are found among every education and economic group, both married and unmarried.

Police divide them into two groups. There are those who call a number at random only once and those who call the same number repeatedly. They say a person who calls again and again knows the victim or has been successful in getting the person to talk to him.

CAN'T TAP LINES

The one-shot callers account for about half of such calls and are almost impossible to catch.

"It would be easy if we could tap lines," says a spokesman for the telephone company, but tapping lines is illegal.



The tracer is the only equipment that can be used legally. This is an electronic device that is attached to a phone and can trace the call back to its origin. But it presents a problem. Often the victim can't notify the telephone company before the caller hangs up.

Bell has some advice on how to cope with callers. Don't talk to the terrorist. Hang up. If the calls continue, notify the company.

Three days after the new plan went into effect a 13-year-old girl received 26 calls before they were traced. A 29-year-old factory worker contented...

Centennial Preview Feature Of Program at Marmora Fair

MARMORA — Never let it be said that modern day sophistication has sounded the death-knell of the small country fair.

At least if that is the case, officials of Marmora Fair and residents of the Marmora district have yet to hear about it.

Labor Day Monday was the annual Marmora Fall Fair and if attendance is any criterion district residents still appreciate the opportunity to see a good rural show, enjoy a bit of entertainment — and visit with friends they possibly haven't seen since last year.

Fair president Pat Bertrand and his executive put together an interesting fair show. There were light and heavy horse classes, a good cattle show, harness races and, apparently most interesting for many of the fair-goers, old time fiddling, step dancing, pie eating and other contests.

In the Crawford Arena there was a good vegetable display.

But one of the most interesting exhibits was that of the Marmora Centennial Association which took advantage of the program to give a preview of what they have in store for 1967 — Canada's Centennial Year.

The exhibit, planned by Association chairman Gordon Bennett, along with Mrs. G. Meiklejohn and Miss Grace Warren and their committee, was a hive of activity all afternoon, as fair-goers stopped to admire museum items and old time costumes.

. . . . . the costumes were on store dummies. Four Association members, along with a small girl, dressed in costumes of the past century roamed the fairgrounds, lending an old time atmosphere to the occasion.

Hastings County Warden Clayton Hall and Clarke Rollins, MLA for Hastings East, officially opened the fair.

Violence

Day parade to the Canadian National Exhibition was transformed Monday into a massive protest against the use of injunctions in labor-management disputes.

A forest of placards calling for the abolition of injunctions marked the course of 8,000 marchers who trammed a three-mile route to the CNE, which closed Monday night.

Elsewhere in Ontario, a record crowd watched Hamilton Tiger-Cats defeat Ottawa Rough Riders 36-12 in an Eastern Football Conference game at Hamilton.

Cloudy, cool weather prevailed over Manitoba most of the weekend. In the Gimli area, 50 miles north of Winnipeg, strong northwest winds caused Lake Winnipeg to rise two feet Sunday night, flooding large tracts of land.

RIDERS BOMB ALOUETTES

In Regina, Saskatchewan Rough Riders bombed Montreal Alouettes 44-0 in a Canadian Football League interlocking game and Calgary Stampeders nipped Toronto Argonauts 15-6 in Calgary.

On the West Coast, the Pacific National Exhibition closed Monday in Vancouver. Elsewhere in British Columbia, railworkers in the southern part of the province remained the only major holdouts Monday night towards settlement of the national rail strike.

Meanwhile, clergymen said in Labor Day messages that Canada's poor have not shared in the country's riches.

Maurice Cardinal Roy, archbishop of Quebec and primate of the Roman Catholic Church in Canada, said in Quebec City that 25 per cent of Canadian families have a revenue of less than $3,000 a year.

He said the initiative being taken on the war on poverty is timid with more than 1,000,000 persons under-educated and 1,-300,000 suffering from some permanent physical disability.

In Toronto, Lord Soper, a Methodist minister and the only non-Anglican clergyman to sit in the House of Lords, told an audience of labor leaders and businessmen that the world's wealth has gone to the rich and few and not to the poor and many.

Labor Minister Nicholson, in his Labor Day standards, warned that gains in wages and working conditions must be matched by gains in productivity if Canadian workers are to enjoy a continued increase in living standards.

If Hitler Did Not Dread Camp Borden Many Canadians Still Flinch at Name

By CARMAN CUMMING

CAMP BORDEN, Ont. (CP)— In the late summer of 1938, with war talk in the air, 700 troops from Camp Borden paraded in a motorized column through the centre of Toronto.

The brave sight impelled their commander, Col. W. G. Hagarty of Halifax, to observe: "I guess Hitler's heard of Camp Borden by now."

History doesn't record whether Hitler flinched at the thought of Camp Borden. Many Canadian veterans still do.

The memories are of sand, poison ivy, route marches and more sand.

Camp Borden was officially opened 52 years ago. Since then hundreds of thousands of troops have trained here. During the Second World War alone 185,000 soldiers—almost half the number who served overseas — passed through the camp.

Since the end of the war, it has eased back from this frenetic pace.

Its streets are well shaded now and the sand beside them has even produced grass. Married quarters and shopping centres have sprouted and children play in the parks while the camp goes on with its main work—turning out trainees 3,000 or more at a time. The name has been changed, officially at least, to Canadian Forces Base Borden.

'LIFE WAS MISERABLE'

A half-century ago, the landscape was not so pleasant. Then, as the defence department now admits, "life was miserable and" dissatisfaction acute."

The site for Borden, 15 miles west of Barrie, was actually surveyed in 1905 although the decision to open the camp did not come until 1916.

Sir Sam Hughes, the volatile minister of militia, toured the desolation of sand and pine stumps on a Sunday in May, declaring afterward that it would become "one of the best military camps in North America."

The government bought 40 square miles, at prices as low as $3 an acre.

Within two months the stumps had been burned and hacked away and 33,000 men had been moved, grumbling, into a huge city of tents lined up on a blacked-out plain.

The Royal Flying Corps arrived the following year and the camp took on the dual nature it has held right up to the present.

Primitive JN4 "Jennies" blew up sand with their propellers while Packard ambulances, nicknamed "Stumpy Lizzies," stood by the field. The Stumpy Lizzies were busy. In one 21-day period in 1918, flying accidents killed 19 airmen, though the camp did train more than 3,000 pilots by the end of the war.

HAD SHAKY START

On the army side, the camp settled down after a shaky and near-mutinous beginning.

As soon as the troops arrived, reports began to fly that the camp was badly organized, drilling was severe and the men were going hungry.

Officers on the spot insisted that all was going well. One was quoted as saying the troops were "the happiest lot of men I ever saw in my life."

One young officer who was there from the start, Capt. Leslie Frost, later premier of Ontario, recalls that the officers were "decent fellows" but heavy hitters of war or commanding men.

"Some of these people got the idea that to harden up the troops they should march them without water in their water bottles—a piece of utter damned foolishness."

At any rate, dissatisfaction had mounted to a high pitch by the time of a planned opening parade before Sir Sam.

On the night before the parade, the Toronto Globe reported, there were "riotous proceedings" protesting conditions. Next morning, "weird cries" came from the London (Ont.) Brigade and the men could be heard shouting: "No parade today!"

"There are many desertions, and inquiries are being made at various stations along the line."

SOCIETY ON HAND

However, the men did parade and Sir Sam, after "jollying" the officers over their fears of trouble, watched with the cream of Toronto society.

Mr. Frost recalled it as a "magnificent affair" but hardly military good sense.

The men marched without tunics, he said, in shirts and straw hats with the brims turned up at one side.

"We didn't carry weapons because there were no weapons—they were all being used overseas."

The Globe reported the big event this way:

"Nearly 30,000 men marched up and down an arid plain over a mile in length under the scorching sun. The tramping of their feet pounded the plain to powder and the men looked like an army of coal-heavers, from the black dust rising from the burnt grass."

Thirty-six men collapsed from heat prostration. One of them, a lad named John Campbell, died.

As the minister's train left at the end of the day, he was the centre of what the Globe's reporter described conservatively as "a rather strenuous demonstration."

". . . One man sang out: 'Are we going to stay at Camp Borden?' The reply was swift, and illuminated with expressive adjectives: 'No.'

"Oh, yes you will boys, I'll see you all again soon,' replied Sir Sam, reaching for the cord and ordering the train to move off.

"Loud boos and cries of derision followed. Sir Sam stood at attention and regarded his boys' with a stern face."

Another riot was feared for that night but there was nothing more serious than some jeering by a "small mob" at the station. Camp Borden settled down to 30 years of training.

Larry Evans Wins Canadian Chess Tourney

KINGSTON (CP)—Larry Evans, an international grand master from New York who expected to be only runner-up in the Canadian open chess championship, won the gruelling 10-day tournament Monday with a final-round victory over Laszlo Witt of Montreal.

Evans finished the competition with nine points out of a possible 10. Borislav Ivkov, 32, of Yugoslavia and William Lombardy, 28, of New York were tied for second place with 8½ points each.

New York lawyer James Sherwin, 31, was fourth in the competition with eight points and defending champion Benko was tied for fifth with veteran Maurice Fox of Montreal.

Four, eight-time winner of the Canadian closed chess tournament, was declared best Canadian player and Angela Fool, 25, of Toronto was named Canadian women's champion.

Larry Day, 17, of Ottawa, who entered the youngest in the tournament, was named Canadian junior champion and Walter Brown, of New York was named open junior champion. Browne also finished with seven points.

Gas, Gunshots Used to Break Sit Down Strike

CUMMINS PRISON FARM, Ark. (AP)—State police used tear gas and gunshots Monday to break up a sit-down strike by 164 convicts at Cummins state prison farm.

Clarence Thornbrough, executive aide to Arkansas Governor Orval Faubus, announced the action.

The striking convicts, who refused to return to work in the prison farm fields, demanded trusties sent in among them Monday to encourage them to go back to work, Thornbrough said.

The strike began Friday while Faubus visited Cummins and Tucker state prison farms, where all the hired personnel were fired last week after a state police investigation.

Faubus said the strike started because prisoners were under the "mistaken impression" that the strap had been abolished.

NEWPORT, Isle of Wight (AP)—Disorderly conduct in Monday night in Parkhurst jail, where some of Britain's "great train robbers" are serving 30 year sentences.

About 170 prisoners refused to go to work and settled down to exercise yards, officials said. All but 20 agreed in the end to resume work. But the ringleader were "bundled back into their cells, some of them resisting."

SAN BRUNO, Calif. (AP)—Prisoners in San Francisco's largest and most troubled jail locked Monday in what Sheriff Matt Carberry called "a staged demonstration."

The shouting, bar-pounding, mattress - burning demonstration was "brought under control within 45 minutes," the sheriff said. But prisoners continued shouting and hammering on bars for two hours.

The outbreak was touched off by the appearance of 40 or 50 pickets demonstrating in support of complaints by prisoners about jail conditions.

The demonstrators belong to an organized group called Friends of the Inmates. Among them were a number who had served jail terms for 1964 civil rights demonstrations.

Radio and television stations were informed in advance of the planned picketing.

Arrival of TV cameramen and demonstrators, Carberry said, was the apparent signal for the outbreak inside the six-storey jail 10 miles south of San Francisco.

COMPASSES DANGEROUS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Army plans to destroy 70,000 wrist compasses worth nearly $250,000 because their luminous dials give off a radioactive gas dangerous in accumulated quantities. Some 30,000 of the compasses have been distributed since 1958, and 40,000 more are stored in army depots around the U.S. No injuries have been recorded.

Thousands Die of Starvation In Lombok Due to No Rain

Associated Press Correspondent T. Jeff Williams has been touring the Indonesian Islands. In this report he tells of starvation that has so far escaped the world's attention.

By T. JEFF WILLIAMS

LOMBOK ISLAND, Indonesia (AP)—The northern half of Lombok is green and fat, but thousands have starved to death this year in the rest of the little island lying beside lush Bali.

Dr. Arbain Yusuf, the provincial health director, says there may be 80,000 dead from starvation by January unless they get rice. Appeals have been made to the Indonesian government in Jakarta but so far there has been no response.

Jakarta also is short of rice. There is little hope it will send enough to ward off the starvation.

Yusuf, 33, said 6,000 dead were found in only 22 villages. Leaders of KAMI, the student action front, said their checks show 29,001 have died this year.

Lombok has more than 400 villages. At least 130 of them lie in the famine belt.

Mountain rivers bring water to the green fields in the north. Farmers harvest two rice crops a year, store their excess and don't have to worry.

The rest of the island relies on rains which have not come. The hunger began last November. Now dozens of villages are without food.

Yusuf said he needs more than 13,000 tons of rice to feed the famine belt until the next May harvest.

The villages are heavy with hopelessness. Children with stomachs distended by malnutrition and rib cages pushing through their dusty skin sit absently in the shade.

Small children and old people pick the dry earth with knives and sticks seeking overlooked sweet potatoes.

Criminals Print Million In Counterfeit Money in Year Say Police Chiefs

VANCOUVER (CP) — About $1,000,000 in counterfeit money was printed by Canadian criminals in 1965, says a booklet introduced Monday at the conference of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police.

While two - thirds of the phoney money was seized by police before it could be placed into circulation, some Canadians still took their losses because they couldn't detect counterfeit banknotes.

Yet fake notes can be easily spotted by the public once it is aware of the high quality of genuine Bank of Canada notes as opposed to their imitations, says the booklet.

It is the fourth in a series of booklets put out by the RCMP aimed at acquainting Canadians with ways they can help police combat crime.

MAKE CRUDE MONEY

Despite all the skills and equipment they might possess, counterfeiters still produce a crude product as compared with the Bank of Canada bills printed by the British American Bank Note Co. and the Canadian Bank of Note Co.

Genuine bills are printed under a steel - plate engraving method which gives them a three - dimensional quality.

"The counterfeiter cannot duplicate this method; at best he can do is simulate it in two dimensions."

Since the same portrait of the Queen appears on all denominations, the booklet recommends that any money with the portrait with a clean $1 note.

"It is not likely that the $1 note will be counterfeit," says the booklet, indicating that counterfeiters don't waste time on such small denominations.

On genuine bills, every hair on the Queen's head will be distinct, high school and university students, they probably will be tempted to include her hair will be too light or too dark and the hairs merge together.

There's also a life-like expression in the Queens eyes on the real thing that can't be duplicated by counterfeiters. On bad bills, the eyes will lack sparkle.

CAN'T MATCH

Counterfeiters also can't match the natural flesh tone on the Queen's portrait on genuine bills.

Rubbing the ink on a suspected bill to determine whether it's the real thing isn't recommended. Some of the ink used on genuine notes will smear. And while real bills have a crackle all their own, paper isn't a good test either.

If you can't see or feel the difference, a genuine bill can be spotted by the green-colored planchettes on it.

Planchettes—circular discs of paper much like confetti—are placed in the pulp during the paper-making process in a way to ensure a few will appear on both sides.

They are visible only when the note is held up to the light. On a genuine bill, planchettes can usually be picked off with a fingernail or pin.

THEY'RE DIFFERENT

"Counterfeited planchettes are just dots of ink of the same color as genuine planchettes which have been printed on the counterfeit note," says the booklet. "These cannot be picked off like genuine planchettes."

If you think someone is trying to pass fake money to you, call the booklet, don't return it to him. Delay him and contact the nearest police officer.

If you are victimized, don't try to recoup your losses by trying to pass the bad bill to someone else.

"Anyone knowingly passing such a note is liable to 14 years imprisonment," warns the booklet.

Red Guards New Version Of Volunteers Who Fought Kai-shek 3 Decades Ago

By JOHN RODERICK

TOKYO (AP)—China's young Red Guards are new wine in old bottles.

Young volunteers, wearing red headbands and carrying pikes, served the Red Army in its fight against the Nationalist armies of Chiang Kai-shek about three decades ago.

The Red Guard wear red armbands. And they fight what they call anti-Communist party elements in the purge now sweeping Red China.

No one knows how many Red Guards there are now. But it is apparent their numbers are increasing through the country. So far, their activities have been confined to the big cities. Their next move will be to the countryside.

Now made up of middle school, high school and university students, they probably will be tempted to include younger revolutionaries. One thing is unquestionable: They sprang up Aug. 18 and formed in a series of unexpectedly spectacular acts, including violence and secrecy.

SAYS DOWN LAW

To put them back under control, Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung and Defence Minister Lin Piao, directing China's current party purge, called 500,000 of them together last week to lay down the law: No force, no coercion. The response has been immediate. The Red Army has clamped on more than visibility during the weekend as Lin became their "commander - in - chief."

As "shock forces" of the purge, the Red Guards can be expected to become the mouthpieces of the Communist leadership. They will be permitted to change some laws, to attack anti-party individuals already marked out for purging, to advance some youthful, new ideas.

But when they conflict with higher policy, they will be brought up short. Mao and Lin without question were disturbed at the prospect that they might emerge—as they seemed to be doing—as a force of their own, with power which could utterly become dangerous.

The adolescent immaturity of the Red Guards, who want to abolish red tape overnight, they mean halt rather than go, to prohibit walking on the right side of the road and to abolish cancellation of postage stamps bearing Mao's likeness, most embarrassed the regime. Charges from European bloc Communists that the Communist movement is being made ridiculous may have had effect.

CONVICT CAPTURED — Joseph W. LaPorte, 22, also known as Joseph W. Dale, is escorted by policemen after he and three other escaped Winnipeg convicts were captured in Gary, Ind., Saturday. 'No Bunch of Mad Dog Killers' Says Alleged Mastermind of Daring Winnipeg Jail Break

GARY, Ind. (CP-AP)—The alleged mastermind of a daring Winnipeg jailbreak said Monday he and his three convict companions who flew to Indiana in a stolen plane are "no bunch of mad dog killers."

Kenneth Leishman, 34, a father of seven, discussed details of the international flight with a reporter in the Lake County jail at a nearby Crown Point.

"We're fellows guilty of wanting our freedom," he said, "nothing more."

He denied any of the four escaped fire with police.

"We were not armed in any manner to combat a police force," he said. "Our main aim was to stay out of trouble."

He and nine other prisoners broke out of the jail last Thursday.

The FBI said the Canadians would be charged with transporting a stolen aircraft across an international boundary.

The fugitives were captured here by some 60 police who wounded two of them in rooftop chase.

ARE WOUNDED

Awaiting hearing on the charges are Leishman; Barry Kay Duke, 21; Joseph Lafortune, 25; and George Leclerc, 26, of Montreal. Both Leclerc and Lafortune were slightly wounded in the capture.

Leclerc was transferred to the jail Monday from hospital.

Leishman termed "preposterous" reports they had buried gold bullion en route to Indiana.

But he said he had contacts in Gary which "could have provided real sanctuary for me."

He would not elaborate, but added:

"Had there been the opportunity to establish a firm contact, we would never have been seen again."

Leishman said the five-year-old plane they stole, a Mooney Mark 21, had been refuelled at Springville, Iowa, and that they had to make two previous stops, facilities or no attendant on duty.

At Tyler, Leishman said the attendant apologized because they had no gas pumps.

WANTS PICTURES

"Say, could we take your pictures for our newspaper to stimulate interest in local aviation," the attendant asked. "I'm sure you're not bank robbers."

Leishman said he went to town for lunch and that when he returned, a photographer was taking pictures of his three companions cleaning the aircraft.

"Boy, of all the bloody luck," he said. But he said he had to contain himself to keep from laughing.

Leishman also said police risked their lives needlessly in making the capture.

"This one chap (policeman) kicked in the door and found himself in a bad situation," said Leishman. "He was looking into the darkened room and there were two guns trained on him. He was very fortunate.

"Once there's one policeman shot, there's no harm in going on. But nobody had any intention of shooting. We weren't looking for trouble."

All the fugitives were armed with automatic pistols, police said. Police were guarding the four-passenger Mooney Mark 21 aircraft on a farm 12 miles southeast of here. Stolen from a hangar near Winnipeg Saturday, police said it contained a small arsenal of guns and knives.

HELD IN THEFT

Leishman was being held in Headingley provincial jail near Winnipeg and faced trial for theft of aircraft while in the left March 1 of $383,000 in gold bullion from Winnipeg airport.

Lafortune, who was known to Canada as Joseph William Dale, was awaiting trial for rape; Duke was being held after acquittal on a non-capital murder charge for reason of insanity; Leclerc was being held on a false preticnce charge.

Their plane had sputtered down on the farm out of fuel.

The farmer gave them a bit in a bar station where they changed Canadian currency for American and then came here.

Tavern owner Chris Stath spotted them bent over glasses of beer, reading newspaper clippings and talking about stealing an airplane, He called police.

By the time police arrived the four had taken rooms in a different door in the bar. Duke surrendered when he was found alone in a room and facing the shotguns of two policemen.

Police then kicked in the door of another room and found Leishman, who surrendered. Leclerc appeared with gun in hand and a policeman fired, wounding the fugitive in the wrist.

Leclerc was finally captured on a roof as he tried to use his belt as a tourniquet on his wrist.

Lafortie had fled across a roof and down a ventilating shaft into a jewelry store where he touched off the burglar alarm. He fled again to the roof where he was captured. He had been wounded slightly in the left thumb and forearm and was suffering effects of tear gas.

One of the biggest manhunts in Manitoba history was touched off when the four fled with six other prisoners from Headingley. The other six were captured.

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Gerda Munsinger, the central figure in Canada's second - security allegations last spring, announced Saturday she plans to marry a wealthy 56-year-old Munich businessman.

The 36-year-old blonde said in an interview that she originally had planned to marry her companion, Ernst Wagner, next Thursday, but now she wants to wait until after a Canadian inquiry issues its report on the allegations.

The scandal erupted in March when it was charged by Justice Minister Lucien Cardin that Mrs. Munsinger once worked as a spy for the Soviet Union and was associated with Pierre Sevigny, former Conservative associate defence minister, in 1960.

NOTES FROM A VACATION CUFF

The big Irish cop on the Broadway - Forty Second - Street beat tossed a warm Killarney smile from his six-foot-three and said "So ye want to see Broadway? Well me bucko, just go over to the corner and stand there. Answer no questions. Ask none. And Broadway will go past you." Considering it was two o'clock in the morning, that was sound advice.

Gotham's glitter gorge was emptying itself. The "million lights" were flickering. The Great White Way's sleepless gals with their black-tied and white-tailed escorts were starting to yawn. Hungry taxis moved slowly in the traffic looking for pre-dawn snacks or dimers.

Above the perimeter of the Broadway glitter, a million lights pin-pricked the dark from huge skyscrapers. Like ghostly sentinels the frameworks of huge buildings under construction looked down on the human ants that freckled or blanketed the runways of the concrete and steel canyons.

On Times Square and its environs, human flotsam and jetsam, a lot of it in its teens, sought its thrills and kicks. Youngsters of both sexes, their eyes alight with a strange glitter walked to somewhere or nowhere. Shaggy-haired youths strolled in the hot humid air with girls whose eyes peered from between segments of shepherd-dog hairdos.

The tourist was unmistakeable. He travels in groups mostly armed with cameras, wide-eyed, gesticulating at some strange sight with hands filled with brochures of New York.

The three best sources of information proved to be policemen, bartenders and taxi-drivers. Joe Barnetti, a cabby who taxied me from Kennedy Airport to the Times Square Hotel, proved a New York encyclopedia.

Joe told me that todate New York's construction program was $90 million; that four of the former hotel landmarks of Gotham were under demolition; that Canada was a place where they made funny money and he had two two-dollar bills (Canadian) to prove it and that he had a cousin who married a foreigner from a place called "Kibick" (Quebec). But Joe was a businessman. In order to fill me in he metered a bill for $5.80.

But out of Gotham's 14,000 cabbies I figured there were some honest ones. Tony Flanagan, who toted me via his hack from the hotel to the airport some days later was less loquacious but learning from Canada where he had relatives decided to take me the "short way." He did. The tab on the meter was $4.50.

But I have to hand it to New York's finest if ay experience a hotel acquaintance of mine who hailed from Winnipeg is a criterion. He lost a wallet containing $400 and his plane ticket and other papers in the hotel. Two police officers took over the investigation. They phoned the Air Canada office and explained and arranged for a flight confirmation. They arranged with the hotel to finance a long distance call for funds. And later they gave a stern lecture to a hotel maid who suddenly discovered the missing money tucked under the mattress.

My favorite bartender who insisted the Yankees were the worst team in the American League because they were their own best friends — and the Mets were the worst team in the National because they were their own worst enemies (but, buster, we love 'em) told me a story on himself that bears repeating.

"Some years ago," he said, "a character walked in here and stood looking at me. 'You need a drink, I asked him. He said he did. I gave him one and said 75 cents please."

"He said, What for? I didn't order any drink. You gave me one.

"I called in the cops and explained. The police scratched their heads and said, "This guy is right. He did not order a drink. You needed one — and gave it to him."

The bartender smiled. "That's not all of it," he said. "Two years later this same character walked in again — and I nailed him. No you don't, I said. You hooked me two years ago. Now get out or I'll call a cop."

"He stared at me sort of unbelieving. Then he said, Mister I have never been in this bar. I have never seen you before in my life. I do not know you since this is the first time I have set foot in here."

"The guy had me puzzled. I was sure it was the same guy artist. Then an idea struck me. Say, I said to him, if you haven't been in here before, you must have a double."

"Sure," he said, "make it Scotch."

Cats Erase Ottawa Lead; Win 16-12

By JIM CRERAR

HAMILTON (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders haven't won a football game here since 1963 and Monday's loss to Hamilton Tiger-Cats cost them sole possession of first place in the Eastern Football Conference standings.

A record Hamilton crowd of 29,003 saw the Tiger-Cats wipe out an Ottawa lead on Bobby Kunst's fourth - quarter touchdown for a 16-12 victory. That pushed Hamilton's record to four victories against one defeat, the same as the Riders, and set the stage for a showdown battle between the two clubs Saturday afternoon in Ottawa.

The Tiger-Cats have fallen into the habit of relying on their defensive squad the last couple of seasons. They followed the same script Monday but also got a boost from Joe Zuger who came out of a three-week layoff to quarterback the team through most of the game and contribute eight points on a touchdown and two converts.

Zuger's touchdown came in the second quarter on a hooper play from Ron Stewart. His two singles measured 45 yards from the line of scrimmage, but one of them, the first point of the game, was a dandy. It was against the wind, punting to about 20 miles an hour and travelled 65 yards before landing in the Ottawa end zone. That turned out to be the only point scored by either team against the wind.

GETS TWO POINTS

Don Sutherin kicked a pair of singles in the second quarter, both on off-target attempts for field goals. One was from the Ottawa 47 and the other from the Ottawa 43. He also was good of the mark on a convert after Zuger's touchdown and saw his convert on Kunst's touchdown thwarted by a bad snap.

Ottawa got a touchdown from Walt Tucker, who gathered in a 12-yard pass from Russ Jackson after getting loose in the end zone. Moe Racine converted it and kicked a 47-yard field goal in the first quarter.

The Rough Riders' remaining two points came on a third-quarter safety touch when tackle Bob Brown trapped Zuger in his own end zone.

The crowd, which broke a Hamilton record of 28,007 set in 1963, saw the Tiger-Cats defence hold Ottawa to only 167 yards, 62 of them rushing, and eight first downs. Hamilton rolled up 227 yards, 153 of the passing and 16 first downs.

The Riders, behind Jackson's passing, recovered from a dismal first half in which they managed only 57 yards and three first downs. In the third quarter they came up with their only sustained drive of the day which led to Tucker's touchdown, but by the time the teams changed ends for the fourth quarter Ottawa's offence was spent.

The Rough Riders had got nowhere against the Hamilton defence until the final play of the first quarter when Racine's field goal wiped out the 1-0 lead that Zuger's booming single had given the Tiger-Cats.

USED THE WIND

Hamilton went to work with the wind in its favor in the second quarter by counting three singles and Zuger's touchdown for a 10-3 halftime lead. Leroy Moore, a defensive end picked up by the Ticats from Buffalo Bills of the American Football League, set up the touchdown by recovering a fumble by Ron Stewart on the Ottawa 38.

Ottawa rode the wind to a 13-10 lead in the third quarter on Tucker's converted touchdown and the safety touch which Jackson and Stewart set up with a 33-yard pass. But that was as far as the Riders got.

Kunts dove over from the one for the winning touchdown, with less than six minutes remaining in the game, after Zuger pitched 14 yards to Tommy Grant to put Hamilton on the Ottawa five.

Kunts, with 11 carries for 47 yards, Willie Beshara with 12 for 44 and Dick Cobee with 13 for 33, did most of the Hamilton rushing. Jim Dillard carried 12 times for 49 yards for the Riders.

Zuger completed seven of 13 passes for 77 yards while backup quarterback Frank Cosentino went two-for-two for 27 yards. Each had a pass intercepted.

Jackson was seven for 21 with one intercepted. Top Hamilton receivers were Grant with two catches for 37 yards and Bethea with two for 17. Jay Roberts snared two passes for 28 yards for Ottawa while Stewart caught two for 26.

Hamilton lost 62 yards on 10 penalties and Ottawa 51 yards on six penalties.

Gary Cowan Wins U.S. Amateur Crown

By RALPH BERNSTEIN

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP)—Gary Cowan took America's top amateur golf prize home to Canada with the appraisal that "now it would be a symbol of victory in future international competition for his countrymen.

The 27 - year - old Kitchener golfer defeated Deane Beman of Bethesda, Md., for the U.S. amateur title Sunday by a stroke in a playoff at the Merion Golf Club. He shot a five-over-par 75 to 76 for Beman.

It was a close, bitter struggle between the two insurance men and wasn't decided until Cowan closed it out with a six-foot putt on the 18th.

Beman, who threw away a three-stroke lead Saturday on the final two holes of the regulation 36-hole match, was more disgusted than disappointed.

DIDN'T ERR

"I didn't make a single mistake," said Beman, a 28-year-old former champion. "I'm amazed I could post a 76 with that few bad shots."

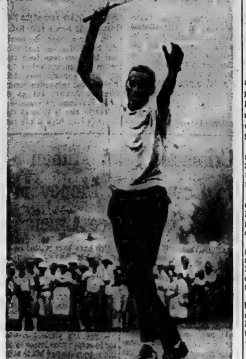
Cowan said:

"It doesn't matter how many good shots or bad shots you make as long as you win."

Asked how it felt to be the first Canadian to win the American amateur title in 34 years, Cowan said:

"I hope it convinces Canadian golfers the Americans can be beaten.

"Our golfers read so many press clippings about how good the Americans are that they feel we can't beat them. I've told that to myself and played with them long enough to know this isn't true."



LIKES COMPETITION

Cowan said the international flavor of this competition was "the best thing I have going for me. I find it hard to get charged up when I play in Canada, but I can when I play in the States."

Beman and the other Americans will have a chance next month to meet Cowan's indirect challenge. The International golf championship for the Eisenhower Cup is scheduled for Mexico City in October.

ROARS TO VICTORY

MADISON, Ind. (AP)—Tahoe Miss roared away to win the championship heat by more than one-half mile Sunday and took the Governor's Cup race for unlimited hydroplanes for the third straight year. It was the first appearance on the Ohio River course for driver Mira Slovak of Los Angeles. Tahoe Miss was driven to victory here the last two years by Chuck Thompson, who was killed in the Gold Cup race at Detroit July 3.

JUBILATION AFTER SINKING WINNING PUTT — Canada's Gary Cowan, 27, of Kitchener, Ontario, jumps and waves arms with joy after he sank putt on the 18th green to win the U.S. Amateur Golf Championship title in playoff against Deane Beman, of Bethesda, Md. Play at the Merion Golf Club, Ardmore, Pa., went down to the wire, with Cowan sinking winning putt on 18th hole. (AP Wirephoto)

Sensational Pitching Wins Girls' Title

TORONTO (CP)—Errors and an almost flawless three-game pitching performance by Dodie Pepper gave Fort Erie the Canadian National Exhibition women's softball championship Saturday.

Miss Pepper pitched a no-hit, no-run game to down Toronto 2-0 and then came back to throw a one-hitter in a 2-1 victory over London.

London's loss forced a playoff for the championship which Fort Erie won 1-0. Miss Pepper gave London four hits in that contest.

In the first London-Fort Erie game, the winning runs were scored when London catcher Marg Favell attempted a pickoff at second base but threw the ball into centre field.

Dean McGuire led the seven-hit Fort Erie attack with three singles in the first game against London while Arlene Irvine had two singles in the second.

Saskys Riders Zero Alouettes 44-0

Stamps Nip Argos

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The West scored a sweep over the East Monday Canadian Football League interlocking games.

Montreal Alouettes, fresh from a 4-3 win over Winnipeg Blue Bombers, moved into Regina and were ambushed 44-0 by Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Toronto Argonauts winless in the East, met the injury-ridden Calgary Stampeders and are still winless. The Stamps won 13-6 but lost another first-string player in the process.

Tight end Herm Harrison is out for the season with torn knee ligaments. He is the fifth first - stringer the Stamps have lost this year. Already on the sidelines are Lovell Coleman, Ted Woods and Bill Gaskins with torn achilles tendons, and Jim Furlong with a knee injury.

The loss left Argos deep in the Eastern Football Conference basement, winless in five outrecord while Hamilton and Ottawa. The Alouettes have a 3-3 tawa share the lead with a 4-1 records.

The win was the second in five starts for Calgary and gave the Stamps fourth place in the Western Football Conference.

TAKE WFC LEAD

Saskatchewan took the conference lead by lambasting Montreal. The Roughriders now have a 5-2 record, good for a one-game lead over Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Edmonton Eskimos.

George Reed and Hugh Campbell each scored three touchdowns in the massacre. Jack Abendschan kicked a field goal and five converts.

Montreal coach Darryl Mudra said after the game the Roughies were "ready for us and if they kept playing like that, there is nothing to stop them going to the Grey Cup. (Ron) Lancaster and Campbell were simply marvelous."

Lancaster went 14 for 15 in the passing department.

The Saskatchewan defence limited Montreal to 100 yards along the ground and 38 through the air. Three Montreal passes were picked off.

Saskatchewan had 195 yards rushing and 347 passing.

In Calgary, flanker Terry Evanshen scored the only Calgary touchdown on an 11-yard pass from Peter Liske. Larry Robinson added two field goals and a convert.

EDWIN SCORES TO

Toronto's touchdown was collected by Al Irwin on a 74-yard pass-and-run play. John Vilunas converted and scored a single on a wide fieldgoal attempt.

Calgary had only 64 yards rushing, 62 of them by Art Baker, the big fullback the Stamps acquired last week from Hamilton Tiger - Cats. He lugged the ball 14 times.

Baker said he enjoyed the first game with the Stamps.

"But it was too hot for anybody out there," he said. "I got so tired I was breathing from memory."

The game was played in temperatures of about 80 degrees.

Leher summed up the Calgary victory: "It wasn't pretty, and it wasn't easy, but we'll take any win we can get."

Argos almost won the game on two occasions. They staged a late rally but lost the ball on downs with just four seconds remaining.

Earlier in the fourth quarter, a touchdown was disallowed. Wally Gabler hit Irwin in the open and the speedy end cruised across from the Calgary 51, but a teammate was caught holding.

Defeat Giants 4-1

Dodgers Cut Margin As Pirates Split

By RON RAPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Pittsburgh's theme song started out as Happy Birthday to You, but the Pirates ended up singing the blues.

Bill Mazeroski celebrated his 30th birthday Monday with a grand slam homer in the third inning of Pittsburgh's 10-5 blitz of Atlanta Braves in the first game of a doubleheader. Max Froski came back with a baseempty shot in the sixth inning and he also drove in a run in the first with an infield out.

But in the nightcap, Braves' pitcher Tony Cloninger breezed into the ninth inning with a six-run margin, having allowed the Pirates just three hits. The Pirates scored four runs in the final frame, but Cloninger held on and the Braves won 7-5.

With the split, Pittsburgh's National League lead dwindled to a game and a half over second - place Los Angeles Dodgers who beat San Francisco Giants 4-1. The Giants fell 3½ games of the pace in third place.

Mazeroski's grand slam was his second this season and the third of his career. He has 15 homers this season.

REDS TAKE TWO

Cincinnati Reds swept a doubleheader from New York Mets 8-2 and 8-5, the second game in 10 innings. Philadelphia lost 5-4 and then won 7-2 over Chicago Cubs, and St. Louis Cardinals defeated Houston Astros 4-1 but lost the nightcap 6-0.

Pittsburgh defeated Chicago 8-5 Sunday, Atlanta blanked Houston 2-0, Philadelphia shut-out New York 5-0, San Francisco defeated St. Louis 9-2 and Los Angeles beat Cincinnati 8-6.

In Saturday's action, Pittsburgh defeated Chicago 9-4, St. Louis edged san Francisco 3-2, Los Angeles downed Cincinnati 5-3, Philadelphia defeated New York 8-4 while Houston lost 12-2 and 6-4 to Atlanta.

Chargers Defeat Bills

Oilers Whip Broncos

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Houston Oiler officials started beating the drums three months ago saying this would be the year for the former American Football League power to move to the front again.

A lot of Houston fans and Denver Broncos coach Mac Speedie were convinced Saturday night as the Oilers trounced Denver 45-7 in an AFL opening game.

In a Sunday game at San Diego, the hometown Chargers swept to a 27-7 victory over defending champion Buffalo Bills. In their first meeting, in the AFL final game last December, Buffalo blanked San Diego 23-0.

Houston's mighty deence denied Denver one first down the entire game and never let the Broncos advance past their own 40-yard line.

Denver quarterbacks Mickey Slaughter and John McCormick completed only two of 20 passes —for a minus-one yard.

Meanwhile, veteran Oiler quarterback George Blanda hit 13 passes out of 25 attempts for 200 yards and three touchdowns.

Blanda hit Charley Frazier with 35- and 21-yard scoring strikes and a 25-yarder to Bob McLeod. Blanda also added a 26-yard field goal.

Don Trull, who relieved Blanda in the fourth quarter, hit Frazier with an eight-yard scoring pass and scored himself on a 10-yard run.

MADE GREAT RUN

Denver's touchdown came in the first quarter on a sensational 83 yard kickoff return by rookie Goldie Sellers.

Brazil Wins Over Milan Before 41,598

NEW YORK (CP)—Pele led Santos of Brazil to a 4-1 victory over Inter of Milan Monday before the largest turnout for a soccer match in the United States in 40 years.

A pro - Italian crowd of 41,598 at Yankee Stadium watched a showdown battle between two of the world's finest clubs. Inter had held the world club title the last two years. Santos held it for the previous two years.

The Italians' vaunted defence cracked in the second half as the smaller, trickier Brazilians feinted and twisted their way downfield. They passed the tiring Italian defencemen and scored three goals.

Although he was tripped, mauled and kneed, Pele, soccer's most acclaimed player, scored one goal and set up another. He had two goals denied because of offsides.

Sweep Pair From Yankees

"Shadows" Give Birds Big Punch

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Defensive stars Paul Blair and Dave Johnson of Baltimore Orioles, who usually perform in the shadow of Frank Robinson, Brooks Robinson and Boog Powell, supplied the big punch Monday in a 5-4, 7-4 sweep over New York Yankees in an American League doubleheader.

Powell is nursing a hand injury, Brooks Robinson is batting a prolonged batting slump and Frank Robinson hasn't hit a homer in six games but the Orioles are still winging toward their first modern era pennant.

The Robinson setted for three singles between them in both games and Powell watched from the bench.

Centerfielder Blair had a homer among his four hits and knocked in five runs, including the winner in the opener.

Second baseman Johnson stroked five hits, including a homer and two doubles, while driving in three runs.

The sweep stretched Baltimore's lead to 10½ games over the second-place Detroit Tigers, who bowed to Washington 6-4 before beating the Senators 7-4 in the second game of their doubleheader.

Elsewhere, Boston Red Sox beat Cleveland Indians 5-1 after dropping its doubleheader opener 3-1; Chicago White Sox downed Minnesota Twins 7-4 and Kansas City Athletics defeated California Angels 4-3.

In Sunday games, Baltimore downed Chicago 8-5, Minnesota trounced the Yankees 9 - 2, Washington beat California 5-3 and Detroit edged Cleveland 4-3. Boston split a doubleheader with Kansas City, winning the first game 3-0 and dropping the second 7-2.

Lose With 2-Hitter

Oshawa Ousts Trudeaus

Belleville Trudeau Motors held Oshawa Bad Boys to a pair of hits in Oshawa last night — and lost.

The Bad Boys made both hits count and combined them with walks and errors to defeat Trudeaus 4-2.

Oshawa swept the OASA Intermediate "A" series in two consecutive games, having taken a 6-4 win in Belleville last Thursday.

Trudeaus moved ahead 2-0 in the top of the fourth when they collected four of their five hits.

Mulrhead opened with a single and Mavety tripled him around. Weston singled for Belleville's third consecutive hit and the 3-0 lead. Baker also added a base hit this inning, after two were out, but he and Weston died on base.

Oshawa got one back in the bottom half of the frame, on three free passes and an infield error.

The winners picked up their first hit to take a 3-2 lead in the fifth. Armstrong blasted a two-out homer after a base-on-balls.

They added the clincher in the sixth, again on a two-out homer run blast, this one by pinch-hitter Butch McMahon.

Bill Salvolin started, followed by Pat Malhelle in the fourth and Bobby Green in the seventh for Trudeaus. While both Oshawa hits were homers, they struck out only four and handed out seven free passes and a hit batter.

Rob Mason stayed the route to get his five-hit victory. He struck out 11 and walked a pair.

The winners turned in their second consecutive errorless game while Belleville bobbled twice.

Jack Armstrong and Butch McMahon had the Oshawa homers. Larry Mavety's triple and base hits by Pat Marzelle, Stu Muirhead, Pete Weston and John Baker accounted for Trudeaus' safeties.

Trudeaus are currently deadlocked 1-1 in the Belleville and District Softball League semifinals with the Bobcats. Oshawa, leading the OASA Senior "B" set 1-0, play the Bobcats at Alemite Park tonight, at 8:30. Winner of the Trudeaus - Bobcats series will meet Picton for the championship.

Cementmen Capture Opener

The Point Anne Cementmen played opportunists and defeated Sydenham 7-5 in the first game of their OASA Junior "C" baseball finals series, at Sydenham, Saturday.

Second game in the two-of-three series is slated for Saturday afternoon. Game time is 5.00, at Point Anne.

The Cementmen jumped ahead 4-0 in the second with the aid of only one hit, by Maher. They took advantage of five hit batters, two walks and an error.

Sydenham struck back for two in the third, on two walks, an error and a hit, and the score stayed 4-2 until the seventh.

Again the winners had only one hit, a double by Maher this trip, but collected three runs. A couple of walks, a hit batter and miscues plated the runs.

Down 7-2, the losers scored three in the eighth, all on an error after a base hit and a walk put two on. They threatened again in the ninth, with men on second and third, when Maracle struck out the final batter to preserve the win.

Ron Maracle gave up five hits struck out a total of 15 and walked eight in the losing effort.

Cashman and Lavallee in the eighth, allowed six hits in defeat. They struck out 13 and walked 10.

Point Anne left 14 runners stranded, Sydenham just one less.

Denny Maher led the victory march with his double and single. Gerry Maher, Rick Rosebush, Paul Genereaux and Mike Cook hit singles.

J. Simson singled twice, Anderson doubled, Morland and Davis singled to account for the losers' hits.

Halloway leads the four-of-seven set 2-1 and the fourth game is slated for Stirling tonight, at 8:15.

Saturday's winners jumped ahead with three runs in the first and Dick Chapman hurled six-hit ball over the route to earn the nod. He fanned six and walked one. Ron Denyes was the losing pitcher.

Jack Wood crashed a three-run homer to pace the Crookston attack. Glen Hagerman added a triple.

Halloway's lone run came on a homer by Ted Ray. Ray Emerson contributed a pair of base hits.

Signs Two-Year Contract

Bruins Grab Bobby Orr

PARRY SOUND, Ont. (CP)— Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League have snatched Bobby Orr, 18, from Canada's national team for what Orr's lawyer describes as the best contract "ever offered to a junior player by a professional club."

The 18-year-old defenceman signed a two-year contract Saturday for an undisclosed amount.

But Orr's father, Douglas, said in an interview the amount could be between $40,000 and $60,000.

Orr, a native of Parry Sound, will report to the Bruins' training camp at London, Ont., Sept. 15.

HE'S PLEASED

"I'm very happy with the contract," Orr said. "I would like to thank Carl Brewer, who helped me tremendously in getting the contract.

Brewer, former NHL star defenceman with Toronto Maple Leafs, retired last season.

"I would have been very proud to represent Canada," Orr said. "But the NHL has always been my first choice. I'm looking forward to Bruins' training camp."

Orr joined Oshawa Generals of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series during the 1965-66 season as a 16-year-old defenceman.

The following season, Orr set an OHA Junior A record for defencemen with 34 goals and 39 assists. Last season, he established another record of 36 goals and 60 assists.

Ontario took third place with a 3-1 decision over Saskatchewan. Tony Adams with two goals and Carlo Mauti with one scored for Ontario.

Winless Manitoba and Alberta were eliminated from the tournament Thursday.

Eight players from the Ontario team were among 32 players named to try out for Canada's national soccer team to be entered at the 1967 Pan-American Games.

THE ARNOLD Palmer Method
by GOLF'S 4-TIME MASTERS WINNER
USE UPRIGHT SWING FROM DEEP ROUGH
The good you should seek on shots from deep rough is to control the ball as cleanly as possible with the clubface. Try to swing so there is as little grass as possible between clubface and ball.
To produce clean club-ball contact, you should employ a more upright swing than you would normally use from the fairway. Your club should lift quickly on the back-swing (No. 1) and descend sharply to the ball on the downswing (No. 2).
You will find it quite simple to obtain this sort of upright swing if you remember to keep most of your weight on your left foot throughout your swing.

Announce New Healing Substance: Shrinks Piles

Excludes healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured inflamed tissue.

In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

Most important of all — results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue.

Now Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.—Ask for it at all drug stores. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

LONDON (Reuters) — Sheffield Wednesday maintained its goal-average lead in the English First Division Saturday as five soccer teams joined in the war of the - standings tussle with eight points each.

Wednesday conceded its first goal in five league games this season in a 1-1 home tie with Leicester City. Still at the top with the best-goal average of seven for and one against, Wednesday is followed in order by Burnley, Chelsea, Tottenham Hotspur and Manchester United.

Tottenham easily beat Arsenal 3-1 in a London spectacle which attracted 46,000 spectators.

Burnley, like Sheffield Wednesday, was held to a 3-3 draw at home by Leeds United.

NUDGED OUT

Chelsea strolled to a 3-0 victory at Southampton and Manchester United nudged out Newcastle United 3-2 at home.

Sunderland's Neil Martin scored the first three-goal performance for the club since its return to the first division last season. He scored in the sixth, 44th and 50th minutes in the 4-0 victory over Blackpool.

Birmingham City, the only club in the first two divisions with a 100-per-cent record, lost it in a 1-1 draw at Coventry. But it kept its one-point lead at the top of the Second Division.

Ipswich and Crystal Palace, the only teams in the top half dozen which won Saturday, are second and third respectively with eight points each to Birmingham's nine.

WILL CHECK ATHLETES

Devlin World Golf Champion

SOUTHPORT, England (CP-AP) — Bruce Devlin, a lanky Australian who almost gave up golf because of varicose veins in his legs, Saturday won the world golf championships.

Devlin carried off first prize of $17,250, but was weary and seemed almost as concerned about his legs as he was about the rich prize. He had an operation about a year ago to correct the veins and all that remains now are a few scars.

Devlin had a final-round 69, one stroke off the course record. He sank a 20-foot birdie putt on the 18th and that won the game for him. His four-round card was 73-70-74-69—286.

U.S. open champion Bill Casper took home $13,800 for second place. His card was 73-74-71—287 over the 7,287-yard Royal Birkdale course where par is 35-35—70.

The American Professional Golfers Association called the $30,000 tournament unofficial and some of the game's top men stayed away. They included Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player.

Neil Coles, British Ryder Cup player, came in third place money of $9,000 for his 288 total.

Veteran Australian Kel Nagle was fourth at 289 after two rounds and fell into a tie with Harold Henning of South Africa and Roberto de Vicenzo of Argentina at 291 and fourth place.

Highest placed Canadian was Moe Norman of Oshawa, Ont., who shot a 74 Saturday for a 292 total. Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg had 73 and a 301 total.

Only 80 of the entries survived the cut after two rounds. The Canadians who didn't make it included George Knudson of Toronto and Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont.

Don Knotts Parlays Size Into Making Film Career

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The unlikeliest of new film stars is Don Knotts, who considers himself overweight at his present 127 pounds.

Size has parlayed his bantam frame into a film career.

What did it was a Universal film titled The Ghost and Mr. Chicken, which was unpretentiously produced for the fact that it made people laugh. Shot for $300,000 dollars, it has already returned $4,000,000, which makes it a better investment than most of the studio's products in recent years.

Tony Wasserman (a studio chief) did a result job of releasing the picture," said Knotts. "He studied the ratings of the Andy Griffith show to figure where I would be best known. It's in the South mostly, so he opened the picture in New Orleans with a big hoopla.

"I did great business there, so he moved it into the areas surrounding New Orleans, where it was also big. Next he jumped it up to Canada for a test run and found it played well there, too. Then it went into general release."

LEAD TO ANOTHER

The success paved the way to another Knotts vehicle, The Reluctant Astronaut, at double the budget. Next, The Shakiest Gun in the West.

How does Don fathom his success?

"It may not sound good for me to say it, but I think The Ghost was a funny picture," he said. "I worked hard with the writers on the script, and we wailed until it was just right.

"Also, think there is room for a comedy star in films nowadays. You used to have three returned $4,000,000, which makes it a better investment than most of the studio's products in recent years.

Many TV Programs Given Farewells Over Weekend

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The long holiday weekend gave a chance for a ball and farewell to some of the television programs that have outlived their usefulness and are about to move—most of them into reruns but others into new positions.

Sunday night, there were the final reruns of My Favorite Martian, Branded and Jericho. Ship in the Army and—the one to be most sorely missed—Perry Mason.

To Tell the Truth had its final prime-time exposure last night before it moves into an 11:30 a.m. day afternoon berth. I've Got a Secret, which had a cute show that unfortunately devoted its final portion to a plug for former boat Garry Moore's new outing, will hereafter be relegated to a late Monday night zone period—out of sight for viewers who turn off the set at 10:30.

Other departures Monday night included Hazel, The Legend of Jesse James and A Man Called Shenandoah.

But nobody spends much time looking backward in television. Departing shows rarely receive a nod of gratitude.

Tonight, ABC starts pumping its annual quota of new blood into the network arteries. Before another two weeks has passed, 34 new series will be on the evening niches of the three networks.

During the coming season, a predictable number of shows—around 30—will be failures, all victims of low Nielsen ratings. And the process will be repeated next September.

The new season kicks off at 8:30 p.m. EDT on ABC with The Reunders, a half-hour contemporary western about a couple of roistering cowboys and their wily employer. It will be followed by The Pruitts of Southampton, Phyllis Diller's series about an impoverished society family, then will be followed in turn by Love on a Rooftop, a situation comedy about a young married couple and, incidentally, one of the new shows I hope will which the highest hopes are held.

Selling Graves or Kissing Baldies, Be Good at It Is Kay Stevens' Creed

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Kaye Stevens, red - haired bombshell of the nightclubs, had an earlier career as probably the most successful teen - age cemetery plot saleswoman in the United States.

"I got used to money at a very early age," remarked the rising singing comedienne. "I was just turning seven when I won $7.95 in an amateur contest — and I gave it all to the church."

When she was 16 her father, a Cleveland, Ohio, mechanic, died, and she had to go to work in earnest. Kaye, a self-taught singer who also plays bass, drums and guitar, soon was making $150 a week.

But the girl is a hard worker. On graduating at 18 from high school, she wanted to find something to occupy her days. She answered an ad requiring an "ability to meet people."

"The job was selling cemetery plots, and I loved it," said Kaye. "I wore a black dress and black-rimmed glasses and made myself up to look a mature 22.

"I made a minimum of $200 a week. Whatever you do, be good at it—that's my motto.

"It lasted a year, and I liked That I quit it for a job singing in Buffalo at $175 a week. That wasn't even high on my dollars, but it was what I wanted to do. Besides, we had sold all the lots in that cemetery, and I'd have had to find another one."

TOURED WITH TRIO

There followed several years in which she toured the country with a lounge trio and had a brief fling at the Copa in Miami, which she appeared in The Intems.

Miss Stevens got her big break when she responded to an urgent wail to replace ailing Dabbs Reynolds in Las Vegas spot.

Kaye now romps about U.S. nightclubs, kissing dozens bald men on the pate each year, and gets up to $20,000 a week for her singing chores.

She puts the stamp of her own talent in every feature of her act. She writes much of her own material, arranges songs, designs her own glamorous wardrobe, and even works with the engineers on lighting problems.

Kaye has a warm breezy personality, a fine voice, and is able to blend sentiment and comedy well. Her own childhood idol was Danny Kaye.

She believes firmly in a planned life. Step by step, she hopes to appear in a Broadway musical, try a television series of her own, and go back again to Hollywood, this time as a star.

TV So Poor Court Refuses To Levy Fines

GISBORNE N.Z. (CP) — Television reception is so poor in the city of Gisborne on the east coast of New Zealand that a magistrate has refused to fine people prosecuted for operating sets without a license.

"Reception is so poor," he said, "that the department should be paying the people for loss of eyesight."

The verdict has earned warm applause in Gisborne where citizens hope the government will be spurred to speed up installation of more powerful equipment.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

QUESTION: We are planning a trip to Virginia. We are interested in visiting some of the fine old homes of interest. Could you tell us where we could get some brochures on this? — Mrs. A. L., Belleville ANSWER: Many private colonial homes in Virginia will be opened to the public again this fall as part of the state's autumn pilgrimage program. Canadians planning a trip south during October can get free brochure outlining the location and history of some of these mansions by writing Virginia's Autumn Pilgrimage, 5 Westway Parkway, Richmond, Va.

TOP TRAVELERS

Canadians have established themselves as the greatest travellers in the world. The American Society of Travel Agents is the latest group to put the "travelsick" stamp on us, estimating that Canadians spend annually $52.50 per capita on foreign travel.

That is more than three times as much as the average American, who spends $16.70.

It is accepted in the travel business that the Toronto area is Canada's greatest producer of travellers. So if you're interested in keeping up with the travelling fiancees of this world this is what you are facing with, according to a study done by the travel research branch of the Canadian Department of Tourism and Information. The average world-bound trip cost $39,456 trips originating in Metro before reaching these conclusions:

The average trip was 243 miles.

Not counting business trips, it cost $40.51 per journey or $5.51 per person per day.

The average world-business trip lasted 2.1 days and 3.5 persons were included in the group.

When Torontonians make business trips, 19 percent of them are by air, but in non-business travel 96.38 percent of the trips are made by car and only 1.95 per cent by air.

The department also estimates that the average Metro family spends $500 a year on travel, or just over seven percent of its annual income.

A trip that was part of an annual vacation cost $158.13 and one which was not cost $29.75.

Most of the trips were to other parts of Ontario, but unfortunately for our budget the biggest spenders went to such places as Europe and the Caribbean.

Canadians heading for Pennsylvania this month of September may obtain a free calendar of events from the Travel Development Bureau, Pennsylvania Department of Commerce, Harrisburg, Pa.

Newfoundland may be short of service stations along the Trans Canada and on many of its secondary roads but the stranded motorists won't be in town trouble there. Some 7,000 drivers have joined a service corps formed for "Come Home Year" and have pledged to stop and give assistance to motorists in trouble.

BRIEFLY

A hint to campers — while receiving at camp offices leave word for someone to hold the campsite you have chosen or it might be taken when you return . . . If taking a motor holiday, try limiting the ending your trip mid-week and see how pleasant driving is when you avoid the weekend rush . . . A Northern Virginia man has been fined $25 for kissing a girl while driving; and that's not the only thing that irritated the judge; they were in different cars at the time.

Melville Hill Will Attend All-Indian Advisory Meet

TYENDINAGA RESERVE — Melville Hill will spend Thursday and Friday in Toronto and attend the final meeting of the all-Indian advisory committee to the Hon. Arthur Roberts, minister of Lands and Forests. Mr. Hill is chairman of this committee, established in March, 1964.

A new committee was established recently, which will be an Indian advisory committee to the Department of Welfare. Mr. Hill is among the members of the former committee who will sit in the new committee. It was felt that the Department of Welfare dealt with more Indians than did the Department of Lands and Forests, and so this wider committee will take the place of the first committee which will be disbanded this week.

At its final meeting, the minister has requested the committee to discuss the effect on conservation relating to the Indian Reserves of the province, and to look at "the question of rights to game and fish in the province retained by the Indian bands under various treaties."

THREE CLASSES

Mr. Hill explains that with respect to treaties, the Reserves of the province fall roughly into three classes, though hardly any two are exactly alike. The first group has sold its fish and game rights to the province, and these Reserves are entirely controlled by the Department of Lands and Forests, so far as fish and game are concerned.

The second group is the North, depends to a great degree on game and fish, and here the Department of Lands and Forests tries to preserve the rights to the benefit of the Indians and assists them in every possible way.

In the third group, the treaty rights are very involved and debatable, and here the Department does not go in except on the invitation of the Council. The Department has a great deal to offer in assisting to build up the fish and game population, without an invasion of the treaty rights, Mr. Hill points out. They are eager to work with the Indians, and yet do not want the Indians to feel they are encroaching on special privileges under their treaty rights.

Around Town

TEENAGE DANCES CONTINUE

NAPANEE — Friday night 218 young people attended the dance in the armory sponsored by the Firefighters' Association, and permission has been secured to use the hall each Friday night through September. They had asked for its use only for the summer months, but so popular have the dances been with the teenagers, that the Association felt it almost a duty to continue them. The Firemen are proud of the summer's record, with not one unpleasant incident and the young folk are grateful to the firemen for providing them with an opportunity for fun once a week.

STRIKERS PARADE

The cavalcade of strikers from the CIL plant in Milltaven assembled at Card's garage on Monday morning, passed through the town, covering several streets, and then headed south on Centre St. for a field by front of the plant, all without incident. About 75 placarded cars made the trip from Napanee, and were joined at Milltaven by others from Kingston.

VALUABLE HORSE KILLED

A $10,000 race horse belonging to Beverly Kingston of Odessa was killed Sunday morning about 10.40 a.m. when it collided with a car driven by Percy Reynolds of Belleville the OPP reports. The accident occurred on Highway 302 about a mile south of Napanee. The valuable horse, imported from Europe, is said by neighbors to have been pasturing on land owned by Gordon Kingston, who had been training him during the summer. He is reported to have got over the pasture field fence and to have made his way to the highway.

DIES IN ACCIDENT

NEW LISKEARD, Ont. (CP) William Peters, father of New Democratic Party member of Parliament Arnold Peters, was killed Monday in a two-car collision on a rural road near this Northern Ontario community.

Large Crowds Attend Fair's Opening Day

NAPANEE — The Napanee Fair Grounds were crowded Monday afternoon, but no official figures of attendance were available.

Although the flower display was smaller than usual, those exhibits were of surprisingly good quality in view of the dry weather. Petunias and zinnias were especially good. Many of the exhibits were entered by people of the district who have a plentiful supply of water. Mrs. W. J. Barnard appears to have headed the list of prize winners, although the official figures have not yet been given out. She obtained the first and second winners, and two third prizes on 28 entries, losing out only on the ninth prize. The flower show arrangement on which she habitually takes first prize. She is past-president of the Napanee Horticultural Society. Judge was Captain Bruce Reid and Kingston, past president of that society.

Judging of exhibits in the Arena began at 1.00 p.m., but for women's work, not until four. Attractive cookery was being brought in until the last minute.

JAYCEE POOL POPULAR

The Jaycees are almost impossible to get past the crowd standing about the Jaycees' pool, but their members are taking turns getting dunked, for a price. A hard-thrown ball hitting a certain spot triggered a trap door, spilling the good-natured Jaycees into the water. It appeared to be attracting more attention and creating more fun than any other feature of the fair.

Family Reunion

DESERONTO — The four sisters of the Pearsse family and their families held the first reunion at Presqu'ile Park with 36 members of the family present. The sisters are Miss Gladys Pearsse and Mrs. T. L. McCullough of St. George St., Deseronto and Mrs. Gordon Foster and Mrs. Joseph Malone of Toronto. Seventeen grandchildren were present. The following day one of those grandchildren, Kenneth Malone was killed in Markham when a veranda roof fell on him, crushing his lungs. Wednesday the members of the family gathered once more to attend his funeral held in the Bethesda Lutheran Church in Markham. He was seven years old, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Malone, and one of a family of five children.

55TH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Aylsworth of the Napanee Road celebrated their 55th wedding anniversary, and, while they expected to be entertained at dinner by the members of their family who live near, they received a complete surprise when all their children came together with their husbands or wives. They are: Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Murray of St. Catharines, Mr. and Mrs. George Clare of Copper Cliff, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Finlay of Oakville, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Burley of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Aylsworth and Mr. and Mrs. Alan Aylsworth of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Aylsworth of Napanee, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Aylsworth at home.

FAREWELL PARTY

A farewell party was held Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Schell, in honor of Charles Bartholomew who will leave soon for his home in England to enter Cambridge University next month. He has been in Deseronto for the summer, employed by Lloyd Vanders.

Dynamic Bourguiba Has Given Tunisia 10 Years of Progress

Tunisia has enjoyed 10 years of political stability since it became independent. The main reason, as seen by a Canadian Press reporter on a visit to the North African country, is the president, Habib Bourguiba.

BY PETER BUCKLEY

TUNIS (CP)—Habib Bourguiba, the dynamic little president of Tunisia, has built a formidable political career and achieved immense popularity by paying great attention to an old Arab virtue.

Tunisians call it "syasa" and it means respect for the formalities of life, in particular such graces as courtesy, love of tradition and modesty.

Bourguiba, an urbane and astute product of the Tunisian middle class with a Paris law degree, has no lack of courtesy.

But he has brushed aside tradition and broken with Islam's hallowed Koranic teaching when they hampered his ambitious plans for the North African country. And he has immodestly let it be known, encouraged, a cult of personality that helps to keep him on top of Tunisia's political heap.

Viewed from Paris, which formerly ruled Tunisia as a protectorate, Bourguiba seems irritatingly unpredictable and individualistic. French government official, adopting the polite but peckish tone that France reserves for Bourguiba these days, said:

"Tunisia is probably much too small for his ambitions. I'm sure he would prefer a larger stage to play on."

10 YEARS OF CALM

But a longtime French resident of Tunis praised Bourguiba because he "has given a sense of direction and a continuity of effort to Afro-Asiatic traits that are not usually found in the Tunisian character."

Both assessments offer a facet of truth.

Tunisia has enjoyed 10 years of virtually unruffled calm since the end of the French protectorate. Although it has few natural resources and a population of only 4,600,000 in an area a little larger than the three Maritime provinces, the country has made solid strides under Bourguiba towards building a modern industrial society.

The 63-year-old president's methods have been distinctive enough to inspire the term "Bourguibism" to describe his political tactics. In the words of U.S. author I. William Zartman, it is "keeping a flexible control on both the hot and cold taps and adapting rules to the flow of events."

By some political alchemy, Bourguiba has succeeded where other Arab leaders have failed in striking a steady flow of Western capital into a decidedly socialist economy.

In the dapper, cultured Bourguiba — regarded by more fiery spirits as a suspiciously moderate nationalist —Tunisia has a leader of international stature out of all proportion to her size.

SEEKS MAGHREB UNION

An impassioned speaker and from early youth a battler for Tunisian independence, Bourguiba has pursued the cause of Maghreb unity—apparently hopeless in the present prickly atmosphere around Algeria, Morocco, Tunisia and Libya. He also envisages a Commonwealth of French-speaking countries, an idea that has signally failed to strike sparks in Paris although welcomed by other former colonies.

On the domestic scene, Bourguibism flowers.

He has rallied most of the political opposition to his side, manipulating dissidents with a velvet glove or skewing Arabas of the loose when necessary—such as in the 1962 execution of 10 army officers who plotted his assassination.

But such sternness is rare. More often Bourguiba is able to isolate his opponents, then wait them to grow tired of being ostracized. They have subsequently surrendered and taken jobs in the government or in the all-powerful Socialist Destour (Constitution), the country's only political party, with tightly-organized cells in every village.

POWER UNCHALLENGED

The president has virtually unchallenged power over Tunisian affairs. There is a national assembly and a cabinet, but both receive their orders from the lavish, massive presidential palace in suburban Carthage.

Bourguiba is also given to lecturing the nation directly, drawing sermons from day-to-day events.

When an old Tunisian crone killed her new-born grandchild because she felt her unmarried daughter had been dishonored, Bourguiba announced in a group of magistrates: "Each Tunisian should see himself personally responsible for the fate of our young women, whose emancipation I have encouraged."

And he lectured Tunisia on the need for young men to accept their responsibilities toward the women they woo.

His personality is projected ceaselessly at the electorate. At least two towns have been reclaimed in his name, main streets are called after him and his photograph is everywhere, even in the currency.

Bourguiba's least successful efforts have been in his relations with France.

Twice in recent years, he has been slapped down by General de Gaulle—the first time when he tried to seize the French naval base at Bizerte by force in 1962, and again when he nationalized French - owned farms and property in 1964.

FRANCE RETALIATED

Relations have still not returned to normal. Tunisia's economy, largely dependent on trade and aid from France, slumped after the former number country retaliated for the property seizures.

Almost inevitably, Tunisia has turned to the United States to help fill the gap, and the U.S. presence here is growing daily.

Much of Bourguiba's impact has come from his willingness to adopt unpopular causes.

By calling for a more rational Arab policy towards Israel, he has alienated many of the Arab states, including Egypt, stating that the impulse for Palestinian majority rule must come from the Africans of Rhodesia, he has inflamed Africanists throughout black Africa.

Within Tunisia, he has stepped brusquely on traditional toes by banning polygamy, giving equal rights to women and encouraging birth control. He has welcomed private investment. He has even ordered that normal business operations continue during the taxing, month - long fasts of Ramadan—a daring, unprecedented step in the Arab world.

Bourguiba has been married twice. When he was studying law in Paris in the 1920s, he married a French widow older than himself and the union lasted until well past Tunisian independence. The two were divorced in recent years and Bourguiba married a longtime Tunisian woman friend.

However, his first wife is comfortably installed in a suburban villa and Bourguiba is said to visit her weekly.

In private life as in politics, his motto seems to be the Arab maxim: "Hâlî lesa uh makai" — "Leave room for reconciliation."

Tomorrow: Canadians will staff children's hospital.

WILL TAKE TIME

BRANTFORD (CP)—Results in the fight against pollution of Lake Erie will not be evident for at least five years, Dr. Gordon Vace, chairman of the Ontario Water Resources Commission, said Sunday. Anti-pollution measures should have been taken earlier, he said.

$50,000 Taken In Robbery at Niagara Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) Five men armed and masked, held up the Skylon Tower in the Niagara International Centre early today and escaped with about $30,000 cash.

Robert LeBosseur, manager of the tower, said the $30,000 included the entire weekend receipts. The money was taken from filing cabinets.

The bandits walked into the basement executive offices at 3 a.m., rounded up the boiler and cleaning staff at gunpoint, and handcuffed them to pipes in the boiler room.

One employee was able to free his handcuffs two hours later and call police.

FAIR OPENERS at Stirling Fair on Saturday are seen following opening ceremonies. From the left are Fair President Ivan Series, Christine Retallack, of Montreal as Miss Land of Lakes, Darlene French, Tweed Snow Queen, and Clarke T. Rollins, M.I.A. Hastings East.

Stirling Fair

Western Horse Show Attracts Huge Crowd

The swinginest "western" town in Eastern Canada during the past week must just have been the village of Stirling where cowpokes in wide brimmed hats prowled the main street as a prelude to the annual Stirling Fair on Saturday.

Western garbed genie men were in and out of stores, took a hand in selling merchandise and handed out tickets on Chamber of Commerce sponsored draws.

Then on Saturday cowpokes from all over Eastern Ontario converged on the village, took part in a colorful street parade and then at the fair staged a Western rodeo show that captured a big share of the interest on the part of fair-goers.

Attendance at the fair shattered all records in recent years with the infield inside the track jammed full of cars.

ACHIEVEMENT DAYS HELD

Of course Stirling Fair wasn't all horses.

There was a good cattle show and Stirling District 4-H clubbers put on a show of their own with their calf club achievement day. The Hastings 4-H Corn Club and the South Hastings 4-H Potato Club also held their achievement day at the fair.

In addition there was a good cattle show with light and heavy horse class sections.

In the agricultural building, there was a good cheese show, along with displays of fruits and vegetables.

And as evidence that home baking has not gone completely out of style was the showing of delectable appearing pies and cakes, and other examples of domestic science prepared by the ladies of the district.

There was also the ladies' wear and men's wear along with hand worked quilts, rugs and other home craft.

WELCOMED BY PRESIDENT

Throughout the afternoon the fair crowd was entertained with western music while the midway with its numerous rides and concessions was well-patronized.

Fair President Ivan Series welcomed fair - goers, while Clarke T. Rollins, M.I.A. for Hastings east officially opened the fair and was introduced by Carl Bateman, the County Clerk.

In doing so he congratulated fair officials members of the 4-H clubs, fair exhibitors and the Stirling Chamber of Commerce

4-H CLUBBER Lynda Walker of Harold, with Junior Holstein calf with which she won first prize in 4-H Club Achievement Day event.

THREE ON A HORSE — These three youngsters had a mobile grandstand seat for Western Games events at Stirling Fair. But the young rider in front is more interested in the horse he is riding.

BARREL RACING was but one of the action packed events in the Western games at Stirling Fair. Here a rider and horse strain every sinew as they round barrel.

Black Revolution Should Aim At Property, Not Power, Claim

What will be the course of the Negro revolution in the United States? If it is reduced to "get whitey" it invites disaster, says a distinguished historian. It should, he suggests, be aimed at "black property," instead of "black power."

Written for the AP
By Dr. JAMES P SHENTON
Professor of history,
Columbia University

Americans have generally become aware that they are in the midst of a "black revolution."

What began as a Negro struggle to integrate education racially has grown to include political equality, full access to public accommodation and an improvement of living conditions.

Most recently, it has taken a new direction with the cry for "black power."

Throughout the struggle, the Negro has received large help from the white community. But the absence of a well - defined meaning to "black power" has created confusion in the ranks of civil rights supporters and evoked fears among many previously friendly whites. The riots which have rocked Watts, (Los Angeles) Harlem (New York) Paterson, N.J., Chicago and Cleveland have not only accentuated white fears but also triggered a white backlash.

CRY 'GET WHITEY'

The question is increasingly raised of whether the moderate Negro leadership is giving way to a more radical element. The civil rights program which heretofore has emphasized equality and integration now is blurred by the cries of "get whitey" and the demand to bring the white American to his knees.

Has the black revolution entered a new phase where terror will replace reason? Is it moving in the direction of the great revolutions that shook Great Britain in the 17th century, America and France in the 18th century and Mexico, Russia, China and Cuba in the 20th century?

Any answer to these questions must be predicted with a warning: The black revolution is incomplete; to draw too rigid parallels with past revolutions is to deny it is unique characteristics.

Furthermore, the American, French and Russian revolutions with which it will be compared involved the aspirations of a whole people, while the black revolution is the struggle of a minority to claim co-equality with a privileged white majority.

Violence alone is not sufficient proof of a revolution.

It is only when an upswing of violence occurs which normal police authority cannot contain that the description revolutionary is applicable.

LONG IN COMING

The black revolution has been long in coming. The enslavement of and then systematic deprivation of elementary rights to the Negro has given him ample cause for resentment.

Since the agents of this discrimination have been most immediately state and municipal governments, it is not surprising that the targets of black protest have been those agencies of government. Nor is it surprising that the Negro has looked to federal authority for redress. His one previous great advance, emancipation had been achieved through the force of federal arms.

The target of the black revolution has been the federal system. Each successful application with state power has resulted in a commensurate increase of federal governmental power. Thus the black American has spread out the centralization of power.

By putting Negro demands within the framework of legitimate white American aspirations, the black revolution has spurred conservatives in its objectives. It is not meant to overthrow but to fulfill the American promise.

As the drive for equality succeeds, the Negro broadens his expectations and develops an enlarged self - awareness.

The once near - dumb apathy of the black masses is giving way to growing impatience. The old slogan "freedom now" is complemented by the cry for "black power."

In an affluent America, the Negro pushes for his share of well - being. Much of the energy of urban riots is directed toward looting stores, a disorderly but a quick way to get some of the necessities and small luxuries of life.

The ineffectiveness of urban government is starkly exposed in the inability of municipal police to keep order. Every time the national guard is compelled to move into the streets, both the role and power of federal authority is accentuated. Nothing ever else has resulted from the "black revolution," it has revealed the supremacy of the federal government.

The leadership of the "black revolution" must now decide whether it is prepared to challenge its federal ally. To do so would be a risky business. There is little evidence that the white majority is disenchanted with the federal government. The call for "black power" is not likely to have a lasting impact. It needs a specific formulation for that purpose.

It invites disaster if it is reduced to "get whitey." It is implausible to think that whitey will accept his fate passively. It also replaces the racism of the white with that of the black. A resort to terror breeds a terror which eventually overwhelms its maker.

When Stokely Carmichael, a Negro leader, talks of bringing the white American to his knees, he speaks the language of delusion.

For though the black American needs power, it is needful to remember that the white American has power.

Yet, the black American needs a lever with which to claim his fair share of the American abundance, and this gives the call for "black power" point. Implicit in the Negro agitation is his awareness that one's crship of property is the prerequisite to power in America. A useful definition of "black power" is "black property."

Such a definition would continue the Negro drive for equality in the traditional mode of the American revolution. For what the founding fathers believed is no less true for the black American: "liberty without property is no liberty."

Will Invest His Money in Hong Kong

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter)—George McLaren, 27, of Toronto, flew back to Australia from Hong Kong today to claim his share of a $300,000 lottery victory.

"I want to get straight back to Hong Kong," he said at Sydney airport.

"I met a sweet little China girl and I have decided to invest my money there and settle down."

McLaren shared the lottery prize with another Canadian, Ronald Ouellette, 23, also of Toronto.

They were on a working trip around the world and had been in Sydney for four months.

Shortly before the winning ticket was drawn, McLaren flew to Hong Kong to seek work there.

Ouellette said he would fly to Canada to visit his parents in Toronto, then return to invest his money in Australia.

Salinger Tells Of Johnson's Quick Temper

WASHINGTON (AP) — New indications that President Johnson can be terrible tempered when crossed are given in a just-published book by Pierre Salinger.

In a volume entitled With Kennedy, Salinger relates his work as press secretary to the late president and — for four months—in the same post with Johnson.

For some weeks after Johnson became president he had cordial relations with the press, Salinger writes, but—

"No president's honeymoon with the press has lasted very long and LBJ's came to an end, too. . . .

LBJ INCENSED

"The president, accustomed to highly-sympathetic treatment by the press in the weeks after the assassination, was incensed by the increasing frequency of tough questions at his press conferences and hostile editorials and columns.

"In contrast with JFK, President Johnson would blow sky high over news leaks from the White House, particularly those involving presidential appointments. But he went further than President Kennedy in expressing his anger. A few of these hapless choices didn't get their appointments because of the premature announcements."

A sidelight on the less-than-perfect rapport between Johnson and the now Senator Robert F. Kennedy, (Dem. N.Y.) also is provided in the book. Johnson told him how much he admired John F. Kennedy. . . .

"His admiration, however," the book related, "did not extend to Attorney-General Robert Kennedy who, he was convinced, attempted to sabotage his nomination for the vice-presidency in 1960.

Your Car

Save Money With Regular Servicing

BY EUGENE R. MILMOE

When gas mileage is miserably low, new plugs are tried, next, the points, then the carburetor is replaced. That's the usual routine. If it doesn't help, the car is labelled a lemon.

Yet most gas consumption complaints are eventually traced to other conditions, most of which develop because of maintenance neglect or forgetfulness. And usually, the longer the condition exists the more difficult it becomes to pinpoint it via the process of elimination.

That's why a regular service schedule is recommended. It saves you money and headaches by preventing such troubles.

A full list of the more notorious gas-wasters includes: a dirty air cleaner, sticking choke, binding manifold heat valve, clogged thermostat, slipping fan belt, defective fuel pump, weak battery, late timing, faulty cables or connections, low engine oil or dirty oil filter.

Put them all on your regular maintenance schedule and you will save money.

From S. H.: "Once my engine warms up, smoke comes from the oil filler pipe. What causes this?" Worn piston rings or a clogged crankcase ventilating system.

L. U. asks: "My spark plugs usually become oil-fouled. I've heard that this means rings or valves are in bad shape."

Rings, valves or bearings are often the cause. But spark plugs which are too cold for your engine needs are also a possibility. Check this first.

L. B. writes: "My brakes have become so sensitive that they grab hard when I just rest my foot lightly on the pedal."

Fluid on the linings or a loose backing plate condition is probably the reason.

From B. S.: "What would cause a regular cracking or snapping noise from the engine when it's running? I thought, at first, it was coming from the coil, but it does not seem to be."

Worn, torn, cracked or split insulation on high - tension cables is the common cause. Check them all over carefully.

Rail Systems Almost Fully Back to Life

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The last few hundred workers still holding out against the CNR and CPR returned to their jobs early today, ending their rebellion against a back-to-work law passed by Parliament six days ago.

The two railways announced today that all workers from coast to coast reported to work for the 8 a.m. day shift for the first time since 118,000 railway workers walked off their jobs at noon Aug. 26.

The last pockets of resistance to collapse were in the CNR yards at Winnipeg and in the CPR's big Angus repair shops in Montreal.

Both the CNR and CPR had all their passenger and freight operations back into service by Tuesday night.

The 118,000 men who took part in the strike were demanding wage increases ranging from 15 to 35 per cent, job guarantees, improved welfare benefits and additional negotiable terms in their contract—all in a two-year agreement.

The legislation which was signed into law last Thursday imposed an interim 18 per cent wage increase over a two-year period and ordered the unions to begin immediate negotiations with the railways to work out a new agreement before Nov. 15.

NAMED GOLDENBERG

Carl Goldenberg of Montreal was named to mediate the dispute. If progress has not been made by the Nov. 15 deadline, compulsory arbitration will be imposed.

The CPR statement, announcing that full services had been restored across the country, said "all employees required for work are reporting."

Last to hold out against the CPR were about 300 non-craft workers in the Angus repair shops in Montreal. They voted Tuesday night to return to work today.

Only 40 of the 2,000 men required for the day shift turned up to work Tuesday morning but when the night shift came on the job all but 300 men reported. Work resumed on major repair jobs.

The CNR restored its services in Western Canada despite a confused situation at Winnipeg where officials have not yet determined if workers there have voted for or against a return to work.

RETURN TO WORK

The CNR planned to have passenger cars leaving as far as British Columbia Tuesday night for the first time since the start of the strike following a decision by workers at Montreal, Edmonton, Vancouver and Kamloops, B.C. to return to work.

The railways said no disciplinary action of any kind is

Rail Bill Aired in House

By MICHAEL GILLAN

OTTAWA (CP)—If there's to be a big fight over the government's mammoth railway legislation, then MPs now are just shadow-boxing.

Many opposition members, particularly those from the Prairies and the Maritimes, are concerned that behind the bill's 24,000 words are hidden meanings that might adversely affect regional economies.

But until the bill goes before the Commons transport committee after second reading—approval in principle—they say they won't know whether the wage a battle or give approval after some amendments.

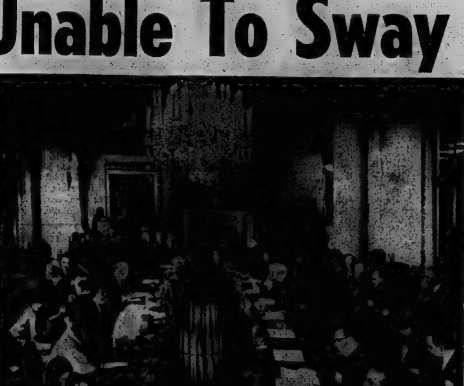
This uncertainty was reflected Tuesday during the second full day of Commons debate on the bill.

Some MPs spoke strongly against the bill, but qualified their attacks with "if" or "but" grounds they don't know what the clauses really mean.

At the start of the debate last week the Conservatives, led by Alvin Hamilton (PC — Qu'Appelle), tried to persuade the government to refer the subject matter of the bill to the committee before second reading.

A RARE MOVE

This seldom-used step would have permitted exhaustive committee hearings before a vote to give approval in principle.



Transport Minister Pickersgil rejected the bid but said after second reading the government would entertain any amendments to approve the bill.

And he said by voting for approval in principle MPs were accepting only two principles—

South Africa's Ruling Nationalists Vow to Follow Course Verwoerd Set

From AP-Reuters

CAPE TOWN (CP) — Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd, felled by an assassin's knife, will be buried Saturday in Pretoria. This was announced today as his Nationalist party pledged to follow his policy of apartheid.

After a state funeral in Pretoria, the administrative capital, the body of Verwoerd will be laid to rest in Heroe's Acre in West Cemetery where lies his predecessor, Johannes Strijdom.

The Nationalist party's parliamentary caucus met where Verwoerd was struck down in Parliament Tuesday and announced its "unshakable determination" to maintain his policies.

The pledge confirmed expectations that Verwoerd's death would mean no modification of the government's strict policy of racial segregation. The Nationalists firmly control Parliament with a majority of nearly three to one.

The assassin, Dimitri Tsafendas, of Greek-Portuguese descent, was taken by police to hospital for x-rays.

Tsafendas apparently was inflamed when members of Parliament wrestled him to the floor after he plunged a knife into Verwoerd's heart and neck at the 54-year-old prime minister at his desk.

Justice Minister Balthazar Vorster said information "indicates it was the deed of one individual and his actions and movements are now being investigated to the finest detail."

"I am aware," Vorster said in a statement, "that much speculation is going the rounds and I want to warn the public not to attach exaggerated value to rumors."

Vorster did not elaborate. Tsafendas has been pictured as disgruntled over low wages received by many white workers in South Africa. He was known as a bitter, withdrawn man with few friends.

"Our departed leader believed in law and order," Vorster said. "In this case also the law will

'I Have Something to Say' - - With a Knife

CAPE TOWN (Reuters) —"I have something to do," Dimitri Tsafendas was quoted as saying minutes before he plunged his long, handled knife into Hendrik Verwoerd's neck and heart Tuesday, killing the South African premier.

Fellow parliamentary messengers said today the premier's mysterious, mid-lingual assassin had "lived in an unusual way" throughout the morning.

First they said he left the parliament buildings in plain clothes shortly after arriving for work, which was against staff regulations.

They said when he returned, Tsafendas carried two parcels wrapped in white paper.

Just before noon, he asked another messenger to exchange lunch breaks. His usual break was from noon to 1 p.m. and he wanted to be off from 1 to 2 p.m. Parliament was scheduled to reassemble at 2 p.m.

When the other messenger refused, Tsafendas said he was going for a walk in gardens adjoining Parliament. He was next seen in the messengers' room with a plate of food. He said he was not hungry and offered to share it with another messenger. About 2:30 p.m., he asked the other messenger to take the plate back to the cafeteria because he was in a hurry.

The other messenger declined and Tsafendas took the plate and hurried off, saying: "I have something to do."

Moments later, he hurried through the chamber toward the prime minister.

Police Shot Stirs Riot In Atlanta

By BEN CHESTER

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—Police kept a tight patrol today in an area where about 500 Negroes, many shouting "black power," rioted after an officer shot a Negro man wanted on a car theft charge.

At least 43 persons were arrested and 16 were injured during recurrent disturbances Tuesday night in a predominantly Negro section near Atlanta's new sports stadium.

Police final attempted to quell the racial outbreak—the worst the city has experienced—by firing shotguns and pistols into the air.

When this failed, tear gas canisters were fired into the milling crowds and the streets were cleared quickly.

The wounded man, who had fled officers on the car theft charge, was listed in poor condition in hospital with wounds in the hip and side.

Mayor Ivan Allen Jr., who hurried to the scene soon after shouting Negroes appeared, attempted to plead for order from the top of a police car.

Allen was nearly toppled from the car, which Negroes rocked back and forth. He finally was shouted down and jumped down from the car.

Nigerian Generals At Odds

LAGOS (AP) — Two young colonels, representatives of the new breed of African leader, are on a collision course that may shatter Nigeria's shaky unity. Concerned donor states are using the weight of financial aid as pressure to prevent a breakup.

The antagonists are Lt.-Col. Yakubu Gowon, at 31 one of the world's youngest heads of state, and Lt.-Col. Chukwuemeka Odumegwu Ojukwu, 32, military governor of Nigeria's Eastern Region.

Gowon took command after Maj.-Gen. Johnson Aguiyi-Ironsi, the former military ruler, disappeared in a July 29 army mutiny. Aguiyi-Ironsi, reported to have been kidnapped by Hausa - speaking northern troops, hasn't been seen since. Gowon was army chief of staff and highest ranking officer from the north.

He has tried to keep all sections of Nigeria, especially east and north, in a conciliatory mood to avoid splitting the federation.

Use Force In Rhodesia Their Plea

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — Zambia today demanded tougher action against white-supremacist Rhodesia, Britain, the Commonwealth or the United Nations.

An informant at the meeting of Commonwealth prime ministers said Zambia wanted military action by Britain or one of the other two organizations.

Zambia's foreign minister, Simon Kapwepwe, spoke on the second day of the Commonwealth conference which heard a plea Tuesday from Prime Minister Wilson for more time to allow existing economic sanctions to become effective against the white-minority regime in Rhodesia.

Canada's Arnold Smith, Commonwealth secretary - general, held a press conference following today's morning meeting merely that Kapwepwe spoke for 70 to 75 minutes — "very eloquently"—in which he outlined principles relating to Rhodesia.

Smith said Kapwepwe suggested some "formulations" which in his view were clearer than the principles laid down by Britain as guidelines for the development of Rhodesian independence under majority rule.

OUTLINES CONDITIONS

Other sources said Kapwepwe placed before Mr. Smith at a meeting the three conditions or principles earlier laid down by Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda when he announced he was "disgusted" with Wilson and would not attend the Commonwealth conference.

Kaunda had demanded:

1. Britain should use force in Rhodesia if the Ian Smith government is still in power by a deadline to be specified.

2. If Britain is unable or unwilling to use force, the Commonwealth should take concerted military initiative.

3. If neither of the first two principles is accepted, the Commonwealth should make a unanimous approach to the United Nations asking for mandatory economic sanctions and the use of force if sanctions fail.

Zambia, it is understood, wants a clear-cut commitment from Britain that Rhodesia — which seized independence illegally last Nov. 11—will never be granted independence by Britain British Parliament on the basis of majority rule.

Britain, in a statement of principles, has declared "unimpeded progress" to majority rule. Africans suspect this could mean that Rhodesia would get independence under a white regime which gave paper guarantees to the black majority.

Kapwepwe expressed his government's disbelief that eco-

Offset Presses Used

By WALTER HAYES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Counterfeiters have switched to offset presses to print their phoney bills with the result that the negative, not the original plate, is the thing police look for these days, an RCMP expert on counterfeiting said Tuesday.

Sgt. Derek Barker of RCMP's Ottawa detachment, told the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police it used to take counterfeiters weeks or months to produce a printing plate for a hand press.

But only takes two minutes and little skill to make a counterfeit bill on an offset press and a counterfeiter can turn them out for the life of the plate. When the plate wears out he merely makes a new one from the same negative."

Sgt. Barker said counterfeiting in Canada reached an all time peak in 1965 when $1,000,000 in bad money was uncovered by RCMP.

Sgt. James Nisbet, also with the RCMP in Ottawa, told the 145 delegates to the conference the RCMP has turned up $3,000,000 in counterfeit money since 1950, nearly 80 per cent of it before it was put into circulation.

ALL WERE SUPRESSED

He said of the 12 series of counterfeit bills produced in Canada since 1935 all have been suppressed, and with the exception of one case, the principals were convicted.

In his opening address, the association president and chief constable of Metropolitan Toronto police force, James P. Mackey, said the public is entitled to know why the courts have chosen to commute death sentences.

Chief Mackey referred to the recently commuted death sentence of Roger Caron, who acted to hang in Vancouver last month for the murder of a loan company employee during a robbery.

Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet of the Supreme Court of Canada noted that "average citizens, who not so long ago would have tried to help the police, in their too-often unrewarding tasks, will remain idle as not-so-innocent bystanders and will even take sides with lawbreakers."

Mr. Justice Ouimet, chairman of the Canadian corrections committee, said he is "not convinced that a satisfactory answer is yet to be found for (this) human behaviour."

Viet Cong Terrorists Busy Trying to Disrupt Election

SAIGON (Reuters) — Viet Cong terrorists wounded 31 persons in a wave of anti-election attacks in the last 24 hours, police reported today.

In the most serious attack, 28 persons were injured Tuesday night when a youth hurled a grenade into a police station in the northern city of Hue where local officials were discussing the election, due to be held Sunday.

The other attacks, all in the Saigon area, were made on an election office, a candidate's home, a hamlet administration headquarters and an election rally in Cholon, the capital's Chinese quarter, where five persons were reported wounded.

The hamlet headquarters, five miles from the centre of Saigon, was heavily destroyed by a Viet Cong mine. Terrorists also blew up an election office near Saigon and a car wrecking the single - storey building.

In the air war over North Viet Nam, U.S. fighter-bombers Tuesday launched heavy attacks on a railway yard 90 miles northeast of Hanoi, causing severe damage.

Other U.S. planes struck at fuel storage depots on North Viet Nam's southern coastal strip. One depot, 35 miles north west of Dong Hoi, received direct hits and pilots reported a large explosion from the target area.

U.S. Navy pilots said they hit a surface-to-air missile site under construction eight miles southwest of the coastal town of Vinh.

A South Vietnamese military spokesman reported that a battalion of government troops clashed with Viet Cong guerrilla twice Tuesday only seven miles from the capital.

They killed 50 guerrillas during the two clashes and suffered only light casualties themselves.

The South Vietnamese spokesman also reported that about a regiment of government troops killed 16 guerrillas and captured 28 others 45 miles southeast of Saigon.

Will Not Be Able to Handle Data Pouring From Satellites

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) Unless swifter ways of handling methods are developed, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration may soon be unable to cope with the ever-increasing rain of scientific chatter pouring to earth from orbiting U.S. satellites.

"We will not continue to be able to indefinitely handle the data rates from all of these satellites with yesterday's techniques," said Dr. George H. Ludwig, chief of the information processing division at Goddard Space Flight Centre.

"It's a question of resources and the problem is just beginning to come to a head."

While a traffic glut from the satellites it not now present, "we're on the verge of not being able to keep up with the data," Ludwig said.

Statisticians at Goddard calculate Ludwig's division wades through enough data each week to fill 30 encyclopedias or 20 encyclopedopias, process 1 g 50 miles of tape shipped to Goddard weekly from seven tracking stations.

The 33 satellites include orbiting geophysical observatories, a stutterbug Nimbus weather satellite; sun-studying orbiting solar observatories, and a bundle of Explorer satellites probing scientific phenomena from rock-ranging outposts in space.

Why don't scientists eliminate some data - accumulation headaches by turning off some older, less-sophisticated satellites?

Because a great volume of information is necessary because "to map in space requires many passes through a phenomena."

In addition to sampling the length and width of something like radiation belts, "you must also map in time. For example, to see radiation belt characteristics you must wait a year for the earth to move around the sun so phenomenon linked to the sunspot cycle may take 11 years to map."

take its relentless course."

After Verwoerd's funeral, the Nationalist caucus is expected to meet next week to select a new party leader who will automatically become prime minister.

Following Verwoerd's assassination, Finance Minister Theophilus Dongeo became acting prime minister. Forster, 68, was considered a strong contender for the premiership.

STABBED FOUR TIMES

Police sources said today there was no reason to suspect anyone else plotted with the Bible - quoting parliamentary messenger who stabbed Verwoerd to death at his desk in Parliament two days before the premier's 65th birthday. Verwoerd was stabbed four times in the neck and heart.

Although there was no official statement about the motive for the assassination, men who worked with Verwoerd said the had two obsessions—the cost of living in South Africa for poor whites and an Old Testament text from a chapter about the death of a king of Judah.

Even his name was in doubt. It was first given as Dimitri Stafendas, but his identity card carried it Dimitri Tsafendas. Co-workers said, he was also known as Tsafendakis, Stifiano and Chipendale.

Tsafendas worked as a messenger in Parliament for about a month. Fellow workers said he often told them the government was spending too much on non - whites, and neglecting poor whites. He often complained he could not make ends meet on his salary, which rose to about $140 a month.

He was born in Portuguese Mozambique of Greek descent. He is unmarried. Although Verwoerd was the architect of South Africa's apartheid policies, there was no indication that the killer was associated with any political organization.

Police continued to question Tsafendas but no results of the interrogation were released.

Labor Issues Discussed at Kiwanis Meet

Gerald F. Cunningham a local CNR employee who is vice - president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and president of the grievance committee, yesterday addressed members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club. He spoke on the relationship between union, management and government.

Observing that problems associated with wages, hours and working conditions are resolved by collective bargaining, Mr. Cunningham suggested that labor strife arises when no plans are made for men, who are displaced by automation. He said today's trade unionist is a "new type" who is looking to the future and not prepared to stand still. When it comes to collective bargaining, the techniques of 1936 won't do in 1966, he reminded his listeners.

Mr. Cunningham called for what he termed "gradual automation" by the vigorous leaders from labor, management and government. He spoke for a change in Canada's collective bargaining system, suggesting alterations in its concept, process, the issues involved and its structure.

Rail Mediator Wants to Start Negotiations

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—Railway mediator Carl Goldenberg said Tuesday he hopes Monday's strike at the CPR and CNR will go back to work quickly and that "meaningful" negotiations to begin on the thorny railway contract dispute.

"It is in the best interests to return to work," he told a press conference after a half-hour meeting with Labor Minister Nicholson to discuss plans for the mediation effort.

Mr. Goldenberg was appointed Friday to direct a new attempt at getting voluntary agreement between the railways and four union groups on wage and job protection issues still in dispute. Three of the unions and 118,000 workers involved.

The unions went on strike Aug. 38, halting railway operations across the country. Parliament quickly and legislated Sept. 1 ordering a halt to the strike. The bill imposed an interim 8 per-cent wage increase over two years.

INSTRUCTED TO RETURN

It also instructed both sides to submit their unresolved issues under the threat of compulsory arbitration if they had not made progress by Nov. 15.

Mr. Goldenberg said labor and management have promised to cooperate fully with him. He hoped to begin the negotiations shortly, perhaps later this week or early next.

The Montreal lawyer said he has already discussed with some of the people concerned" the matter of getting all railway workers back on the job.

Several thousand of them chiefly shop workers, have refused to obey the parliament's back-to-work legislation.

"It is difficult to mediate a settlement when you know that the other is under pressure," he explained. "Coercion does not help at a time like this."

Neither side wanted to see the dispute go to compulsory arbitration which would put contract terms legally binding on the unions and railways.

"I'm confident that if we receive the full co-operation of all involved we will be successful in avoiding arbitration."

Reporters asked whether he hoped to meet the Nov. 15 deadline.

"It is impossible to say now if there is sufficient time," he said.

Two Missionaries Return To Thailand to Continue Work for Witnesses

James Mumby left Belleville yesterday on the first leg of his 12,500 mile return trip to Thailand. Jim, 38, and his wife, 33, are working missionaries for Jehovah's Witnesses. They have two children, Lisa, age 5 and Stephen, age 2, both born in Thailand. They have just concluded their first visit home in eight years.

Raised on the family farm at R. R. 2, Belleville, Jim graduated from Belleville Collegiate in 1945 and immediately entered the full-time ministry for which he had taken training concurrently with his high school education. His first assignments took him to Nova Scotia, Quebec Province and Northern Ontario.

In 1949 Jim and his wife, the former Ruth Lundmark of Indena, Saskatchewan, were invited to the missionary training course at the Watchtower Bible School of Gilead at South Lansing, New York. On their graduation day Jim represented the class of 108 students in speaking to an audience of 7,136 Jehovah's Witnesses assembled in International convention at Yankee Stadium in New York City.

They entered Laos in 1959 and opened a missionary home for the Watchtower Society in the capital city of Vientiane. Two years later they transferred to Bangkok, Thailand. With the arrival of their first child in 1961, the Mumby's were obliged to leave the special missionary ranks as their modest missionary allowance ($7.00 per month each, plus room and board) would not support a family. However, they determined to stay in Thailand and carry on their missionary work part time. Jim took work with an import firm and they both found it possible to continue to have a very active part in the public preaching work of Jehovah's Witnesses there.

LANGUAGE A PROBLEM

"Language was a problem at first, of course," Jim said in an address to the local congregation in their Kingdom Hall last Friday evening. "However, we jumped in with both feet, so to speak. After just six weeks in the country we started calling from house to house. We only knew a couple of dozen words, but it was enough to get the purpose of our call across and we would leave the "Watchtower" and "Awake!" magazine with the people in their own language. By the end of the first year I had sufficient command of the language to attempt a very public Bible lecture in Thai. It wasn't supposed to be humorous but I'm sure you can appreciate that the native Thai just could not restrain a few little chuckles when I would give a slightly wrong tonal inflection to some words and have them come out meaning something entirely different, such as "pig" instead of "group", or "knee" instead of "rice." Our children are fluent in both Thai and English. They are learning it...the easy way," Jim says.

When asked how Jehovah's Witnesses are received in a country that is 99 per cent Buddhist, Jim explained: "The people are pleasant and hospitable, and often curious about our beliefs, such as immortality of the soul and a hell of fiery torment, are practically identical to those commonly taught in Christendom, and since Jehovah's Witnesses do not agree with either, in a way we are at no greater odds with the Buddhists than we are with the religions of the West.

However, the Buddhists do not accept the Bible, and quoting it has no impression on them at first. More progress is made at the start by reasoning with them on their beliefs in reincarnation. A few logical questions will sometimes start them thinking about the possibility of their theory being wrong and the Bible teaching being correct. It is more reasonable. One question we often ask is, 'Since, according to your reincarnation theory, all living things that die are transferred to a female of some species to be born of her, then what need is there for the male of any species?'"

FOOD ABUNDANT

Commenting on conditions in general in the country, Jim noted that while there are many poor people, food is abundant, and inexpensive. Housing for Europeans is costly, starting at $150 per month for a one bedroom apartment and going to over $500 per month for a house of reasonable Western standards. There have been no great natural disasters nor wars experienced by the people for several generations, so there is a generally carefree atmosphere prevailing. Effect of the war in nearby Viet Nam is reflected only in the presence of a number of U.S. military personnel.

Jim's mother, Clara, widow of the late Arthur Mumby, and brother, Gerald, still live on the family farm where a host of relatives and friends called during the past week to visit the vacationing missionary family. Jim has a sister, Shirley Thornton, living at R. R. 2, Belleville, and a brother, George, living in Georgetown, Ontario.

By the time the Mumby's get back to Thailand they will have circled the globe. They came via the Philippines, Japan, Alaska and Vancouver. Their return flight is scheduled through New York, Copenhagen, Zurich, Karachi and then to Bangkok, thus completing their circuit of the globe.

OPP Report Several Cases of Gas Theft

During the week of August 28 to September 3, 41 charges were laid against individuals by the Belleville detachment of the O.P.P., for offences ranging from having liquor in a public place to not having life jacket in a boat.

The local O.P.P. officers patrolled 9,980 miles of roads and investigated 16 motor vehicle accidents in which four persons received minor injuries. A total of 121 vehicles were given safety checks during the week, and 44 warnings were issued to motorists.

Five thefts were reported last week, including several complaints of stolen gasoline. One person was apprended, charged with the theft of a number of firearms, and subsequently sentenced in court to two months in jail.

Miscellaneous duties performed by Belleville O.P.P. officers included the investigation of five family disturbances and the herding of livestock off public highways.

DISCUSSES ECONOMICS

Arthur Wina, Zambian finance minister, was the only other speaker at the morning session. He went into detail on the economic aspects of the sanctions policy and the particular difficulties of Zambia, chained economically to Rhodesia through imports and common services such as an airline, railway and power supply.

Smith said that Kapwepwe asked him to tell reporters that he likes Zambia by Common-wealth countries must not be regarded as charity but as part of the sanctions policy.

Zambia's position was put after African delegates had cooled over a Commons lecture Tuesday by Wilson on British stand.

Representatives of the nine African countries taking part in the current conference, along with several others, met privately late Tuesday at the Ugando high commission to assess Wilson's speech and to prepare something approaching a united front in demands for measures to topple the breakaway regime of Prime Minister Ian Smith in Salisbury.

President Milton Obote of Uganda, asked whether he was satisfied with the British leader's statement, replied "it was definitely not."

Will Call Tenders for County Road

Tenders for the reconstruction of Hastings county road No. 12, covering grading, drainage and granular base, are being called this week, it was announced today by Clarke T. Rollins, M.L.A. for Hastings East. Bids for the project will be received by the county engineer, Peter H. Anderson until September 28th.

The 7.15 miles of roadway running from Madoc past the Madoc fairgrounds to county road No. 20 will be rebuilt as a development road project under a county - provincial agreement in which the province pays all construction costs.

Silage Corn Day Set for Four Counties

The Quinte District Soil and Crop Improvement Association, taking in the four counties of Hastings, Northumberland, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington, is holding a big silage corn day on Thursday, September 15th. The all-day event is being held at the Sillsville farm of Harold and Don Hough south of Napanee.

The day is planned to cover all phases of silage corn production with the latest ideas in growing, harvesting, storing and feeding to be discussed and demonstrated.

Results of field trials will be demonstrated with comparisons between early, medium and late hybrid corn. Planting dates, fertilizer use and weed control will also be discussed.

Machinery companies will display the latest in corn planting and harvesting equipment.

Bridge Closing Forces Change In Bus Route

Changes in the local traffic pattern made necessary through the construction of the new fourlane College Street bridge will result in route changes in that area for the city buses.

Effective Thursday, September 8th the following route changes will be made:

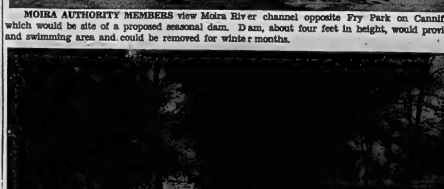
The Westhill - Hillcrest Bus will operate on the east side of the river while on the north-end of its route. The Westhill - North Park Bus will operate on the west side of the rivers while in the north end of the city crossing and returning via the Upper Bridge. There will be no change in the westhill section of these routes except that the Westhill-Hillcrest bus will operate on Wednesday afternoon.

1,400 Looking For Work at End of August

Figures will possibly have changed slightly this week, but at the end of August there were 1400 persons in Belleville and the Hastings - Prince Edward County area looking for work.

The Belleville office area takes in the two counties with exception of Trenton and the Sidney township area.

Officials at the Belleville employment office said the above figures included about 125 railway workers who now are back on their jobs and also about 130 persons from the Trenton area.



At the end of the month there were a total of 962 persons receiving unemployment benefits.

MOIRA AUTHORITY MEMBERS view Moira River channel opposite Fry Park on Cannifton Road which would be site of a proposed seasonal dam. Dam, about four feet in height, would provide lagoon and swimming area and could be removed for winter months.

SMALL CREEK is feature of Fry Park along Cannifton Road, which is being developed by city parks board. Eventually, it is hoped the park area will take in several other properties along the river bank.

Dam to Create Lagoon Area At Cannifton Rd. Park Urged

Belleville city council next week will be asked to approve of the construction of a low seasonal dam in the Moira River to provide a lagoon area in the river opposite the new Fry Park in Cannifton Road.

The dam, engineered so that it could be removed for the winter months, would be built under the Moira River Conservation Authority.

Estimated cost of the dam would be about $12,000 but according to Authority officials the structure should be eligible for provincial subsidy.

FOUR DAMS POSSIBLE

A special committee of the Moira River Conservation Authority water advisory committee has reported that up to four seasonal dams would be both feasible and desirable for the Moira river, inside the city limits and north of College Street.

Last week Mayor J. R. Ellis and Alderman Donald Jose met with members of the Authority water advisory board and inspected the site of the dam proposed for the Fry Park area north of the old Sanitary Dam.

The river channel at this point is about 200 feet wide. Plans call for a four-foot-high dam which would create a lagoon area along the Fry Park area now being developed by the city parks board.

At the Fry Park area, planners have created a small creek fed by water from the river. The creek meanders through the park for a distance of several hundred feet and will be an added attraction to the park area.

Eventually the city hopes to extend the park area by the acquisition of additional property along the river bank.

WOULD BE BENEFICIAL

City council representatives along with Authority water advisory board members agreed that seasonal dams creating a water depth of up to four feet, would be a decided improvement and would add greatly to recreational possibilities of the river.

Water advisory Board Chairman Graham Bell of Marmora told city council representatives that the Authority was anxious to do something toward improvement of the river inside the city limits.

Mayor Ellis said the dam pro-

Dr. Verwoerd Slain

The motives for the assassination of Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd of South Africa are obscure, but it is fairly certain they stem from the rigid apartheid (racial and political separatism of whites and Negroes) policy of the republic, and which led to the country becoming a republic and departing from the Commonwealth some years ago.

South Africa has pressed white supremacy at the expense of the native African population ever since the Nationalists came to power in 1948 under Dr. Malan. Successive governments have won a majority mandate from the white population and Dr. Verwoerd (a native of the Netherlands and a former professor of psychology) was regarded as its arch proponent.

Apartheid aside, the brutal circumstances of the slaying of the South African leader are to be deplored. Just as world opposition to racial discrimination in South Africa served only to harden the Nationalists' resolve, and to rally support even from South Africans of British origin who in the main oppose apartheid, the slaying may serve only to continue these trends.

The late prime minister had been spared another attempt on his life. That was in 1960, shortly after the Sharpeville riots when some 60 Africans were killed while demonstrating outside a police station. Verwoerd was shot in the head while addressing a rural fair audience. Then, as now, his assailant was a white man.

A reputed Nazi sympathizer during the last war, Verwoerd attributed his survival on that occasion to divine intervention and regarded it as vindication of his policy. In 1961 he went to London to the Prime Ministers' conference, and from his statements then it was obvious he planned to take the country out of the Commonwealth.

It was left to a plebiscite in South Africa to confirm that that was also the mood of the white population of Dutch origin who support the Nationalists and apartheid, and who were sufficient to gain a majority over the opposition English-speaking South Africans.

Dr. Verwoerd's death is unlikely to change anything in South Africa. The country at large is stable and prosperous. True, there is an undercurrent of unrest and many liberal-minded South Africans have been jailed for their beliefs and for opposition to apartheid, but by and large the country is at peace. Whether the assassination provides a spark for more widespread disorder now or in the future remains to be seen.

Trains Run Again

The familiar sound of train whistles has returned to Belleville ,signifying as readily as any news item that things are returning to normal on the nation's railroads.

Apart from some remaining trouble-spots where strikers have been delaying a return to work, train schedules are gradually resuming their normal pattern.

The spectre of a lengthy walkout, with resultant unemployment and damage to the economy, has been averted. Further negotiations are now scheduled between unions and management to reach a solution to the railroaders' wage claims regarding wages and working conditions.

Meanwhile, the fact that the majority of workers has obeyed the Government's back to work plea is cause for satisfaction and holds promise that a solution will be found to the problems underlying the walkout.

Wins Aussie Lottery

Racing horses and buying lottery tickets together give free rein to the strongly-entrenched gambling instincts of Australians and New Zealanders.

And now, two Canadian immigrants have struck it rich on Australia's richest lottery. Ron Ouellette, 39, of Pembroke, Ontario, and Jack McLaren, of Toronto, are co-winners of $242,000.

Perhaps it is as well that the two Canadians have the travel bug. Ouellette, a hotel clerk in Sydney, previously worked in hotels in Toronto, Pembroke and Bermuda. Now he plans to tour the world. McLaren was vacationing in Hong Kong when the big windfall was announced. As globe-trotters, the pair will be able to avoid the more unpleasant aspects of sudden wealth, such as pleas for handouts.

On the other hand, the British laborer who has just won $903,598 in a football pool may have plenty of problems adjusting to his new-found riches. Certainly, that has been the experience of others whose lives have been changed overnight by winning the pools in Britain.

Vacation Spot

President de Gaulle, who has been visiting French possessions around the world, stopped recently at New Caledonia. This colorful island lies 1,000 miles due north of New Zealand, and is a popular vacation resort for people "down under." Not much the same way as Be-muda attracts visitors from this part of the world.

Pap Smear Excellent Cancer Screening Test

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I enjoy your column very much but something puzzles me. You wrote that "X-ray won't show early cancer of the cervix but a Pap smear will."

Our doctor says that a Pap smear is only a screening device because it does not tell him whether a patient has cancer. If the result is positive, yes, you do have cancer. If the result is negative, most women believe that means you do not have cancer. This is not true. A patient with a negative Pap smear could still have cancer. That is why our doctor wants a definite yes or no which he can get only by doing a D.and C. and a biopsy.

Why all this talk of the Pap smear when there is something even better? — Mrs. J. C.

The Pap smear is accurate above a level of 90 percent which is highly useful. The results can come back positive, negative or doubtful. In the case of positive or doubtful, then a biopsy — a much more demanding process — follows, and you can be certain whether surgery is mandatory.

I can thus agree that a biopsy gives the most definite answer.

However, B. and C., (dilation and curettage, or scraping) and a biopsy is not the sort of procedure that can be used as routinely as the Pap smear. I can hardly see women having this done every six months or year. Can you?

I agree also that a biopsy is in order whenever any suspicion of cancer appears. Nevertheless, the Pap smear is so sensitive that it commonly detects cancer before there is even the faintest symptom that can be detected in any other way short of a biopsy.

Yes, the Pap smear is essentially a screening device, but it is an excellent one. It is simple, rapid, inexpensive. If we abandoned the Pap smear and waited for symptoms which would justify a biopsy, the result would be a great many cancers not being found until they had progressed.

The important thing in combatting cancer is to find it early. The fact that in a small percentage of cases the smear gives a false positive (which is soon straightened out) or misses an occasional case is no reason to sacrifice its benefits the other 90-odd percent of the time.

Dear Dr. Molner: My son is a truck driver and has to rush to a hospital after a bee sting because his throat swells. Is there anything he can take to immunize himself? — Mrs. C. H. N.

Nothing that he can take by himself, but there are preparations which can be given by a physician (an allergist, if possible) to desensitize him, in the same manner that hay fever sufferers can, to varying degrees, be desensitized to ragweed.

Dear Dr. Molner: I had a cardiogram and my heart beat was perfect but the T wave was off. Please explain what is meant by a T wave. — Mrs. A. C.

Certain characteristic parts of the tracing of an electrocardiogram (heart tracing) are labeled P, Q, R, S and T. The T wave represents electrical activity in the ventricles, or lower chambers of the heart.

I don't know what might be meant by saying "the T wave is off." It can be distorted by disease of the heart, by the position of the heart, or the use of digitalis. You will have to ask your physician to explain the significance in relation to other factors in your case. It just isn't simple.

Varsity—Degree Factory?

Victoria Colonist

It is but one of many interesting facets of a critique of education and economic growth by Dr. Gordon Shrum that he finds fault with unnecessary insistence by employers on university degrees.

Regrettably, Dr. Shrum told the annual convention of the Association of Canadian Schools of Business, the population explosion in Canada's universities is aggravated by the practice of many employers of using the universities as screening agencies for applicants for employment; "The job may not require university training but it is useful for the employer to know that the applicant has demonstrated the ability and perseverance to complete a university program."

Undoubtedly this is so; increasingly a degree rather than otherwise - demonstrated capacity becomes the necessary key to careers of many kinds.

But if employers are to be blamed for overloading the universities by demanding this qualification when it is not truly needed, Dr. Shrum might well underline his words and send them along to some people with whom he is quite closely connected.

Dr. B.C. Hyde, of which Dr. Shrum is co-chairman, is an agency of government and one has only to look at the job opportunity advertising of either provincial or federal administrations to gather that no category of employee is fostering this trend more than government at both levels.

All Work and No Play

Globe and Mail

Five hundred and sixty-three foreign students — Belgian, French and Austrian — were flown to Canada last month to help harvest the tobacco crop in Western Ontario. In a few weeks, the harvest over, they will leave, having seen only a small part of Canada visible between Toronto International Airport and Delhi, a small, dusty town in the heart of the tobacco belt.

Some of them will return without once talking with a native-born Canadian. Most of them will remember Canada as nothing more than a tobacco field.

Not all foreign students visiting Canada are so coolly received. For the past two years, World University Service of Canada has operated six-week summer bus tours in East, West and Central Canada. About 70 foreign students, selected by the Department of External Affairs (which shares the cost of the program with the Centennial Commission) are thus provided with an opportunity to see a good deal of this country.

Apparently it did not occur to anyone that the 563 students at Delhi might be interested in seeing the country before they fly home. No one has even been courteous enough to tell them where they might go if they decided to look around on their own. The tobacco farmers are too busy to take them on trips. The Tobacco Marketing Board is unwilling to underwrite even a one-day excursion to Niagara Falls. The Department of External Affairs' recent manures of their existence.

With the nation's Centennial almost upon us, citizens might at least have invited them while they're here to tour the site of Expo 67, Lord Thomson said recently that, on the other side of the Atlantic, Expo hasn't generated much excitement. "Let's face it," he said, "the British Commonwealth interest in Canada is practically nil." Small wonder. At least 563 European visitors will leave Canada this year hardly aware of their existence.

The incident tells us something about our ineptness at selling Canada abroad. And perhaps it explains why the Belgian students at Delhi, who have set aside six days for sightseeing when the tobacco harvest is in, have chosen to spend the rest in Canada but in the United States.

Some Advice for Parents

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

(Reprinted by Request)

A college conference on "Parents and Children" has asked me to contribute a few lines to its symposium, since I am unable to attend in person.

Knowing full well that almost all advice on child rearing is futile, I am nevertheless tempted to suggest the following Decalogue for Parents:

Thou shalt honor no other gods than thy responsibility refusing to make thy child a minor deity in thy household.

Thou shalt make no promises that are broken, whether these be promises of pleasure or promises of punishment; for unless thy child learns to trust thy word, he will not respect any person.

Thou shalt teach thy child by example, and not by precept; for a parent's teaching in moral or religion and morality, and yet lives by greed, passion and hypocrisy must respect his conduct to be followed and his counsel ignored.

Thou shalt worship the Sabbath communally, with thy family, and not seek solitary pleasures when thou knowest a member of the family into social and spiritual isolation when they should be most together.

Thou shalt instill no fears into thy child, but rather impress upon him that love casteth out fear; and that he who commits no wrongs because of fear is merely weak, whereas he who

U.S. Taxes
Are Heavy
Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

Perhaps it may come as a surprise, but Americans are more heavily taxed than their Canadian neighbors.

This information has been disclosed by a U. S. research organization called the Common Clearing House.

Here is part of the report: "Assuming a he takes the standard deduction and files a joint return, a married American with two children under 16 will have to pay $260 in 1960 federal income taxes at the $5,000 income level. His counterpart in Canada will have to pay only $305.

"At the $10,000 income level, the U.S. taxpayer with a wife and two children under 16 will pay $1,114, compared to the Canadian's payment of $987."

The research group, which studies tax and business for Americans is aware the Canadian dollar is worth approximately 93 cents to the United States dollar. Its study, it is presumed, took this fact into account.

Woman Driver Speaks Up

Letter to Windsor Star

Maybe you could explain to me where Mr. Jean Pompidou gets the idea that all women drivers are traffic hazards. I'm 25 years old and have been driving for almost ten years now and haven't seen a woman driver cause an accident yet — but I have seen quite a few men.

I am not all tensed up when driving myself and have been quite often when a passenger in some man's car.

I often jump in the car and go for a ride just to get out of the house and relax a little. I know I can drive as well and even better than some men. If he thinks women drivers should hot - rod around like some of these little boys do when they are out in Daddy's car, then he is crazy. Most times you'll find a child or two in our cars. However, I will admit that once in a while the devil gets in me and I do drag a punk or two and hot-rod down Tecumseh Rd.

I can cut in and out of traffic as well as the next guy too, usually finding some old man trying up the traffic by driving down the middle of a two-lane street.

If it's racing Mr. Pompidou wants I'll gladly give him a go around the track out at Chesher Flag providing he supplies the cars. I went to Montreal on the weekend in May and made it in 5½ hours. I drove all way, stopping only four times.

In all my years of driving I have yet to see a lady driver in an accident or cause one, including myself. How often do you see a woman's name in the paper for impaired driving, drunk driving, or driving while their license is under suspension? The last drivers I know, again including myself, all have perfect driving records.

One of the lighter moments of the meeting of President Johnson and Prime Minister Wilson was the two leaders' choice of tossed quips and counter-quips at each other during a luncheon.

The President began with a change in his opening speech when he referred to "the fact that Mr. Wilson had been elected" his government from the American bombing raids in Viet Nam.

Quoth the knowledgeable Lyndon: "Sir Henry Wotton in his day described an ambassador as 'my good associates by whose side and leading I have walked.'

"Someone suggested, Mr. Prime Minister, that I begin by say saying 'my good diassociates.'"

The President then made reference to the occasion during the War of 1812 when the arrival of British troops in Washington forced President Madison to flee from the White House.

Commenting on Madison's lack of transportation, the President added that such a thing might not have come to pass had

...This has been said a hundred times before, but it must be repeated time and time again until these myths are dispelled. With the support of China and the backing of the Soviet Union, Ho Chi-minh does not want to end the war. He wants to win it. He is not only a nationalist leader of his people, he is a convinced communist of a radical kind. He is determined to see the process of building a classless society all over the world.

there been a meeting between Madison and the then British Prime Minister, the Earl of Liverpool.

Mr. Wilson commented, "I am touched that you should quote the Presidents of Yesteryear. I, who was described as 'the wisest fool in Christendom.'

"I had hoped you had yet assigned to that particular title," said the Prime Minister.

"As for the reference to the Earl of Liverpool, he was described by Disraeli, one of my most distinguished predecessors, as 'an arch mediocrity in a cabinet of nonentities.'

"That is why I am glad that you, Mr. President, selected for your theme the words of both Wotton and Liverpool and chose not to address my colleagues and myself as "dissociates"."

Since Mr. Wilson is a professor of economics, it is little short of amazing that he would have such an intimate knowledge of history and politics as the ravings of the quotes about James I and the Earl of Liverpool on the spot.

planned against either workers who obeyed Thursday's return-to-work legislation or those who held out in rebellious groups.

Mr. Goldenberg met with Labor Minister Nicholson in Ottawa Tuesday to discuss plans for his mediation effort. Following the meeting, he said he hoped to begin negotiations with the unions and the railways later this week or early next week.

Mr. Goldenberg said: "I'm confident that if I receive the full co-operation of all involved we will be successful in avoiding arbitration."

Difficulties were expected to continue with the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers whose national president has ordered a work-to-rule slowdown. However, none of the unions involved in the dispute have announced support for its slowdown action.

REBELLION DWINDLES

Mike Rygus, Canadian leader of the International Association of Machinists, said in Ottawa Monday that about 2,000 of his men in different centres were determined not to return. However, the rebellion continued to dwindle despite his announcement.

CPR employees at Fort William, Ont., and Brandon, Man., the only CPR workers besides those in Nova Scotia on strike against the railway early Tuesday, voted to return to work later in the day.

CNR shop-craft leaders held a series of meetings in Montreal Tuesday, plus 1,200 workers' area off the job during the day shift at the railway's Pointe St. Charles repair shops to go back to work.

It was expected that the remaining pocket of resistance in Winnipeg would give up and return to work when news of voting in other centres reached workers in that city.

About 98,000 of the 218,000 rail workers who went on strike Aug. 28 were employees not directly involved in the actual running of trains. This group included the shop-craft workers, the CBRT and a large residual group. They made an average wage of $2.22 when they went on strike.

France to Stop Paying Share Of NATO Costs

PARIS (Reuters)—France today informed its Atlantic allies it will stop paying its share of the costs of the NATO infrastructure as of 1967.

Pierre de Leuse, permanent French representative to the NATO council, said France also intends to end, as of that date, its financial contribution to most of the alliance's military budgets.

So far France's share of the infrastructure cost has been about 17 per cent of the total of about $600,000,000.

The infrastructure includes airfields, communications facilities, oil pipelines and navy bases.

The decision announced by Louise Armand, completion July 1 of France's withdrawal from NATO integrated commands.

Kinsmen and Kinette Clubs Install Officers For the Coming Term

The Kinsmen Club opened their fall term at the Shrine Club on Tuesday evening and had as their guests the members of the Kinette Club and it was the occasion of the installation of officers of both clubs. This function was performed by Paul Russell, immediate past president of the Kinsmen Club and now Deputy Governor for District 4. A delicious chicken dinner was served by the Stewards of the Shrine Club Mr. and Mrs. Len Martin and a distinct flair was noticed when each member of the Kinette Club wore a beautiful corsage, a gift from the men's club.

Paul Russell in turning over the reins of government of the club to William Lafferty, who received a President's pin, thanked the members for their co-operation and hard work during the past term and asked that the same courtesy be shown to his successor. Mr. Lafferty in accepting the gavel of authority hoped that the Club would continue to prosper and be a force for good in the community. A feature of the meeting was a presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Martin on the occasion of their 36th wedding anniversary. The couple were taken completely by surprise but graciously thanked the Club for the splendid gift.

Mr. Russell in his capacity as installing officer issued instructions to all those who had acquired office. The officers of the Kinettes Club are immediate past president, Paul Russell, president, William Lafferty, vice president, John Lord, secretary, Don Larsen, treasurer, Don Beaton, directors, Roly Belanger, Ernest Johnson, Norman Burroughs and registrar, Lionel Bailey. Those installed for the Kinette Club were immediate past president Marlene Parks, president, Mary Atkinson for a second term, secretary Barb Christie, treasurer, Deanna Canning, directors, Lois Akey, Betty Fralick and registrar, Jackie Botley.

ATTENDANCE PINS GIVEN

Attendance pins were then distributed by the chairman and Don Thomas, a past president of the Club received his pin for 20 years of perfect attendance while Don Larsen was given one for one year, Jack Canning for two years, Paul Russell and Bill Andrews for three years, while Sylvia Larsen, Jackie Botley of the Kinette Club got one for one year, Barbara Christie and Deanna Canning, Betty Fralick Rosemary Russell and Lois Akey for three years and Mary Atkinson or ten years of perfect attendance. Mrs. Atkinson was presented with a gift from the club by Betty Fralick.

The sergeant-at-arms for the night was Don Thomas and he collected a tidy sum. The song leaders were Roly Belanger, Murray Atkinson, Barry Fralick, Chris Akey while Jimmy Corradi a charter member of the club, presided at the piano in his usual capable manner. At the close of installation a short business meeting was held and all the reports showed the club in a sound condition and all committees actively engaged in community work. Bill Andrews presented a beautiful plaque to the retiring director Paul Russell, for his work on behalf of Kinship in his own Club and in the district. After adjournment of the meeting the members of both clubs enjoyed a social hour of dancing.

This plan will do everything to get your youngster a college degree except pass his exams for him

You can't guarantee that a youngster now in high school will get his college degree. But you can guarantee that he will get the chance to try.

That's the essence of the Bank of Montreal University Education Programme—a comprehensive savings-loan plan that enables you to spread the cost of a university education over periods up to nine years.

You start payments when your boy or girl is still in high school and make the final payment a year after graduation. From the first deposit, the special life insurance feature guarantees that his or her education costs will be covered.

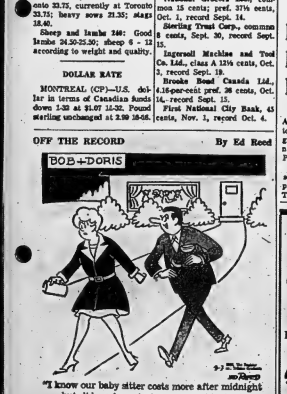
Your low monthly payments include interest charges totalling a small fraction of what you would pay on any straight loan programme.

This is a flexible programme...adaptable to individual education costs and payable over a varying number of years.

If you have a youngster in the first two or three years of high school now is the time to start. Drop into your neighbourhood branch of the Bank of Montreal and let us fit the plan to your needs.

Then convince your youngster the rest is up to him!

• • •



PS: If you need help financing a student already in university—or planning to register this year—talk to your B of M Manager. Chances are he can arrange a tuition loan with extended payments adapted to your circumstances. Or, if your youngster qualifies for a loan under the Canada Student Loans Plan, send him to see the B of M.

Vibrant Color Striking Feature of Spring Clothes

By LINDA CRAWFORD

MONTREAL (CP) — Vibrant color was the most striking feature of the resort and spring wear collection previewed here Tuesday by Joset of Montreal.

Few pastel shades were found in the assortment of warm weather casuals fashioned in pure silks and novel synthetics.

Dresses were simple basics with a few interesting details. Cut - outs, tunic tops, halter necks, flounced skirts and op-art patterns were plentiful and the natural waistline was often suggested.

Some hemlines were irregular, ending in points, and most fell just above the knee.

Sharkskin was used for sailoral - toned shorts, slacks and mini-skirt sets that looked like one-piece ensembles.

MIDRIFF CAGED

The bottom of the top piece and the top of the bottom piece were both trimmed with green lacings but gave a caged midriff effect.

Bikinis repeated a symetrical detailing, a variation of the one-shoulder look, with the wide strap and one shoe-string strap.

Multi - screened sroet-jersey prints were vivid and particularly adapted to travel.

A pink dress in Swiss cotton had long sleeves slit on top from the shoulder to the wrist and trimmed with a contrasting color.

Family Life May Be At Fault

EDMONTON (CP)—If Johnny has high intelligence but makes poor marks at school, his family life may be at fault.

To prevent him from becoming a school dropout in Grade 9 or 10, both he and his family may need help.

The public school board and Family Services Association of Edmonton have joined forces in a pilot project to try to keep Johnny in school.

About 30 families are to be counselled by the FSA while another 30 in the project will not receive special help. All sixty levels involved are to be in Grades 4 to 6.

Children who have been getting poor school marks, have been late or away from school too often without good reason or who are too old chronologically for their grade will be included in the study.

"This is the type of child who too often later drops out of school," says the FSA's Don Storch. "They aren't bad kids and they don't come from bad families."

The project will try to determine the factors that make school dropouts.

"If a student's marks pick up or his attendance record improves, we'll be able to see that counselling helps," Mr. Storch said.

Days before the heat has been put back on, but when it's too cool for comfort, take off the chill by partly filling the bathtub with hot water.

Don't run it too quickly or you'll be steamed out.

This idea can also be used in a motel or hotel with private bath.

FAMOUS CHUNK PICKLES

Everybody who has gone out of this house in the past two days has had a jar of crunchy chunk pickles in his hand, with the admonition from me, "They won't be properly ready to eat for six weeks."

One girl telephoned next day to say they were wonderful and all gone!

This recipe is a reasonable facsimile of a famous commercial chunk pickle and the making stretches over five days.

FAMOUS CHUNK PICKLES

6 quarts 4-inch cucumbers, Freshly Picked.
2 cups pickling salt (not iodized table salt).
16 cups cold water.
boiling water (see notes).
2 tablespoons powdered alum.
9 cups sugar (divided - see notes).
10 cups cider vinegar.
1 tablespoon celery seed.
1 tablespoon whole allspice berries.
1 tablespoon celery seed.

Be sure your cucumbers are fresh.

Wash and scrub the cucumbers in running water and cut once lengthwise and then into 1-inch chunks. In a large kettle or dishpan add to the cucumbers the pickling salt and 16 cups cold water. Mix well to dissolve salt and let stand for 12 hours or overnight.

In the morning drain. To 16 cups boiling water add the powdered alum, stir to dissolve and pour over cucumbers and let stand 12 hours. Drain and cover with another 16 cups boiling water and let stand another 12 hours.

Drain thoroughly. Boil together 6 cups sugar, the vinegar and whole spices, tied loosely in a bag with a long string attached. When boiling pour over drained cucumbers and let stand 12 hours. (Next step is done 3 times). Drain off pickling liquid. Add 1 cup sugar to it, bring to boil and pour over drained pickles. Let stand 12 hours. Repeat twice, at 12-hour intervals, until you have added the 2 remaining cups of sugar.

Finally heat pickling liquid without any more sugar. Pack cucumbers in sterile jars. (I had 16 ten-ounce jars). Remove spice bag from boiling syrup and pour syrup over to cover cucumbers and seal. These are at their best if they rest for 6 weeks before serving.

This is a good recipe for amateur pickle makers to follow.

WEDDING

McLEOD — INWOOD

The double - ring ceremony was performed in Eastminster United Church, on Saturday August 27, 1966, when Marilyn Phyllis Inwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Inwood, Belleville was united in marriage to Alexander Edward McLeod, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald McLeod, Belleville. Rev. Alexander McDowell minister of the church officiated and wedding music was provided by church organist Mrs. G. Rennie who also accompanied the soloist Miss Betty Reid in appropriate nuptial selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length gown of corded taffeta featuring a fitted bodice adorned with sequins and pearls, and long fitted sleeves. The straight skirt was highlighted with three rows of appliqued Alencon lace and a flowing train from the waist was accented with a bow at centre back. A bouffant silk illusion veil was held in place by a réseile studded with crystals and seed pearls. She carried a solitaire mauve orchid encircled with white carnations, stephanotis and ivy.

Miss Evelyn Inwood sister of the bride as maid of honor wore an indian turquoise floor-length gown of silk chiffon over taffeta in a loose fitting style featuring an Empire bodice piped with satin. The sleeveless dress was highlighted with an over the scoop neckline adorned with neck cape and lowing panels at back. She wore matching headdress with small veil and carried a fan shaped bouquet of turquoise tipped 'mums. The bridesmaids Miss Sandra Wilkens of Belleville cousin of the bride and Miss Jacqueline Cook, Belleville were dresses identically styled to the maid of honor's but in corn maize color. Each carried a bouquet of maize tipped 'mums.

Mr. Albert Farrar, Belleville was groomsman, while Mr. Morris Inwood, brother of the bride and Mr. Thomas Logan, Peterborough, cousin of the bridegroom were the ushers.

For the reception at Club Canars, Belleville, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a two-piece petal pink silk crepe dress with pink and grey lace bodice, matching accessories and a corsage of pink and white carnations. Assisting was the bridegroom's mother who wore a three - piece ensemble in powder blue silk knit, white accessories and a corsage of pink and white carnations.

Leaving on a wedding trip to Penn Hills in the Poconc Mountains of Pennsylvania the bride wore a baby silk knit suit, white accessories and a mauve orchid corsage.

Upon their return will reside in Belleville.

Ann Landers
Mother Charges Radio Plays Filthiest Songs

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Church leaders, the U.S. Supreme Court and spokesmen for civic groups are busily condemning dirty books and magazines while the radio continues to blast forth rock and roll music with the filthiest lyrics that ever fell on human ears.

Nobody seems to be doing one thing about it. Do the airwaves belong to the disc jockeys alone? What's wrong with our parents? Have they gone stone dead?

The other evening I heard a few unbelievable verses about a girl and boy who were making out in a drive-in movie when they fell asleep. The cops came and did well — you get the idea. I couldn't believe my ears so I bought the record and it was all there.

And then there's mother song called, "They're Coming To Take Me Away — Ha Ha." I don't think the record is one bit funny, especially for folks who have relatives in mental hospitals.

It's getting so I don't want to turn on the radio anymore. Our children are only 3 and 5 and I hope the always are cleaned up before they are old enough to understand some of these lyrics.

Is there something we mothers can do about this? — RED WHITE OR BLUE?

DEAR RED — You bet! You can scream like an eagle and I hope you will.

Call and write the offending radio station. Wire or write to the sponsors and tell them you're boycotting their products until they clean up the music they are paying for.

I am bored with that old line, "We must give the people what they want." There are millions of people who don't want trash and I'm for letting the people in charge know it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am not even a teen-ager yet but I have a big problem. Can you help me.

Ever since I was born I have not kissed anyone, not even my parents. Some of my friends have noticed this and asked me about it. I am very embarrassed because I don't know how to tell them. Most kids get kisses from their moms and dads but I never got any. I feel funny when an aunt or someone bends down for me to kiss them because I just can't make myself do it. We end up rubbing cheeks.

Can you explain what is the matter wih me? Is there any cure for my problem? — WORRIED GIRL.

DEAR GIRL — Some families are very demonstrative and others are not. Your parents probably kissed you when you were younger but you don't remember.

The time to "cure" the problem is now — before it becomes a serious hangup. Here is my suggestion: Start by kissing your doll good-night when you put her to bed. After a week or so, kiss your parents good-night. A cheek kiss is best since you have to ask for it. Your parents you will not feel funny when you other relatives kiss you.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ALL KIND-HEARTED EMPLOYERS WHO OFFERED TO HIRE MEN WITH PRISON RECORDS — Will you please send me your name and addres and the name of your firm? There are many ex-convicts who desperately need jobs. You can help restore these men to responsibility and usefullness.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Rail Bill

abandonment of uneconomic railway branch lines and the new commission or superboard to run all forms of transportation.

Besides setting up the new board, one of the bill's key steps would be to end a freeze on most rail freight rates. Subsidies now paid the railways also would be pared down through the years.

The idea is to let the railways cut some money-losing branch operations and generally put them into risk-or-swim competition with other shippers.

TOSS TO WOLVES?

But Jack Horner (PC—Acadia) said the net result would be to throw the West and the Maritimes "to the wolves."

Railways now had to keep rates competitive where other forms of shipping were available. Without rate freezes, they would raise the tab only where there were captive shippers who had no recourse to other forms of transport.

H. Russell MacEwan (PC—Pictou) said the bill would continue a freeze on Maritime rail freight rates for two years pending a study.

But what would happen then? He sought a guarantee that there would be no change in Maritime province rates without consulting Parliament.

Michael Forrestall (PC—Halifax), Robert C. Coates (PC—Cumberland) and Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax) also expressed worries about the bill's effects on the Maritimes. Mr. Forrestall said businessmen will suffer unless the government clears up uncertainty about what is to happen after the two-year study period. Mr. Coates said the government should consider steps to extend low transportation rates to include road, air and pipeline transport.

COSTS HIGHER

Mr. McCleave said transport costs for manufacturers in Nova Scotia are 25 per cent higher than for manufacturers in central Canada. The government should consider a high-speed rail line cutting diagonally across New Brunswick to aid Maritime shippers.

The bill also did not come to grips with the problems posed to Maritime ports by winter shipping on the St. Lawrence River, growing each season. He suggested equalization of shipping costs in St. Lawrence and Maritime ports.

Edward Nasserden (PC—Rosthern) and Lawrence E. Kindt (PC—Macleod) both expressed worry about abandonment of lines and possible freight rate increases for the West.

Rates through the Crowsnest Pass to the west coast were viewed in the West as "part of the Magna Carta of Confederation (itself)" Mr. Nasserden said. Any change would meet a flood of criticism.

Mr. Pickersgill said the government had no intention of changing the Crowsnest rail freight rates or allowing anyone else to do so.

Mr. Kindt said the proposed transport commission, we'n't have the staff to do the accounting to figure out which lines the railways should be allowed to abandon. No one on the Prairies would accept any figure put forward by the CPR.

Faced with a batch of figures, the commissioners wouldn't know what to do. "And they'll guess in the end on rail line abandonment," he said.

Gerald W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River) said the bill should tell the new commission to take regional factors into account in reaching decisions.

Proposed research facilities for the commission would probably result in all commission members having similar opinions, he said. The federal and provincial governments should finance a private institute and also retain their own in order to have a variety of suggestions on the handling of railway matters.

Deane Gundlock (PC—Lethbridge) said Conservatives would have to oppose the bill on second reading because the government hadn't accepted the suggestion to send it to committee first for detailed study.

H. W. Herridge (NDP—Kootenay West) said the railways should not be allowed to stop passenger service on a line while continuing to run profitable freight operations over the same tracks. He said this was happening on the CPR's Kettle Valley line in British Columbia.

Robert Prittie (PC—Dauphin-Roblin-Richmond) said the government would wind up with a more effective and efficient rail system if it nationalized the CPR.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

"If you cannot say anything good about the Yankees, start talking. If you know anything good about the Mets let's have it as quickly as possible."

That was part of a conversation piece I overheard while zooming to New York aboard an Air Canada Vanguard scuttling along at 360 mph 14,000 feet closer to heaven.

The conversationalists were two handsome young colored chaps garbed in ultra-modern habiliments who were my seat-mates in one of the smidgkips triple rows.

They spoke Puerto Rican with a Brooklyn accent. There must have been a chip of the blarney stone in the Irish stew the pretty stewardess luncheoned us with, for one quipped, "The fall of the Yankees has been the greatest decline since Mrs. Ginsberg's daughtaress dropped at the annual clam-bake."

The other chap appeared to be a more serious type. "The fall of the Yankees," he said solemnly "has been one of sports greatest tragedies. . ."

"Tragedies or suicides?" interjected his buddy.

"Call it what you will," said his friend. "The Yankees as a whole were divided into two camps — the playboys and the serious-minded players. And mind you this sometimes run to extremes."

"It seemed to me," said the other, "that the club resented authority. They rebelled inwardly perhaps against managerial government. Look at Berra. And now the man they wanted is gone."

"Granted that, to a certain extent," said his friend. "But injuries and circumstances also played parts in the club's decline."

He waved a hand to ward off interruption. "Admittedly," he said, "the Yankees look bad enough with Bobby Richardson in there, but what they will look like next year without him sends chills down Yankee fans' spines."

The plane's P.A. system crackled. "Fasten your seat belts and please put cigarets, we're coming into Kennedy Airport for landing."

The good-looking youngster was right. Bobby Richardson will retire from professional baseball at the tender chronological age of 31 next Saturday. The "Little Southern Gentleman" as he is called will announce his retirement at a special "Bobby Richardson Day."

How many athletes — or anyone for that matter — would give up $45,000 a year at 31 for the sake of an ideal?

Richardson was one of the Yankees' minority who did not believe in the high life. He is a religious man who believes the Lord put him on this earth to do good. He has dedicated himself to youth work.

Since his maturity Bobby has been a leader in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, an organization that guides youngsters along the right path of life. He is an ardent YMCA worker.

He is passing up the glamor and glitter of professional baseball to represent an insurance company down around his home in Sumter, South Carolina.

True to his Christian ideals Bobby is a man of his word. He announced his retirement last spring when Tony Kubek said he was quitting but on reconsideration told Manager Ralph Houk he would stay another year.

"I was ready to retire until I knew that Tony's health would force him to quit. So I stayed on this one for another year." To the credit of Houk he did not put pressure on Richardson to remain with the club.

Richardson has hit less than 40 homers during his ten year career with his best production year being in 1962 when he connected for eight. Still Bobby remembers the 1960 series when he batted in 12 runs against the Pirates including six in one game when he smashed out a grand-slammer and a single.

Shannonville South Hastings Champions

Shannonville swept a pair of South Hastings Baseball League playoff games on the holiday weekend to capture the championship, four games to two, over Latta.

Dave Lewis was the winners' pitching hero. He threw nine innings to take a 4-3 victory Sunday afternoon and came right back on Monday to hurt an 11-inning 8-7 win.

In Monday's deciding battle, the clubs were scoreless until Bob Detlor's homer put Shannonville ahead in the top of the eighth. Latta tied it in their half and each club scored twice in the ninth, sending the game into extra innings tied 6-4.

Shannonville struck for four runs in the 11th but Latta ripped back in a last-ditch effort, cutting the margin to 8-7 on Larry Mavety's three - run homer.

Won't Waive, Francis ★★★★★ ★★★★★ Appeal To Campbell

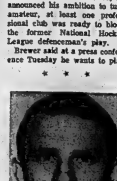
Blues Ready To Block Brewer Move

TORONTO (CP) — Less than 24 hours after Carl Brewer, 27, announced his ambition to turn amateur, at least one professional club was ready to block the former National Hockey League defenceman's play.

Brewer said at a press conference Tuesday he wants to play for Canada's national hockey team this season. Shortly after, Emile Francis, general manager of New York Rangers, announced reservations about allowing Brewer to be reinstated as an amateur.

"We have been trying to get Brewer for the past year," Francis said.

"I can't see us waiving him out of the league."



And Brewer said later in the day that a meeting with his former coach, Punch Imlach of Toronto Maple Leafs, hadn't been worthwhile.

"He Imlach asked me if I was trying to make more trouble," Brewer said.

Brewer said his next move will be to appeal to NHL president Clarence Campbell.

RETURNED TO COLLEGE

The former all - star defenceman left the Leafs' training camp in Peterborough last September and returned to university. Later he was suspended by the Leafs, but Imlach placed him on the NHL's inactive list, making it impossible for Canada's national hockey team this season.

CARL BREWER

for another league club to draft him.

In the event that he is waived out of the NHL, Brewer still must be reinstated as an amateur by both the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the International Ice Hockey Federation. But release by Toronto and waivers by the 11 other NHL clubs must precede reinstatement.

There is one other obstacle which Brewer would have to overcome if he were to play for Canada in the world hockey championships at Vienna next March. The defenceman, whose 177 minutes in penalties was tops in the NHL during the 1964-65 season, would have to adopt to the watered-down international amateur rules that reduce body-contact play.

Brewer joined the Leafs from Toronto Marlboros of the OHA Junior A at the beginning of the 1958-59 season.

He made the Leafs from Toronto Marlboros of the OHA Junior A at the beginning of the 1958-59 season.

He made the league's second all-star team in 1961-62 and was voted to the first all-star team in 1962-63. He scored 19 goals during his seven seasons with the Leafs, but piled up 131 assists.

Rev. David Bauer, adviser to the national team, announced at the press conference that Danny O'Shea, star forward with Oshawa Generals of the OHA Junior A series, has accepted an invitation to play for the nationals.

O'Shea said he was proud to accept the invitation, adding that he had not consulted Montreal Canadiens of the NHL, who hold his pro rights.

Yearlings Bring $228,000

TORONTO (CP)—Three yearlings sired by Nearctic brought a total of $42,200 at the 22rd annual yearling sales of the Canadian Thoroughbred Society Tuesday night.

Nearctic was the sire of Northern Dancer, winner in 1964 of the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and Canada's Queen's Plate. He was retired to stud last year.

Cons S mythe of Toronto bought two of the Nearctic yearlings. He paid $17,500 for a Nearctic—Campaign colt, consigned by Mrs. Vernon Cardy of Montreal, and $10,000 for a chestnut filly consigned by Don McClelland of King, Ont.

Sixty - four yearlings were sold for a gross of $228,000 at the two-day auction which attracted about 1,400 buyers.

McClelland sold two other yearlings, a bay colt to Mrs. M. J. Boyles, Toronto, for $13,000 and a filly to Jack Carlton, Toronto, for $8,000 to realize $31,000 for the three sales.

Frank Sherman of Hamilton paid $15,000 for a chestnut filly, also sired by Nearctic and consigned by Doug Banks of Nashville, Ont.

Shirley May Cerullo of Depew, N.Y. paid $14,000 for a dark bay colt consigned by Ontario's Woodglen Farms.

Bow Out To Oshawa

Bobcats Drop 4-3 Thriller

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Reporter

Clair Leahy and the Bobcats controlled Oshawa Gales' sluggers here last night but they couldn't cope with infield hits.

Scratch safeties and infield errors gave Oshawa a tight 4-3 nod over the Belleville squad. Oshawa won the Ontario Senior "B" series in consecutive games.

The Tabbies trailed 1-0 from the first until they tied it on an unearned marker in the fifth.

Davis poked a one-out single to left in the eighth. Young beat out an infield tap and the lead runner scored on Rowbotty ball. MacDermaid slashed a hard shot back toward the box, off Leahy's glove, to drive in the run.

Oshawa appeared to put the game in wraps with two unearned markers in the top of the ninth. A missed strikeout after a walk, an error on Leahy's ground ball and a low throw to the plate opened up the 4-1 score.

The Bobcats, held to one hit for the first eight frames, battled back in the ninth. Mewes singled off White's glove and D. LeSage beat out a tap down first after one was out. White's lineup single to short and an error on the same play plated a run.

With two on and one out, Brown batted for Leahy and Oshawa countered with pitching ace Ron Taylor. Brown blooped for a single just over second, cutting the lead to 4-3, and putting runners on second and third. Taylor struck out Locke swinging and T. LeSage fouling to end it.

Belleville played superb ball afield until the ninth, sparked by Len Mowat, Rick Locke and Terry LeSage, while the winners gave pitcher Reg White little support. White allowed only John McKibbon's sixth - frame double until the ninth. He struck out 11 and walked one. Pociak singled and scored on Young's double for the winners' initial run.

An error helped tie it in the fifth. Don LeSage advanced as White grounded out, stole third and scored home on Leahy's ground out.

Leahy gave up eight hits in all, fanning three and walking three.

For the winners, Bob Young had a double and single and Jack MacDermaid two singles. Joe Plontek, Ralph David, Lloyd Mapes and Doug Cole split the others.

John McKibbon's double and last - frame singles by "Weiner" Brown, Jim Whyte, Don LeSage and Paul Merow bulk the Bobcat total.

U.S. National Tennis Seeded Favorites Fall

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP)—Australia's Roy Emerson and the chief U.S. hope, Dennis Ralston, moved into the fourth round Tuesday through a wave of upsets that felled Arthur Ashe and two other seeded favorites in the U.S. national tennis championships.

Ashe, the Negro youngster from Richmond, Va., who has been rated the top prospect of American tennis, showed a rustiness after six weeks in army reserve camp and went down before Australia's John Newcombe 6-2, 6-3, 6-4.

Joining the fifth-seeded Ashe on the sidelines were Australia's fourth - seeded Tony Roche, beaten by the sensational young Briton, Mark Cox, 10-8, 6-4, 7-5, and Cliff Drysdale of South Africa, runner-up to Manuel Santana of Spain last year and seeded sixth, a victim of young Bill Bowrey of Australia 6-1, 8-6, 8-4.

All other favorites survived into the round in which 16 remain in each division.

In the women's division, all seeded players won as the bracket was completed to the third round.

Winners included the second-seeded Maria Bueno of Brazil, who crushed Lynne Abbey of Orinda, Calif., 6-3, 6-3; fourth-seeded Francois Durr of France, winner over Mrs. Carol Aucamp of St. Louis 6-1, 6-3; fifth-seeded Rosemary Casals of San Francisco, who eliminated Patti Hogan of La Jolla, Calif., 6-1, 6-1.

Vickie Berner of Vancouver defeated Raymonde Jones of Annandale, Va., 6-0, 7-5 to gain the third round.

TRADE PLAYER

NEW YORK (AP)—Flanker-end Jim Colclough, acquired by New York Jets from Boston in a trade for quarterback John Huarte last year, was traded back to the Patriot Tuesday for a high draft choice next year. Colclough, 29, had been the third man at tight end and flanker for the Jets but had been used only sparingly in the American Football League's club's exhibition games.

Didn't Like Our Game

NEW YORK (CP)—Sherman Lewis, whose brief professional career consists of 13 games in the Canadian Football League, has some unhappy memories of the Canadian game.

Lewis, who carries 158 pounds on a five-foot-nine frame, will trot out as a defensive back and kickoff-return specialist when New York Jets open their American Football League season in Miami Friday.

A mighty mite when playing for Michigan State, Lewis played the 1964 season with lastplace Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Conference. In 1965 he played one game for Argos and was dealt to Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Western Conference, where he played one game before being injured.

"I didn't particularly care for the game up there," he said.

'IT'S NOT FIRST CLASS'

"It's not as good a game as American football. It's not real first-class ball, which isn't saying much for myself. But I had to get out."

In 1964, for Argos, Lewis played in 11 games and scored one touchdown, on a pass. He carried 36 times for 277 yards with a 8.3-yard average. His longest gain was 23 yards.

However, he fielded 26 of the 30 passes thrown to him for a completion average of 86.7-percent, gaining 319 yards for an average of 12 yards. He ran back 14 kickoffs for 280 yards and fumbled three times.

In the lone game he played with Saskatchewan, he carried once for 14 yards and caught the only pass thrown at him for a two-yard gain before he suffered a knee injury which put him out for the 1965 season.

TROUBLED BY SIZE

Lewis, a two-way man in his senior year with Michigan, went to Canada because he wanted to play on offence and U.S. teams couldn't use him in that capacity because of his size.

Now he seems to be reconciled.

"I'd be better off if I was six-foot-one, but my speed and quickness can make up for a lot I don't have in size."

Lewis, who wore No. 16 jersey with Argos, will wear No. 7 for Jets—an unusual number for a defensive backfielder.

One Jet official explained it this way:

"Lewis got No. 7 because a double number won't fit across his chest."

MOVES RACE

SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — The Automobile Racing Club of Florida announced Tuesday it is moving its annual 12-hour Grand Prix of endurance sports car race from Sebring to Palm Beach. The club said the move, after 15 years at Sebring, was dictated by expanding industrial development at Sebring Airport, site of the road race, plus increased attendance that overflows housing, eating and spectator facilities.

Kansas City Athletics wasted no time getting down to the business of youngsters, but the lessons were given by a couple of old timers with California Angels.

The Athletics used a record number of players Tuesday, many of them just having completed their minor - league seasons. But timely hits by veterans Joe Adcock and Jimmy Piersall won the game for California, 4-3.

Adcock tripled in two runs and Piersall doubled across two more, all in the first inning and that was all the Angels needed. Starter Fred Newman gave up the three Kansas City runs in the second, but Clyde Wright and Bob Lee shut out the Athletics the rest of the way.

In all, the Athletics used 24 players, tying an American League record for a nine-inning game.

Among the six Kansas City pitchers used was Vern Handrahan of Charleston, who lasted 1 1-3 innings without allowing a hit or a run, but walked two.

ORIOLES BEAT YANKEES

In other American League games, Baltimore Orioles beat New York Yankees 4-1, Detroit Tigers crushed Washington Senators 8-2, Cleveland Indians bumped Boston Red Sox 6-2 and Minnesota Twins edged Chicago White Sox 4-3 in 12 innings.

Dave Johnson, normally thought of as a glove man in the midst of the potent Baltimore attack, continued his hitting ways with three hits and two runs batted in. Dave McNally stopped the Yanks on just six hits.

Denny McLain continued his return to form after his post-All Star Game slump and picked up his 18th victory. Don Wert and Bill Freehan each drove in three runs, both hitting two-run homers.

Gary Bell threw a three-hitter at Boston and Max Alvis and Chico Salmon each drove in two runs for Cleveland. It was Bell's 14th victory against 11 losses. Rocky Colavito broke out of a batting slump with his 29th homer and George Scott hit his 27th for the Sox.

Harmon Killebrew homered twice for the Twins, his second time in the ninth tying the game, but the winning blow came from Rich Rollins, a run-scoring sinstle in the 12th. It drove in Jimmie Hall who had walked, and moved to second when Cesar Tovar also drew a pass.

Petes Add Four Players

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Peterborough of the Ontario Lacrosse Association has added four players to its roster for the Mann Cup series which opens here Saturday night.

Peterborough, Eastern Canadian champions in the best-of-seven series for the Canadian Senior A lacrosse championship, added Burns Rogers of Toronto Maple Leafs, Ken Crawford of Brooklin Redmen and Don Arrowsmith and Bill Cashdor of Brampton Excelsiors.

Peterborough will meet the winner of a best-of-seven series between Vancouver and Coquitlam which Vancouver leads 3-2 with the sixth game scheduled for tonight.

Canadiens are stashing their marks on major league baseball.

Four Canadiens played in Tuesday night's National League action and two of them came through with impressive victories.

Ferguson Jenkins of Chicago Cubs, allowed only three hits over 8 1-3 innings to lead Chicago Cubs to a 7-2 victory over Philadelphia Phillies, while Dennis Ribant of Burlington, Ont., spun a six hitter at Cincinnati Reds to give New York Mets a 3-2 decision.

Ribant's record is now 11-6, while Jenkins's is 5-7.

Meanwhile, Ron Taylor of Toronto pitched two innings of relief for Houston and Claude Raymond of St., Jean, Que., worked the final inning in the Astros 4-3 victory over St. Louis Cardinals.

Ray Sadecki pitched a three-hit shutout, leading San Francisco Giants to a 4-0 victory over Los Angeles Dodgers and Atlanta Braves beat Pittsburgh Pirates 4-1 in other action.

TIED FOR SECOND

The Giants' victory boosted them into a virtual tie for second place with the Dodgers, 1½ games behind the League-leading Pirates.

Sadecki pitched perfect ball against the Dodgers for four innings, did not issue a walk and was never in trouble while improving his season record to 5-7.

The Giants raked loser Don Drysdale and two successors for 16 hits, including a two-run homer by Willie Mays and a three-run double by Tito Fuentes.

After Joe Torre's three-run hit sent Atlanta ahead, manager Harry Walker lost another strategy match in the Pirates' eighth.

SWITCH PITCHERS

Ribant retired the first 16 batters he faced. Ken Boyer's two-run single capped a three-run burst in the first inning for New York.

John Bateman rapped four straight hits and the Astros capitalized on St. Louis errors for two runs in the second inning and two more in the seventh.

Jenkins gave way to Bob Hendley in the ninth, while Billy Williams' 27th homer and three hits by Don Kessinger led the Cubs' attack.

Bauer Says Orr Had No Choice

TORONTO (CP)—Rev. David Bauer, adviser to Canada's national hockey team, says he's relieved Bobby Orr has decided to play professional hockey.

Orr, 18-year-old defenceman who signed a pro contract with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, had considered playing for Canada's national team.

"I was relieved when Bobby turned professional.

"This may seem strange but nevertheless, all of us would have to agree Bobby had no choice. This boy will become one of the great hockey players ever developed. Some day the opportunity will return to him to play for his native country."

A native of Parry Sound, Orr played for Oshawa Generals of the Ontario Hockey Association's Junior A series where he established records as the star's highest scoring defenceman.

THE ARNOLD Palmer Method — by GOLF'S 4-TIME MASTERS WINNER

A GOOD WAY TO LOOSEN GOLF MUSCLES

Though it's always wise to use a few practice shots before a round of golf, the opportunity to do so does not always exist. When you find yourself in a position that you have to tee it up "cold" at the start of a round, I suggest you follow a simple loosening up procedure.

Merely take two or three clubs in hand and slowly begin swinging them back and forth-take it easy at first to avoid straining stiff muscles. Gradually increase the length and tempo of your swing until you are stretching your golf muscles to their fullest extent.

The drill, which is similar to the routine baseball players follow before batting, will make your driver seem much lighter than a normal when you start using the first club. Your muscles will be loose and flexible, ready to give you your best swing right from the start.

Fewer fishermen and better catches.

That seemed to be the angle of angling in Northern Ontario during the last week when cooler weather settled in.

The department of lands and forests, in its weekly report on Ontario fishing, says angling pressure on several lakes dropped considerably because of cold weather.

But there were several good catches, including two pickerel, weighing 10 and 12 pounds, taken from Sand Lake in the Kenora district.

Reports from 11 of the department's 22 districts:

Jim Young Survives Viking Cut

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Archie Sutton, once counted upon this summer to fill the regular offensive right tackle position this season for Minnesota Vikings, was placed on waivers Tuesday by the National Football League club.

The Vikings also put rookies Ron Acks, a defensive back, and Joe Novogratz, a linebacker, on waivers to get down to the NFL season opening roster limit of 40 players.

Jim Young, 23, a halfback who for three years starred with Queen's University, Kingston, survived the cut.

Young, from Hamilton, Ont., was for three years rated the best halfback in Canadian college ball.

Canadian football executives —especially those of Toronto Argonauts, who hold his Canadian playing rights — were watching the Viking situation closely. Argos are reported to have spurned all trade offers for Young, their top draft choice after the 1964 college season.

Johnny Mowatt Successful As Coach

Remember Johnny Mowatt who used to thrust form the knifeside around these parts before senior and junior baseball went into the deep freeze?

Johnny was a baseball rarity during his sojourn here.

He was the only player who celebrated his 21st birthday four years in a row.

Mowatt resides in Perth where he has been actively associated with baseball since moving there. He has had considerable success especially with minor teams.

Last year he took a juvenile team to the OBA finals missing out in the title series.

He kept the club intact and this year has brought them to the Juvenile "B" Ontario finals.

The Perth juveniles almost Stoney Creek on Saturday 2 p.m. on the latter's diamond in a sudden - death battle for the championship.

The winner will enter the all-Ontario championship series.

Schmeling Louis Meet Again

HAMBURG, Germany. (AP)—Joe Louis and Max Schmeling, who once mauled each other in the ring, hold a friendly reunion Tuesday in this German city.

The meeting was their first on German soil although they have met in the United States since their last fight in 1938. The reunion was arranged by a West German newspaper.

Louis is in Germany for Saturday night's heavyweight title fight between Cassius Clay and Karl Mildenberger, the first German challenger since Schmeling.

Schmeling knocked Louis out in the 12th round of a non-title fight in 1936, but was flattened by Louis in the first round of a championship fight two years later.

Now 60, Schmeling operates three soft-drink plants.

Bermuda Like 11th Province To Its Hundreds of Canadians

By NICK PILLMORE
Canadian Press Correspondent

HAMILTON, Bermuda (CP)—To more than 1,200 Canadians working on these semi-tropical islands, Bermuda seems like an 11th province.

The 350-year-old British colony—famous for its pink-tinted beaches, pleasant climate and lots of sunshine—has become a home-away-from-home for hundreds of Canadians working in every kind of Bermudian business from the travel industry to nursing.

"Bermuda sort of grows on you," says 32 - year - old Kees Stolk, formerly of Oshawa, Ont. "There's a friendly atmosphere and no real pressure from your job as there often is in Canada. The climate is great and the locals like to have you. Sure, when we came to Bermuda in October to work for an accounting firm, hasn't decided when he will go back to Canada. "We just live from day to day down here. I'm enjoying it so much to leave for at least a few months."

Many Canadians, like Joyce Fisher, 28, first find their way to Bermuda on vacation.

"That was four years ago," recalls Mrs. Fisher, now married to a Bermudian working in the painting business. A daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Catney, of Hamilton, Ont., she met her husband during her vacation. Now she is a secretary for the Bermuda Telephone Company.

Canadians normally have no trouble immigrating to Bermuda, provided they have employment in the many insurance or trusts corporation to Canada. They account for about 20 per cent of foreigners employed here, as do Americans. The rest are Europeans, Portuguese and West Indians.

CANADIANS WELCOME

The tourist industry provides about 30 per cent of the islands' income, so many Canadians are employed with hotels, travel agencies, and local trasportation. Each of the islands' four largest hotels employs more than 20 Canadians.

Sedate and Elegant Lady in Daytime Yorkville Becomes Wild Woman at Night

By VOLKMAR RICHTER

TORONTO (CP) — Yorkville Village, the range of one of the most persistent headaches in years for city officials here, is a schizophrenic female.

During the daytime she is a sedate and elegant lady—a vendor of oil paintings and antiques, of expensive dresses and African curios. She caters to the sophisticated carriage trade from many small boutiques and shops.

But at night, she's an unfinished woman. With hair let down and the latest Mod-style dress, she entertains the younger sophisticates to the crisp sound of electric guitars and the insistent beat of drums.

This is a part of Toronto that the keen-eyed have grasped as their own. They gather in the evenings and far into the night in the hundreds—atmosphere of the coffee-houses and discotheques that self - consciously emulated the downtown nightclubs.

On weekend nights Yorkville assumes a carnival atmosphere as upwards of 3,000 persons at a time may be strolling through the small area—a two-block section of two parallel streets situated just off fashionable Bloor Street between Bay Street and Avenue Road in midtown Toronto.

YOUNGSTERS MOVED IN

The village started its existence as a quiet area of specialty boutiques and coffee-houses in which people could partake in a European atmosphere to play chess and just talk. Some places added entertainment such as folk-singing.

Then the village grew rapidly in response to the folk-music boom of three years ago. The crowds, who had been primarily over-25 age groups, changed in charge. Youngsters of high school age flocked in.

As a result, it was only a matter of time before various coffee-house owners catered to these new crowds by setting up discotheques with which the village is dotted today.

The folk-music spots and coffee-houses featuring merely conversation and coffee were all but crowded out.

Meanwhile many young people moved there to live right in the middle of where things were happening, and thereby created a sub-culture that has Toronto baffled and suspicious.

DISREGARD STATUS

These village "regulars" in many aspects have refused to conform to the rest of society. To them, nothing is as dull or "unhip" as the man who lives in the suburbs, takes a train and has a nine-to-five job. Boys often wear their hair shoulder-length.

Many of the villagers have no jobs and prefer to work to the occasion—only when and as long as they need the money. Meals can be bought for 25 cents from a nearby church group.

Material things are unimportant to them and so is status. "We just con a place to sleep and something to eat, and we're happy," one of them said.

A villager who rents a room is likely to be a host to five others who occasionally sleep on his floor.

A sociologist who has been conducting a study among the villagers said they are generally of above-average intelligence. Many dropped out of high school grades of high school because neither the work they were doing nor the prospect of work ahead seemed meaningful to them.

"They're searching for something but don't really know what," he added.

BOHO IS REBELLIOUS

As a result the population of about 300 villagers is transient. A person there now may move to downtown to New York, Montreal or the west coast.

And arriving constantly are persons from Western Canada, Northern Ontario, Montreal or many places in the United States. Visitors from Regina and Winnipeg are common.

Bohemian is not really an accurate term to apply to their life because it is not generally a creative atmosphere in which they live although some excellent popular musicians are produced there.

The atmosphere is more of rebellion against the mainstream of society.

The teen-agers who come there on the weekends to dance are rebelling in a mild and safe form. They merely desire to gather in a teen-age atmosphere where there are few adults in control them.

The village residents have carried the rebellion further by moving into a society in which they aren't compelled to conform to an older generation.

SOME USE MARIJUANA

For the outsiders—the teenagers who leave their parents only briefly to dance here and the suburbanites and tourists who stroll through the village to see the "beatniks"—this society is hard to penetrate.

To some observers, villagers are regarded as people living a loose life involving sex, marijuana and experiments with LSD. But indications are that there is no mean all villagers are so involved.

Marijuana is a social instrument for certain persons in the village; it is to be smoked in groups and to be shared—as are sexual passions.

But to the police and the law the occasional marijuana user is the latter that the drug addict who turns to crime to support his habit. Arrests on marijuana charges in the village numbered seven in 1964; 54 in 1965.

As a result the users are careful of the way they handle the drug. But there are occasionally the cases who like to brag such as the fellow who shouted: "Man, have you ever been high on pot and at the same time? It's heaven."

Rescue Team Finds Wreckage In Formosa Hills

TAIPEI (Reuters) — Police said today a rescue team had found the wreckage of an American C-119 Flecrube transport plane which crashed in the hills of central Formosa Tuesday, killing all eight persons aboard.

The plane, carrying five crew members and three passengers, was on a routine training mission from Saigon en route to Tsinghsan Air Base in central Formosa.

Filibuster By PCs Suggested

OTTAWA (CP) — Without using the word filibuster, Transport Minister Pickersgill suggested one way being considered by Conservatives in the Commons Tuesday night.

With five minutes to go until the normal 10 p.m. adjournment time, Mr. Pickersgill suggested the House might consider sitting late to clear the way for approval in principle of the big supplementary bill to revamp transportation legislation. Six Conservative MPs had spoken in a row.

Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg South Centre) interjected a statement that the government had not taken up a suggestion for a dinner adjournment so no provision for an extended sitting would be forthcoming.

DIDN'T MAKE MOTION

Mr. Pickersgill said he would not make a formal motion that the House sit late. But he said Alvin Hamilton (PC — Qu'Appelle) had said in debate last Friday that the Conservatives were prepared to getting now transport legislation through.

He hoped this was still the attitude of the party.

William H. A. Thomas (PC—Middlesex West) then rose to continue the debate for the couple of minutes until 10 p.m.

Mr. Pickersgill at that hour suggested unanimous consent might be given so that Mr. Thomas would at least get his speech into one edition of Hansard, the day-by-day record of Commons debates.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) said he would not agree to a late sitting and the House adjourned.

Sixteen MPs had spoken on the bill by adjournment time—11 Conservatives, two New Democrats, two independents and one Creditiste.

Sitting Horse May Wind Up As Star of New TV Series

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Three half-hour comedy series had their premiere shows on ABC Tuesday night. About the only things they had in common was the network — and very loud laugh tracks on two of them.

First there was The Rounders, a broad western rib-tickler about two cowboys, their boss and an ornery horse who can sit down on its hind legs. The horse may wind up as the star of the show.

Chili Wills plays a rich ranch owner with larceny in his heart and a poverty - like hillbilly turn of phrase. His victims were the cowboys, played by Ron Hayes and Patrick Wayne, John's son. Wayne's acting was confined to smiling broadly and repeating "whatever suits you just tickles me plumb to death."

The plot involved some nonsense about trying to sell the aged-down horse to a rodeo as a bucking bronc. Maybe the series will tickle the youngsters in the audience, since a lot of people in the act are thrown into mud puddles.

Then followed The Fruitts of Southampton, which may just make the residents of Southampton start petitions. The first show was under the handicap of having to introduce a kooky society family and explain how they snubbed and conceived they were impoverished. This set the scene for future shows.

Phyllis Diller, in relatively conservative clothes, plays a woman of such sheltered background that she tried to roast a turkey in a washing machine, which also suggests the caliber of the gags.

Third candidate for public approval was Love On A Rooftop, which has the advantage of two attractive young people, Judy Carne and Peter Deuel, playing the leads. They portray a young couple trying to live on his $83-a-week salary.

This show, too, was extremely puzzling the situation, getting them married and installed in a windowless flat. Then came a visit from the wife's parents and some stuff about furnishing the place with borrowed furniture.

The stars were vivacious and convincing. The settings were handsome, including some stunning shots of San Francisco. But the writing has a way to go.

In an extraordinary exercise of programming judgment, the network preceded the three new shows with an hour-long cartoon show called King Kong.

Unlike the old King of the horror film, the cartoon ape is enormous but friendly and lowbrow. His best friend is a little boy about one third the size of one of the ape's fingers. The show will appear in half-hour form on Saturdays this season.

Mickey Rooney Works Hard To Forget His 'Tragedy'

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Mickey Rooney is hard at work on the comeback he has known nearly all of his 45 years. But he admits he has not yet recovered from what he refers to as "the tragedy."

It took place last Jan. 31 when his fifth wife was slain by a rival for her affections, a would-be actor from Yugoslavia, who then took his own life. She was the mother of four of Rooney's children.

Rooney has been working almost continuously since, recently he returned from filmmaking in Italy and reported for television assignments. He will be seen on CBS next week on the opening shows of both Jean Arthur and Red Skelton.

Last weekend Mickey announced his engagement to Margie Lane.

Last week Rooney was functioning in another guise: Director of The Joan Arthur Show. A craftsman who has learned every nuance of comic invention, he supplanted great star Wally Cox in rehearsing a scene with Miss Arthur that drew guffaws from the film crew.

"This is my first directing in television, but I did direct a movie at Columbia a few years back," he said. "Let's face it. You also done a lot of directing that I never got credit for. Every actor has to."

He was wearing the director's costume of slacks, turtleneck shirt and golf sweater with a basket ball top his thinning blonde locks. The Rooney ebullience was lacking, but not his enthusiasm for work.

He had been in Italy filming The Devil In Love with Votturio Gassman—"I play his sidekick, a sort of aging Puck," said Rooney, who played the Shakespearean sprite in Warner Brothers' all-star Midsummer Night's Dream in 1935. He leaves this month for a night club date in Australia, then returns for more films and television.

"Work is a great catharsis," said the actor. "It's the best thing for me right now, because I still haven't had a comeback from the tragedy. I'm getting there, but it will take some more time."

NEWSPAPER MAN DIES

MONTREAL (CP) — Arnott Oladwyn Magurn, 67, longtime newspaper man and publicist, died in hospital Tuesday after a brief illness. Born in Winnipeg, he was educated in Ottawa and started his newspaper career with the old Montreal Herald. In the early 1930s, Mr. Magurn joined the Montreal Star and later became its real estate editor. Until his retirement two years ago, Mr. Magurn was Quebec representative for the Fairchild Publications firm.

CP CROSS-CANADA SURVEY

By KEN SMITH

Canadian Press Business Editor

Forty-one billion, five hundred million dollars is an impressive pile of money.

It became even more impressive when you consider it's just the cream off the top of a gigantic mother lode: Canada's incredibly rich mining resources.

The figure represents the estimated total value—and a conservative one, at that—of mining production in Canada since 1886, when statistics started appearing in some detail on the subject.

Primed by burgeoning worldwide demand for minerals ranging from asbestos to zircons, the Canadian mining industry has grown space since the end of the Second World War, and the growth rate still is accelerating.

The expansion shows in production figures gathered in a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press.

Of the $41,500,000,000 worth of minerals—excluding petroleum — produced since 1886, about three-quarters has been dug from the ground in the last 20 years. Half has been mined during the last decade and, in fact, about seven per cent, or almost $2,900,000,000 worth, came out of the ground last year alone.

By 1970, mining officials expect the total value to exceed $4,000,000,000 annually. So rapidly is the industry growing that the total value of the last 80 years' production is expected to be more than doubled during the next 13.

MILLIONS IN DIVIDENDS

It's not, of course, only the industry that has benefitted from uncovering these riches.

Last year, the Mining Association of Canada estimates, $ 250,000 Canadians received $365,500,000 in dividends from mining companies. Total dividends paid by Canadian companies have been estimated at more than $4,500,000,000.

The economy as a whole benefits, too.

About $50,000 persons are employed directly in the ike industry and the mining association says that for every person employed in mining, another six have jobs supplying mines with goods and services.

Since 1960, the industry's capital, repair and exploration spending is estimated to have averaged more than $800,000,000 annually.

In 1965, capital and repair spending alone totalled $861,000,000; that is expected to rise at least 25 per cent this year, with another estimated $30,000,000 going into the search for new mineral deposits.

Out of this spending came 23 new mines and at least 18 more either have gone into production or are scheduled to do so this year. Another 20 major projects already have been outlined for the next few years.

Some of these developments, involving iron ore or potash, involve a total $1 investment of between $30,000,000 and $75,000,000 each.

IRON ORE BOOMING

Almost paradoxically, the industry's surge has come from the downgrading of the world metal situation associated with richness—gold and silver—and turning instead to abundant resources needed in fulfilling the world's growing living standards.

One of the sharpest increases, the mining association reports, has come in the production of iron ore.

In 1955, output was worth $110,000,000. By last year, the value had climbed to more than $422,000,000, making it second only to nickel as Canada's most valuable mining product.

Backbone of the increase has been the start of development of the Quebec-Labrador trough, containing what mining men say is some of the world's richest known reserves of iron ore.

Although last year's shipments of 37,800,000 tons were about 10,000,000 tons short of established capacity, the iron ore industry is continuing its expansion program.

Another $144,000,000 is being spent on new facilities this year, raising total investment in recent years to more than $800,000,000.

Nickel production in 1955 was worth $92,000,000, but in the next year International Nickel discovered ore in northern Manitoba; by 1965, following the investment of $300,000,000 in what became Thompson, Man. and other developments, nickel output had soared to 532,000,000 pounds worth more than $420,300,000.

COPPER IS THIRD

Pushed by worldwide demand and climbing prices, production of copper, zinc and lead has surged ahead, too.

Copper is Canada's third-most valuable metal, with 1965 shipments of $ 17,000 tons worth $360,000,000 compared with $ 339,800,000 in 1955.

So strong has the demand for the red metal become that, of the 25 new mines started last year, 10 are producing copper. And the federal department of mines and technical surveys lists 27 other prospective copper mines.

Zinc's growth also has been impressive—$251,000,000 worth last year compared with $118,000,000 a decade earlier.

Boosted by the start of production at the huge Pine Point reserves in the Northwest Territories, production last year totalled 900,000 tons—up 185,000 tons from 1964 and nearly one-quarter of the non-communist world's output.

Five new zinc producers started up last year and at least eight more are to begin soon.

Lead production climbed almost 30 per cent last year to 200,000 tons compared with 1964—a jump in value to $88,000,000 from $54,000,000.

A comparatively new standout has the tongue-twisting name of molybdenum, a metal used in making special steels. Production of almost 4,000,000 pounds last year was worth more than $7,000,000, compared with only $2,000,000 in 1964.

NEW MINE PROSPERS

To that total now can be added the output of the new $32,000,000 Endako mine in British Columbia, the world's second-largest moly producer, which in the first nine months of its operation alone had a net profit of more than $7,000,000.

But the magic word in mining now is potash, a mineral lying in vast beds under Saskatchewan and essential in producing fertilizers to help feed the growing world population.

Everything about potash involves bonzer figures, from the capital cost of developing a mine—up to $75,000,000—to the estimates of reserves which run as high as 16,000,000,000 tons.

With three mines now operating at a total capital cost of $160,000,000, and seven more scheduled, Canada could be producing 12,000,000 tons of potash a year by 1970. By then, the total investment will exceed $900,000,000.

But the money will come back quickly. Last year, on production of only 1,597,000 tons, revenues totalled almost $60,000,000.

Not all the mining picture has been so glowing, however.

In the late 1850s, the excitement was over uranium and by 1959 two mines in the Northwest Territories, six in Saskatchewan and 15 in Ontario produced $333,000,000 worth of the radioactive metal.

But last year, the boom broken by lost markets, sales totalled only $64,000,000—from just four producers.

BOOM PREDICTED

The outlook, however, is for a return to high-flying sales. Canada has the world's largest known reserves and, with a growing swing toward nuclear-powered electric generators, officials happily predict boom conditions again by the early 1970s.

Not so confident is the gold-mining industry.

Canada still is the world's third-largest gold producer, ranking behind South Africa and the Soviet Union, with output last year of 3,898,000 ounces worth $136,142,000.

But for years mines have been pinched between a fixed price for gold and rising costs. In 1955, production was worth $156,800,000—almost 10 per cent of Canada's total mining output. Last year, it represented only 3.3 per cent of the total. A further five-per-cent decline in production is expected this year.

Eight of the 34 gold mines operating at the start of last year had closed by year-end, although three smaller ones opened; several more are playing to shut down this year.

There are some rather bright lights of developments across Canada.

British Columbia: Production passed $230,000,000 last year with zinc, lead, copper, iron, asbestos and molybdenum the top money-makers. Fourteen new mines have opened in the last 10 years, with at least five more—two molybdenum, two copper and one iron and copper—scheduled to be in production by 1969 at a total capital cost of $135,000,000. Exploration is intense, with almost 42,000 claims staked last year and 25,000 staked in the first four months of this year.

Alberta: Coal production of 5,400,000 tons worth $18,100,000 was the major mining activity last year. Ten years ago, however, the industry produced 23,000,000 worth of coal. Although some exploration has been carried on—with little success—for potash, a major development is the planning by the Alberta Research Council of an extraction process to try to separate low-grade 2,000 acres of sands in the Clear Hills area of northern Alberta. The proved reserves of the deposit are 200,000,000 tons.

Saskatchewan: Potash overshadows everything, but the province still produced $107,000,000 worth of metals, industrial minerals and coal last year. Copper-uranium and zinc were the leading metals. There is a renewed search for base metals, sparked in part by the development of Share Mines and Oils' discovery near Hanson Lake, and if the uranium market recovers as expected that segment of the industry would win a new life.

Manitoba: Inco is working on two new mines near Thompson, promising to add to last year's $108,798,000 production of nickel. Total mineral output was $149,283,000 — a record—compared with only $41,720,000 in 1955. Copper and zinc also were important products in the province. Sherritt Gordon mines Ltd. is developing copper-zinc deposits at Fox Lake and Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd. is working on copper-zinc deposits near Snow Lake. Twenty-five companies joined the search for potash last year near the Saskatchewan border.

Ontario: Total mineral output last year reached a record $988,183,000—up $84,600,000 from 1964—and will easily top $1,000,000,000 this year. Major developments include the $2,000,000 ore body found by Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. near Timmins in 1964 and to be in production this fall, and work in the still-prolific Sudbury basin. Inco plans five new workings there and Falconbridge two. Considering these as single operations, the provincial mines department counts 31 projects under development.

Quebec: Total production last year was worth $432,200,000 compared with $407,200,000 the previous year. Iron ore production of 14,200,000 long tons put in Canada—area wide $141,600,000. Copper, zinc and asbestos were other important minerals. Exploration is active, especially in the base-metal areas of the northwest and the Gaspe.

New Brunswick: From a comparatively minor role even five years ago, when mining output was worth only $17,100,000, the industry has raced ahead to where last year it was valued at $83,900,000. Heart of the growth was the development starting in 1963 of the lead-and-copper-silver deposits near Bathurst. Base - metal production last year totalled 305,000,000, Brunswick Mining and Smelting Corp. have been enlarging its facilities there.

Nova Scotia-Prince Edward Island: These provinces have experienced little boom or bust in mining. Nova Scotia's output has remained around $65,000,000 for the past decade, with coal being the most valuable—4,100,000 tons worth $42,000,000 last year. Exploration has picked up in Cape Breton following base-metal showings. Prince Edward Island's production, limited to structural materials, was worth less than $1,000,000 last year.

Newfoundland: From only $28,800,000 in 1955, production has soared to more than $200,000,000, thanks to the rich iron ore deposits in Labrador. With huge new developments at Wabush and Labrador City, iron output last year was more than 14,000,000 tons, worth $168,000,000. Copper, zinc and lead are becoming more important, with extensive exploration going on throughout much of the province.

Yukon - Northwest Territories: Start of regular shipments from the Pine Point mine last year raised the value of mineral products to $72,800,000 from $18,100,000 in 1964. Zinc and lead, Pine Point's major ores, were worth $28,300,000 and $24,300,000. Intensive exploration, especially in the Pine Point area, has uncovered other hopeful sites. In the Yukon, silver, lead, zinc and gold led the territory's output to $15,200,000. An asbestos deposit is being developed and New Imperial Mines Ltd. plans to bring a copper ore body into production. As in other areas of Canada, some intensive exploration is going on.

MINERAL PRODUCTION CLIMBS — Mineral production in Canada has been shooting up since the end of the Second World War, as shown by the solid line, indicating the value of mining output, on the graph. The broken line shows the steady but less spectacular growth of the value of structural materials — clay, cement, gravel and other minerals used in the construction industry. In 1965, mining output was worth $2,304,100,000 and structural materials brought an additional $423,200,000. In 1930, the combined total was $281,700,000 and, after a gradual rise during that decade, slipped during the war to $475,200,000 in 1945. The value has been going up ever since, and by 1970 is expected to shoot past the $4,000,000,000 mark. (CP Newsmap.)

Increase Fees For National Parks Next Year

OTTAWA (CP) — Increased fees for camping, fishing and golf in national parks were announced Tuesday by the resources department.

Effective April 1, 1967, camping fees will be $1 daily for unserviced sites, $1.50 for sites where electricity is provided and $2 for fully-serviced sites.

Camping fees this year were 50 cents a day for tents and tent-trailers and $1.50 for trailers using fully-equipped sites. While these fees were in effect in only 30 of the parks, almost all of the approximately 100 parks will charge next year.

Seasonal camping rates also are to go up.

Annual $2 fishing licences will be required in 1967 at all parks except those in Cape Breton and Kitt Island in Alberta.

Golfers will pay an additional 25 cents a round, in the parks beginning next year. The new fees are $1.50 for nine holes and $2.50 for 18.

The department said the new charges bring fees in the national parks more in line with those charged at private and provincial parks.

Gen. Allard's Statement Questioned by Opposition

OTTAWA (CP)—The role of Gen. Jean V. Allard in speaking publicly in favor of armed forces unification before it has been dealt with by Parliament was questioned by opposition members in the Commons Tuesday.

Gordon Churchill, former Conservative defence minister, at one point referred to Gen. Allard, new chief of the defence staff, as Defence Minister Hellyer's "propaganda agent."

Gen. Allard, once offered the defence portfolio in the St.-Laurent cabinet, called for public support of unification in a speech at Toronto Friday.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) asked during an hour-long question period whether Gen. Allard is operating under a different rule than that applied to Rear-Admiral William Landymore, dismissed by Mr. Hellyer in July for speaking publicly on unification. Admiral Landymore opposed unification of the forces into a single, one-uniform service.

Mr. Hellyer said "the chief of staff decides who under his control may make public statements in respect of defence matters."

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said Mr. Hellyer himself had ruled that serving officers should not give public opinions on controversial matters. Had there been a change and had William M. Lee, executive assistant to Mr. Hellyer, approved it?

Mr. Hellyer said he resented the "quite uncalled for" inference.

"The chief of defence staff made a speech on his own responsibility and he has the prerogative under the standing orders to do that."

Mr. Diefenbaker asked whether it is proper for high-ranking officers to express public opinions on a controversial matter which Mr. Hellyer had not yet brought before Parliament.

"I cannot think of anyone better qualified to speak on this subject than the chief of defence staff," the minister replied.

Napanee Chief Resigns to Go on Beat

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP) — Police Chief R. H. Bean has resigned to become a patrolman with the six-man police force he headed for 16 years.

The chief's new status with the force was approved at a town council meeting Tuesday night.

He resigned and applied for the constable's job at the same time without giving a reason.

As chief, he earned $5,400 a year and will make $810 less as a patrolman. He has been with the force 31 years.

Fair Prize Winners Named

NAPANEE — Attendance at the Napanee Fair on Monday was 3,166, an increase over last year, but not a record. Tuesday it was a different story, with rain cutting down attendance, preventing judging of horses and cattle, and forcing cancellation of the horse racing. Crowds thickened when the skies cleared, and the officials hoped for no more rain to interfere with the wrestling, which was planned for the open air in front of the grandstand during the evening.

Judging of the exhibits in the arena finished Monday but no results were available Tuesday night for the prize winners among the horses and cattle.

Mrs. Robert Dickson of Sillsville bat quilt of plaid cotton, ville won the special prize for the best quilt of pieced cotton, Mrs. G. R. Putnam of Wooler, the special prize for the best collection of quilts, and Mrs. L. E. Bryant also of Wooler, the special prize for the best appliqued quil.

Mrs. Dirk Veldman of Wilton won several prizes in the needle work section: for mother - and - daughter cotton dresses; for lady's duster; best knitted child's cardigan, and for the best crocheted table cloth.

BAKED GOODS

Mrs. Otto Drew of Moscow, and Mrs. Jennie Herrington of Water St., Napanee, tied for the special prize for the most points for baked goods. 349 Enrolled At Deseronto Public School

DESERONTO — Deseronto Public School reports some changes in staff this year. Rodney Uens is acting principal for the 1966-67 school year. Mrs. Joyce Tasker is teaching full time this year, and Mrs. Laing Howitt is the principal's relief teacher. Peter Roach, long-time principal, has transferred to Tyendinaga Township.

The Deseronto Public School begins the year with a tentative membership of 349, which is expected to increase, giving it the heaviest class load of any school in the area.

The proposal to build a two-room addition to the school was defeated at a special meeting of the School Board in July. This school also lacks a kindergarten and an opportunity class. The money remaining to the Deseronto Board of Education when it was dissolved following payment of all obligations, was placed in a special account by the Town Council to be used for education. By special arrangements, grants would have covered most of the rest of the cost of the addition, and no debentures would have been issued.

Napanee Personals

NAPANEE — Mr. and Mrs. J. W. R. Hinchby of Madawaska, Maine, were guests Sunday of Mrs. Hinchby's brother, W. W. Creswick and Mrs. Creswick of Eagle Road. They were returning from Toronto where they had driven their daughter who will teach there this year.

The Rev. Gordon Hammond of the Free Methodist Church, and Mrs. Hammond, and the Rev. R. H. Hobbs of the Anglican Church in Arnprior, and Mrs. Hobbs, who is Mr. Hammond's sister, returned Saturday from a tour of the Maritimes, their stay in Prince Edward Island shortened because of the imminence of the rail-road strike. They left the Island Thursday. The three Hammond children who had been visiting their parents in Napanee, at Campbell's Bay, Que., returned with their parents.

Mrs. Kenneth Penny and Melvin of Toronto were guests for the holiday weekend of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Penny of Centre Street.

Fred Sutcliffe, Jr., of the Empey Hill district, returned Thursday last from the Kingston General Hospital where he underwent an operation on his ankle, fractured in a tractor accident on Rennwood, the Sutcliffe 400-acre farm near Cobourg. Fred was behind a tractor which backed up, throwing him to the ground and running the length of his leg.

While taking a summer course in mathematics at Queen's University, Kingston, Mr. Glenn Clark of Parry Sound, his wife and family, occupied the home of his sister, Mrs. Frank Corbett and her husband while they were at their cottage on Hay Bay. Their mother, Mrs. Frank Clark of Dundas St., visited both families during the summer.

Many Changes In Napanee School Staffs

NAPANEE—All public and elementary schools in the Napanee area opened September 6, with many changes in teaching staffs and some changes in school organization.

Napanee schools have 28 teachers on duty this year. New teachers are: Deanna Lewis, Mrs. Barbara Marlin, Mrs. Elean or McLaughlin, George Vance, and Anthony Hunt. Mr. Gordon Fresque remains supervising principal of the Prince Charles and the Eastview Schools.

Tuesday morning 766 registered at Prince Charles School and 54 at Eastview. Last year the registration for each was higher in June, 793 in the Prince Charles School and 54 in Eastview.

15 Accidents Investigated By Department

NnapANEE — The Napanee detachment reports that last week was quiet with no severe injuries. They investigated 15 accidents during the week, only four resulting in personal injuries. Thursday, Phillipe Bourguignon of Gatineau, Que., was slightly injured in a tractor trailer accident; and 12-year-old Timothy Grand of Odessa when his bicycle was in collision with a car. The following day Ben Dennis of Whitby sustained minor injuries in a one car accident near the Wilton Road on No. 401 highway.

The same day, Maria Gentile of Ville St. Michel, Que., was admitted in the Lennox and Addington County General Hospital following a one car accident near the Switzerville overpass on the same highway. She will be charged from hospital Monday.

During the same period this detachment investigated eight thefts, one break and enter, 20 disturbance complaints, 18 other minor complaints, and delivered two compassionate messages.

Officers of the detachment patrolled 7,532 miles during the week, compiled 1,023 man hours, issued 73 verbal warnings for safety, laid 21 charges under the Highway Traffic Act, and issued 22 warnings. They spent 38 hours in Magistrate's court, and 34 convictions were registered.

Fire Engulfs German Liner At New York

NEW YORK (AP)—An all-fed fire smouldered the engine room of the German passenger liner Hanseatic today as she was being prepared to sail for Europe with 300 passengers.

Flames were reported spreading out of control through the 30,000-ton, 698-foot ship.

Firemen ordered the 300-odd crew and ship's passengers from the ship. A U.S. Coast Guard said all passengers left safely.

The fire reached the oil system of the 36-year-old ship, 4 fire marshal at the scene reported. Firemen, equipped with air masks, poured into the ship, but the marshal said the blaze "is not contained yet."

SOUND FIVE ALARMS

Ninety minutes after the fire was reported a fifth alarm was signalled. Firemen prepared to flood the engine room with carbon dioxide in hopes of choking off the flames.

Heavy smoke billowed from the Hanseatic, moored at pier 84 on the Hudson River at 44th Street.

The ship had been due to sail for Cherbourg, France, with 300 passengers and 300 crew at 11:30 a.m. today.

PSYCHIATRIST DIES

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Dr. William C. Menninger, world famous psychiatrist and president of the Menninger Foundation here, died Tuesday.

Dr. Menninger, 66, headed the noted psychiatric treatment, training and research centre since 1932. His brother, Dr. Karl Menninger, chief of staff of the foundation, also is among the best-known psychiatrists in the world.

Thanks for being patient!

It's been a trying time. And we'd be less than honest, if we suggested everything's back to normal. But we're getting there. There's catching up to do. Details to iron out. But all our services are operating — freight, passenger, express and telecommunications. And we're working around the clock to make up for lost time.

Sorry for the inconveniences.

We're glad to be serving you again.

There are many

Good Reasons

for shopping at Dominion...

but-it's mainly because of the MEAT!

Sure it is! Ask anyone who shops at Dominion mainly because of the meat and they'll tell you what we've been telling you for some time now: that dollar for dollar the meat you buy at Dominion is your best value! Look at it this way! Dominion meat is government-inspected Red and Blue brand beef . . . guaranteed for natural tenderness, flavour and taste — or your money back! This, plus the personal service from the man behind the meat counter, who will cut and trim your purchase exactly the way your family likes it, puts Dominion "a cut above the rest".

After all, more Canadians shop at Dominion than at any other store mainly because of the meat! Shouldn't you be?

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"No, she's not part of the Women's Club's plan for beautifying the city."

Successful Living

Boyfriend Assumes Role Of Boarder and Boss

DEAR DORIS: My daughter's boy-friend is here so much he acts like a boarder.

On top of everything else he interferes when I or my husband try to discipline the other children.

This is our family, not his, and all it does is make the children confused as to who is right and who is wrong. Hope you can help us. — BACK NUMBER.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR BACK NUMBER: If your daughter's date has now taken charge, who am I to put my oar in?

Better switch back to your proper role of Boss in Your Own Home. Ask, even a regular one, is still a guest; and this one needs to be told so.

DEAR READERS: Fulton Ousler, who died in 1952, bequeathed to us many inspirational messages; none more powerful and appealing than the following resolution:

"In the days ahead, I propose to see more:

—in every stupid question, a human soul groping for truth;

—in every conceited declaration, a human soul desperately grasping for the dignity of which it has been robbed;

—in every angry action, a human soul fighting blindly for happiness;

—in every betrayal, a human mind distorted by false prophets;

—in every human being, the image and likeness of God."

A person shows maturity and courts Successful Living when he learns to apply such wisdom to every human act.

DEAR DORIS — Each night I would like to do about ten minutes of exercising to substitute for the lack of physical activity I miss during the day. I'd also like to add a few curves (Anywhere Will Do!). I think this may also help combat fatigue.

Doris, I would like to compliment you on your method of helping others. You solve all problems in the light of love and never is there a touch of bitterness in your answers to unhappy people. You seem to pull out of people the smallest light of hope and make it work, no matter how dark things may be.

You never scold people for getting themselves in ridiculous and unfortunate situations, but rather you save your words to help them reconstruct their lives. — A FAN.

DEAR FAN — When you are mentally tired, physical exercise does reduce fatigue. I am sending you the ten-cent leaflet "Chart for Curves".

You have completely turned my head. I feel like the woman who attended her husband's funeral and listened with amazement as the preacher praised her Dear Departed. Finally she whispered to her daughter, "Susie, tiptoe up there and make sure that's your father in the coffin!"

Are you sure this is me you are talking about? Thanks, Luv!

* * *

(Don't just muddle along. Doris knows human behavior and can help. Write to her and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Team of Montreal Specialists Will Staff Hospital in Tunis

The staffing of a children's hospital in Tunis is a significant step forward in Canada's program of aid to North Africa. A Canadian Press reporter travelling in the region discusses Ottawa's role.

By PETER BUCKLEY

TUNIS (CP) — A plan to transplant a team of specialists in children's medicine from Montreal to a new hospital in Tunis will add a fresh dimension to Canadian aid for the countries of North Africa.

Dr. Albert Royer, chief of pediatric medicine at Hospital Ste. Justine in Montreal, came to Tunisia this year to study the needs of a 300-bed hospital here. His recommendations have been accepted by the Canadian government's external aid office and he will go back for a year.

An entire team of 50 specialists and assistants from Canada will come to man the Tunis Children's Hospital, a modern glass - and - concrete structure on a low hill overlooking the Bab-Saadoun gate which leads into the ancient walled Arab quarter. The team to Canada for the 1966-67 fiscal year will be about $300,000. For the first four or five years, the hospital will be run by Canadians but trained Tunisians will then begin taking over.

There are already 12 Canadians at the hospital, a mixture of lay nurses and Roman Catholic nuns. They have been on the staff since the hospital opened last November, and several worked for up to two years in the previous temporary buildings.

Originally enlisted individually, the nurses have since been taken under the wing of the external aid office in Ottawa and now represent Canada's largest single commitment of personnel in North Africa.

Canada's presence in the three former French colonies of Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia is generally slight, despite the exceptional reputation Canada enjoys there and despite a crying need for assistance.

WILL OPEN EMBASSY

The first Canadian government representatives to take up residence in the Maghreb will be a small staff who arrive in Tunis this summer to establish an embassy. Although Canada has signed formal aid agreements this year with Algeria and Morocco, they are not expected to get resident Canadian embassies for another year or two — largely, it is understood, because the external affairs department has been hard pressed to provide trained personnel for the flood of new embassies it has had to open in recent years.

At present, all three North African countries are served by ambassadors who hold simultaneous jobs in Europe.

Choosing his words carefully, one Moroccan government official in Rabat said: "We have excellent relations with Canada, but one cannot doubt that the presence of an ambassador or permanent representative in Morocco would be extremely useful. This is a question for the Canadian government to decide. It undoubtedly has its reasons."

In all three countries, government spokesmen urged an increased role for Canada, as a prosperous nation with a large French-speaking population, a highly-developed industrial economy and an international reputation free of colonialist taint, Canada is in unique position to help the Maghreb, they say.

WANT INVESTMENT

"There is no lack of opportunities for Canada as a government and for Canadians as individuals and investors to assist us," the Moroccan official said. "In every field— tourism, agriculture, forestry, mining, education, medicine— there is a need for assistance."

But the trouble is far from being entirely in Ottawa. Observers in Rabat, Algiers and Tunis all say that bureaucratic muddle often makes it difficult for international agencies and individual countries to carry through their plans for assistance.

"I'm not sure Canada would have been able to accomplish a single thing more by having an ambassador here," said a Western diplomat in Algiers. "It's next to impossible to get a decision on even the smallest routine matter, even when you go and see some of these people every day for weeks. You might just as well be writing them letters."

Algeria's civil service is particularly inexperienced, but there are reports of similar difficulties in Tunis and Rabat, where the governments have had a longer period of independence to bring along trained employees.

Tunisia has received the bulk of Canada's attention so far, although it is the smallest of the three countries and its population of 4,400,000 is only about a third of either Algeria's or Morocco's.

POLITICALLY STABLE

The reason is plainly Tunisia's relative political stability and moderation, and her greater willingness to get down to brass tacks on foreign aid.

Apart from the nurses, Canada has about 25 primary and secondary school teachers and their families here, plus several individuals working independently, only four turbulent years into independence, has received virtually no Canadian aid so far although Canada is believed to be considering several projects, including the supply of instructors or technicians in several fields and the training of Algerians in Canada.

COULD DO BETTER

Several Canadians have been sent to Morocco under external aid auspices or under independent agreements with government or private agencies.

And Canada is reported to be considering taking part in a massive international relief program designed to end catastrophic erosion in the Western Rif mountains on the Mediterranean coast.

A Canadian who holds a senior position with one United Nations agency in the Maghreb is exasperated with Canada's small role there.

The man, who asked to remain unidentified, said:

"We have every reason to play a particular role in North Africa and Canada benefits from an enormously good reputation here. But there just aren't enough Canadians coming over under external aid and the UN usually gets no response at all when it sends notification to Ottawa that particular jobs are open if there are Canadians to fill them.

"To my mind, it's a damned disgrace."

Spin Out Rail Bill Debate

By MICHAEL GILLAN

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition members Wednesday night spun out debate on the government's transportation bill to fill an extra 9½ hours of Commons sitting time.

The government, trying to win early approval in principle for the $40,000-word bill, sent the Commons into extra hours in the hope that debate would linger out during the evening. Normally, House business ends for the day at 6 p.m. on Wednesdays, but this time went on to 10:34 p.m.

When the extra-hours sitting began after a 45 minute dinner break, Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg South Centre), with tongue in cheek, said he was entering the debate on the assumption that Transport Minister Pickersgill had sought extended hours to enable more MPs to speak.

He then launched a protest against proceeding too quickly because Parliament often made mistakes when it moved too quickly.

The debate, which began last Thursday night after passage of a bill to halt the national rail-way strike, continues today.

Wednesday afternoon, Speaker Herman Batten ruled out of order an amendment by H. A. Thomson (PC—Assiniboia West) to postpone approval in principle on second reading until the Commons transport committee holds a thorough hearing.

Despite rejection of the amendment, the Conservatives continued to press for immediate referral of the bill to committee and Mr. Churchill argued for a go-slow approach in the legislation.

Mr. Pickersgill replied that the measure had been promised six years ago by then Diefenbaker government.

In 1964, the Liberal government had agreed to send a similar bill to committee before second reading and the hearings then produced what reflected the current bill.

"How many times does this same process have to go on?" Mr. Pickersgill asked.

Mr. Churchill replied that the 1964 procedure was a good one and should be repeated now.

The bill outlines a new transportation policy, frees railways from the freight-rate freeze established by the previous Diefenbaker government and permits gradual abandonment of some uneconomic branch lines.

A main aim in ending the

Viet Cong on Bloody Rampage Slays Official, Wife, Children

SAIGON (AP)—The Viet Cong went on a bloody rampage of pre - election terrorism today, killing at least six persons and wounding more than 20, three days before the vote for a constitution-drafting assembly.

The Viet Cong staged their most savage act southwest of Saigon where they murdered a government security agent, his wife and their three children, a government spokesman said.

In the northern city of Hue, a terrorist lobbed grenades into an election rally, injuring 10 to 20 persons.

Other guerrillas broke into a refugee hamlet 340 miles northeast of Saigon, killed one civilian and wounded seven, and burned down 50 dwellings before withdrawing.

Terrorism continued for the third straight day in Saigon's Chinese quarter. A grenade injured an election worker distributing leaflets on a motorbike.

On the outskirts of the city, a grenade tossed into a village election office wounded four persons. Only three miles west of Saigon, A three-man Viet Cong propaganda team reported residents of a hamlet to boycott the election Sunday.

The Viet Cong made another unsuccessful attempt to block the main shipping channel to Saigon today, exploding a mine near a U.S. Navy mine-sweeper. It went off harmlessly 40 yards away.

U.S. officials meanwhile sought to determine whether Viet Cong saboteurs or a short circuit caused a $1,000,000 fire that destroyed an American military warehouse and dam-

Ky May Seek Presidency

From AP-Reuters

SAIGON (CP) — Premier Nguyen Cao Ky today put himself back in the fore-front of possible candidates for South Viet Nam's presidency in the war-torn country's election campaign entered its final three days.

The 35-year-old premier in effect told reporters he was reconsidering his earlier refusal to seek the presidency and might run because of the refusal of his first choice, Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu, to run.

U.K. Emigrants Rush to Canada Seeking Big Pay, Space to Grow

ABOARD S. S. EMPRESS OF ENGLAND (CP)—"There's no room to branch out here—everyone is going in the same direction."

"It's not that I'm tired of England, but I want an adventure while I'm still young enough."

"We wanted space for the children to grow up in, with trees for them to climb."

Another batch of emigrants, parts of the growing exodus from Britain, was setting out on new life in Canada. Far more than money, the magic word that drew them across the Atlantic was "opportunity" — a feeling that Canada offers more room to flex the muscles of ambition than the narrower confines of British society.

Three or four times a month, one of Canadian Pacific's big "White Empress" liners noses out of Liverpool's Mersey River, calls briefly at Greenock on the Clyde for Scottish travellers and heads for the St. Lawrence with anything up to 80 per cent emigrants on her passenger list.

By the end of 1966, Canadian immigration authorities in London estimate some 50,000 Britons will have left the motherland for Canada.

Of 794 passengers on the Empress of England arriving in Montreal Sept. 9, only 250 are emigrants. But when the liner next sails from Liverpool Sept. 19, some 800 of her 1,000 passengers will be quitting Britain either semi-permanently or for good.

It was an average cross-section that sailed from the sunlit Clyde last weekend. Among them were a Welsh shoeshop manager and family of three, headed for relatives in Medicine Hat, Alta.; a young physics graduate of Sussex University seeking a research job in Montreal; a Turkish-born hydraulics engineer taking up a short-term contract at the University of Alberta; a Scottish doctor moving to the Regina Medical Centre and newly-weds off for the University of Victoria.

University postings loomed large. The average age of the emigrants was in the mid-20s. None seemed sad to leave Britain. A frequent comment was "On Canadian salaries, it's easy to fly home."

"I suppose you could say I am part of the brain drain," said Tony Lampkin, 23-year-old physicist from the University of Leeds.

"I gave a lot of thought to the move, and it weighed a great deal that the country had paid £3,000 ($9,000) to educate me. But I wanted an adventure while I'm still young. I intend to come back after two years—I still think Britain is a great country.

The composite picture of the average emigrant that emerged was close to a pattern built up by Canadian immigration officials in Britain.

Opportunity as a motive ranks above money, though most emigrants expect to make three times their British salaries.

The call of the wide open spaces is a powerful factor, as

Singapore Urges RAF Bomb Rhodesian Rails; Wants Guerrilla War

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — The Commonwealth prime ministers' conference today faced suggestions from an Asian leader for a bombing of selected targets in Rhodesia and Viet Cong — like guerrilla action by black units.

Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore put to Wednesday's meeting a twofold plan for the use of tougher economic sanctions hitting several other vital commodities as well as oil, combined with the use of force to ensure against loopholes.

Later Singapore sources said that what Lee had in mind was the use of RAF low-level bombers to strike at four vital points in the Rhodesia railway system. It is thought these points are in remote areas.

Lee followed this up in a television broadcast late Wednesday night with a proposal for recruiting guerrilla units of Negro Rhodesians. Two battalions "running a ground Rhodesia" with more in training outside the colony would be sufficient, he said.

"If you can get the black Rhodesians to constitute a Viet Minh in what they [Communist] Vietnamese are doing, and you have, say, two battalions roving around Rhodesia, five divisions in training in other parts of Africa, I think the problem would be resolved very quickly.

"The thing that has struck me most about the Rhodesian situation is the lack of hostility of taking any gestures and protests. What is required is the capacity to organize and assert our rights."

In this, Lee meant to urge his

4 Escape County Jail at Cobourg; Two Are Captured

Two of four inmates of the Northumberland-Durham Counties jail at Cobourg who escaped custody early today, have been recaptured at Yorkville Village, Toronto. Paul Leroux, 20, of Downsview and Jacques Morin, 19, of Montreal were apprehended about noon today. Still at large are Harry Allen Crawford, 19, and Thomas Magnoff, 21, both of Niagara Falls, Ont.

Two guards, Joseph Leduc and Jos Medinski were assaulted when the four made good their escape this morning. on Monday, September 12.

Mr. Medhurst remains in hospital at Cobourg while Mr. Leduc was treated and allowed to go home.

Police said that when the men were being given their breakfast, they slugged the guards, took jail keys and the keys to Mr. Leduc's car. The car used in the escape is a 1958 black and white Pontiac, licence No. 232275.

The four had been in custody at Cobourg for about one week. They were to appear in court on break and enter charges

Gemini Astronauts Ready For Double Launch Friday

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) The Gemini 11 astronauts, confident and ready to shatter space records, relaxed today as preparations clicked smoothly toward a doubleheader launch Friday.

Project officials gave the go-ahead to fuel the 90-foot-tall Gemini - Titan II rocket this morning. Except for brief meetings with project officials, Gemini 11 pilots Richard Conrad and spacewalker-to-be Richard Gordon planned only a casual review of their flight plan while relaxing in crew quarters here.

Goals of their planned 71-hour mission include a rapid rendezvous with the Agena target satellite on Gemini 11's first orbit using the Agena's main engine to scoot them to a record altitude of 850 miles, flying in formation with the Agena while tied to it by a 100-foot cord, and performing an automatic "hands-off" re-entry.

Gordon, 36 - year - old rookie astronaut, plans two ventures outside Gemini 11—a 107-minute stroll during Gemini 11's second day aloft and a 140 - minute "space stand" the third day, when the spacemen pops the upper half of his body outside the spaceship to photograph stars.

Cmdr. Conrad, veteran of the eight - day Gemini 5 flight slightly more than a year ago, and Gordon are to blast off at 10:25 a.m. EDT Friday, 97 minutes after their Atlas - Agena target rocket roars skyward at 8:48 a.m.

COMPLETES SIU STUDY

OTTAWA (CP)—The RCMP has completed a study of documents seized from offices of locals of the Seafarers' International Union, Solicitor-General Pennell said Wednesday. He told H. W. Herridge (NDP—Kootenay West) that the RCMP's findings had been reported to Justice Minister Cardin, who had communicated with the appropriate provincial governments and was studying the RCMP report.

Compulsory Arbitration Bill Irks Saskatchewan Unions

REGINA (CP)—A mass demonstration by Saskatchewan trade unionists today in front of the legislative building was calculated to support vocal denunciations Wednesday of a government bill providing compulsory arbitration in some labor disputes.

A delegation representing a cross-section of provincial trade unions, was to meet Premier Ross Thatcher at 9 a.m. and present a brief on the proposed legislation.

A group of about 200 trade unionists was scheduled to take part in a demonstration about 90 minutes later, 30 minutes after the legislature starts its second day of a special session to consider the bill.

The Essential Services Emergency Act, prompted by a strike of employees of the Crown - owned Saskatchewan Power Corporation, calls for compulsory arbitration without appeal in disputes involving workers furnishing water, heat, natural gas and electricity and employees of hospitals, nursing homes and similar institutions.

Opposition Leader Woodrow Lloyd, sparking CCF opposition to the measure, called on the government to substitute a bill to deal only with the current dispute.

Introduction of the legislation evoked outraged comment from most leading labor leaders, who said it would lead to labor unrest.

Jim Kinnaird, negotiating chairman for the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union which represents about 1,200 natural gas and clerical workers, entering their seventh day of the strike against SPC, said he is "completely shocked" at the "infamous piece of sordid insanity."

He said the bill is designed not to settle disputes but to get rid of any union that does not "toe the line" in keeping with the government thinking of the day in regard to wages and working conditions.

The bill provides the cabinet with wide-ranging powers to declare a state of emergency if it feels a strike in one of the industries jeopardizes life, health or property. It also provides for decertification of any union striking or remaining on strike 10 days after such an emergency is proclaimed.

India Sure 'Sell Out' Not Coming

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — India, the Asian giant of the Commonwealth, today edged close to support of African demands for the use of force to overthrow Rhodesia's breakaway regime.

A spokesman declared that rebel Premier Ian Smith "and his henchmen must not rest assured that they are going to get at naught 700,000,000 people."

He gave reporters a rundown of a speech made to the 22-country Commonwealth prime ministers' conference by Sardar Swaran Singh, India's foreign minister who represents Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Spokesman P. N. Haksar, deputy high commissioner in London, declined to say specifically whether India is in favor of force. But the tenor of his remarks indicated force had to be considered if other measures failed.

He said it canvassed economic boycott a joint Commonwealth solution to the Rhodesian problem rather than a solution by India or any other individual country.

He emphatically rejected any suggestion that Britain is ready to "sell out" the Negro majority in Rhodesia, stating that the British Labor government and people are far too wise for that.

ZAMBIA WANTS FORCE

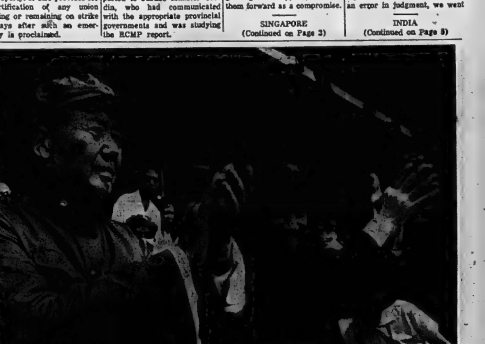
Sikota spoke on the third day of the conference, which Wednesday heard Zambia demand forces and Singapore support some form of limited force to back up wider sanctions on other vital products besides oil.

Asked whether Prime Minister Wilson made a mistake in putting aside the use of force against Rhodesia, the Indian foreign minister said "if there was an error in judgment, we went

Africans Insisting on Majority Rule

LONDON (CP) — Sir Albert Margai, firebrand prime minister of Sierra Leone, tiny West African country, emphasized today that the essential aim is majority rule before legal independence is granted in Rhodesia.

Observers calculated, meanwhile, that African demands for withholding independence until there is African majority rule have won backing from most of the Commonwealth leaders meeting here.



British Prime Minister Wilson now faces the problem of finding some formula that will satisfy his Commonwealth colleagues. He likely will discuss this with his cabinet in the next day or two.

African colleagues at the 22-country Commonwealth meeting not to scuttle the conference or abandon the Commonwealth because of the continuing Rhodesian crisis.

Spectacular as his ideas regarding force appear, Lee pitched them forward as a compromise.

Barry Moore Will Conduct Quinte Crusade for Christ

Crowds across the country have filled auditorium to hear Barry Moore who will be the evangelist for the Quinte Crusade for Christ at the Memorial Arena in Belleville from Oct. 7 to Oct. 16.

Barry Moore, 36-year-old president of Crusade Evangelism of Canada, is a dynamic Canadian evangelist dedicated to the cause of presenting Jesus Christ as the answer for today's problems.

A native of London, Ont., Mr. Moore received his early schooling there. After graduating from London Teachers' College, he taught for eight years.

In 1951, he received his B.A. degree from the University of Western Ontario and later received his M.A. at president of the graduate class of Columbia Bible College, South Carolina, in 1958.

Mr. Moore directed the successfully London Youth for Christ rally for eight years. During these years, he participated in the Youth for Christ International World Congresses in Brussels, Belgium, (1950) and Belfast, Ireland, (1953). He went to France for evangelistic work in 1950-1952 and 1956.

With his teaching background and experience as a youth counsellor, Mr. Moore speaks with authority on youth problems in Canada today. Diversity with humor and convincing logic, he challenges young people to take their stand for Christ and Truth.

In North America, his crusades have challenged thousands to take their stand for Christ and the church from Wood Harbour, Nova Scotia, to Wood River District, Saskatchewan; from Napanee, Ont., to Nipawin, Sask., from Pugwash, Nova Scotia, to Peterborough, Ont. and twice for city-wide crusades in Regina.

In his home church, Mr. Moore met the attractive Audrey Snelgrove who was later to become Mrs. Barry Moore. They reside in London with their three children.

pecially if the emigrant has a family and comes from a crowded urban area. Relatives in Canada are often influential in drawing the rest of the family after them.

Politics hardly ever comes into the decision to emigrate. The effects of Britain's economic squeeze, beginning to make itself felt in suburban villas up and down the country, may in time lead to an emigration "bulge" but Canadian immigration experts doubt it.

"Our big increase in emigrant passengers started well before the squeeze," said a CPR man. "It showed at the turn of the year and since then has run about 75 to 80 per cent emigration every sailing."

The biggest-ever flood of British emigrants to Canada, 100,980 in 1957, was prompted by a political disaster—the abortive Suez invasion of 1956. But special factors other than politics were involved, notably a distinct "war scare" throughout Europe and a feeling Britain was finally finished as a world power.

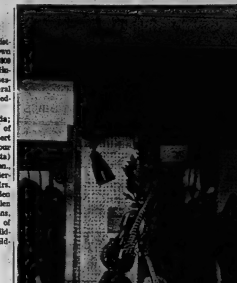
Driving Charge In Two Deaths Is Dismissed

A charge of dangerous driving against Charles Carlyle Tatham, 23, of Redeerville Road was dismissed in County Magistrate's Court this morning by Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

The dismissal came after Tatham elected a trial by judge and jury and the crown presented its case in a preliminary hearing.

The charge arose out of an incident June 4 on Highway 401 about seven miles east of Belleville when Tatham's car, travelling east, collided with a small European - make car which burnt into flames.



The four occupants of the Tatham vehicle testified that the car was stopped dead on the highway and that no lights were visible. A steady rain had been falling throughout the evening of the accident.

It was subsequently found that the small car contained two occupants, both of whom were killed.

Police magistrate said that there was nothing in the evidence to indicate that Tatham was not driving in any other than a completely normal manner.

Extensive Alterations Made At Artistic Ladies' Wear Ltd.

Customers of Artistic Ladies' Wear, Ltd., 301 Front St., will be entering new surroundings when they visit the Belleville store this weekend. But the reason friendly service, wide variety of merchandise and convenient credit terms they have become accustomed to will still be in evidence.

Except for a few last minute details, extensive renovations began late in July have now been completed. Stanley Albert, principal in the business, says customer reaction to the alterations has already indicated acceptance of the "new look."

"Since we took over the business in 1958, our aim has been to provide Quinte area residents with the most modern ladies' wear store in Eastern Ontario," asserts Mr. Albert.

The store has not been redecorated since 1940 and Mr. Albert terms the decision to carry out renovations this year, "a calculated risk not being that customers of long standing become used to familiar surroundings."

"We have tried for a happy medium, not going too ultra modern but at the same time making sure that our store will be appealing to our young, as well as our older customers," Mr. Albert observes.

DISPLAY AREA LARGER

The display area of the store has been increased in size by about 30 per cent. The decor has a touch of the Spanish theme and the color scheme, while pleasing to the eye, helps draw attention to the wide variety of merchandise on display.

A commercial type of vinyl tile gives the floor a one-piece effect while the drop ceiling is tiled attractively and a double facer - board provides something different in wall design.

Twenty - two eight - foot fluorescent lighting units ensure the customer of a look at the true color of all the merchandise.

Two fitting rooms have been built at the rear of the store and the bridal room features attractive wood panelling. Mr. Albert says each bride-to-be will be given "the service she deserves" at Artistic Ladies' Wear. He plans to expand the store's wedding gown department.

"Coats, suits and dresses will remain our specialty," he states.

While the renovations have been taking place, it has been business as usual at the store. Alterations have forced closing of the premises for two days only, as the staff endeavored to keep up its high standard of service to the customers.

The major contractor for the project is Sidor Construction of Trenton.

Ecumenism Never Far From Lips

BY DENNIS ORCHARD

OTTAWA (CP) — The Archbishop of Canterbury, white-haired apostle of Christian unity, carried his message to the heart of government, business and many churches Wednesday.

The Ottawa stop on his fast-paced tour of Canada brought 61-year-old Dr. Arthur Michael Ramsey before a Canadian Club luncheon, to Rideau Hall for tea with the governor-general, and finally to a magnificent church service attended by close to 3,000.

Ecumenism was never far from his lips.

The archbishop said the narrowing of differences between his Anglican communion and the Roman Catholic church in itself was part of the search for Christian unity.

"My philosophy of unity is that when you find a door that yields a little, push it," he told the luncheon audience of business, political and prominent government officials.

To the evening congregation he said: "Christians have a common vision of God and unity despite their "foolish divisions."

Short-Cycle Recession in Canada Seen

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A Queen's University professor warned of investment and the prospect of a short-cycle recession in Canada during the next few years Wednesday. "Has to be taken pretty seriously."

Speaking at the opening of the 1966 Canadian Investment seminar, David W. Slater said Canada is again witnessing the classic story of investment and prices at the tail end of a business expansion.

Large wage increases, combined with slow and disappointing productivity increases, are likely to force up unit labor costs and a drop in profit margins, he said.

Low cyber hand, capital spending intentions appear to be firm, crops are good, inventories are low, government demand is high and the demand for housing is building up.

The recession is likely to be short and shallow "unless of course, we make bloody fools of ourselves," Prof. Slater said.

Seems No Disposition on Part Of MPs to Hear All Evidence Given in Landreville Issue

By KEN KELLY

...TTAWA (CP) — While Mr. ...stice Leo Landreville will get ...s "day in court," there doesn't ...e no disposition on the part ...f parliamentarians to re-hear ...ll the evidence taken by Ivan ...rand in his inquiry into the ...udge's fitness to remain on the ...nch.

Mr. Rand, retired justice of ...he Supreme Court of Canada, ...oncluded that Mr. Justice Lan...dreville was neither a fit nor ...roper person to occupy a place ...n the bench of the Supreme ...ourt of Ontario.

But long before he presented ...hose conclusions to Justice ...Minister Cardin, Mr. Justice ...Landreville had been under con...siderable pressure to resign.

The judge rejected all these ...efforts and, after Mr. Rand's ...damning report was made pub...lic, demanded a hearing before ...a parliamentary committee.

The federal cabinet decided ...he should have that hearing and ...has proposed that Commons ...and Senate set up a 24-member committee to examine Mr. Rand's report and hear Mr. Justice Landreville.

OPPOSE FULL HEARING

An informal caucus of MPs indicates that no one favors re-hearing the extensive evidence placed before Mr. Rand about Mr. Justice Landreville's conduct.

The central point was the judge's acceptance of a large block of stock from Northern Ontario Natural Gas after he went to the bench in 1957. Previously he had been mayor of Sudbury when the gas company was negotiating a franchise with the municipality.

There seems to be a lingering hope among parliamentarians that after he has his say before the committee Mr. Justice Landreville will resign.

If he did, that would save the committee from making a decision either to recommend his impeachment or Parliament or to approve his conduct.

Some members feel that rather than go to the bench before the committee the judge's usefulness as a member of the bench is ended.

To get a clean bill of health from the committee would require, in the view of many MPs, serious challenge of the facts and the inferences of the Rand report. Even if Mr. Justice Landreville could demonstrate that Mr. Rand was wrong in his facts and conclusions, his position on the Ontario bench would remain difficult.

One reason is that the Ontario bar, many of whose members would practise before him, took a hand in efforts to have his stock transaction investigated.

As matters now stand, the committee is likely to receive the Rand report, invite Mr. Justice Landreville to show where it is in error and then wind up hearings by weighing the Rand view against that of the judge.

The ultimate penalty, if the committee accepts Mr. Rand's views, is a joint resolution of Commons and Senate declaring that the judge be removed from the bench. Such a step would be the first in Canadian history against a high court judge.

freight-rate freeze is to permit railways to adjust revenues to pay for wage increases.

The bill creates a superboard, the Canadian Transportation Commission, incorporating all government supervisory and regulatory boards in the transportation field.

Arguing for his unsuccessful amendment, Mr. Thomas said he is not opposed to a national transportation policy but MPs need more information before deciding on this bill.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) said the amendment made sense because it would permit the public and MPs to hear expert witnesses before judging on a bill that has wide implications.

Mr. Pickersgill said the government now seeks only approval in principle. There would be opportunities to move amendments in the Commons after this vote and the committee hearings.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) said he approves establishing the super-board and a national transport policy but would vote against the bill because it contains no provisions against the new commission becoming a bureaucratic monstrosity.

He also said any increases in freight rates will be borne by residents of outlying areas.

John A. Irvine (PC—London) injected one of a handful of humorous contributions to the debate by suggesting the day may come when pneumatic pipelines may be used to move commuter passengers.

He gave this example to back his argument that he has a lively imagination. And if MPs thought his suggestion preposterous they should remember that the public once "laughed at the Wright brothers."

Gordon Aiken (PC—Moose Mountain) said there were fears that 4,000 miles of railway lines might be abandoned in Saskatchewan. But that was unlikely because of increasing grain and fertilizer movements. To allow farmers to arrange new methods of transport, there should be two years' notice for any lines that are to be abandoned.

Ed Schreyer (NDP—Springfield) repeated the view of several NDP members in the debate that the railway system should be brought under a single management before any branch lines are abandoned.

Westerners must be assured their economy will face no disruptions by abandonment or they will oppose the concept, he said.

A. B. Patterson (SC—Fraser Valley) said the bill needs improvement and many questions would be asked at the committee hearings. But his party will support the bill on second reading, he said.

Jack Bigg (PC—Athabasca) said he fears that the word "Push" and should live up to its federal commitment to provide vacancy services even if it loses money.

Commander of Air Transport Command Air Commodore G. G. Diamond (right) and Rear Admiral C. This agreement states the broad policies under which the two signatories will provide for co-ordinated search and rescue activities in the maritime regions of mutual interest. Both organizations have participated in joint search and rescue activities on the Great Lakes region for many years.

Singapore

He said it was "unthinkable" that British and Rhodesian forces should resort "eyeball to eyeball," but Britain had the air and naval strength to enforce sanctions.

Although British Prime Minister Wilson has been adamant in his refusal to use force against the white Rhodesians, only the most optimistic members of the Commonwealth—Canada, Australia and New Zealand—did not have reservations about the opposition also.

Informed sources said Zambia called for the use of force on the grounds that sanctions against Rhodesia had failed. Unless action is used, both Zambia and Sierra Leone threaten to leave the Commonwealth.

But Lee, in his compromise, proposed that:

—African nations give Britain up to another year to oust the Smith regime, and,

—Britain show its determination to topple the Rhodesian regime by toughening its sanctions and the threat of the use of force to ensure they are not broken.

While Lee ruled out "the actual combat of British troops," he said it was possible with Britain's known views in the air and on the sea to ensure that there could be an effective enforcement of a wider range of sanctions."

The Singapore leader sought to win African backing for his proposals by holding out the prospect of Asian solidarity in the event of any walkout by Commonwealth nations if they should still feel this to be necessary by the time of the next Commonwealth conference.

Prime Minister Forbes Burnham of Guyana told a television interview Wednesday night:

"If Britain wants to retain any moral leadership of the Commonwealth she has to show us she is not forced."

The Associated Press reported that African delegates leading the drive to force British military action appeared to be weakening in their stance, apparently encouraged by opening talks on Rhodesian discussion at a long as possible.)

The Rhodesian discussion originally was to end today so the delegates could complete the rest of the heavy agenda for the 10-day conference. Now conference informants estimated the Rhodesian talks will continue well into next week, being only one or two delays for other business before adjournment Sept. 14.

One conference source said Wednesday night there may be no real break toward a concensus until next week—until after the traditional weekend of private talks among the Commonwealth leaders in the host country home of the British prime minister.

The possibility of major differences continuing beyond that point has been raised by the refusal of Zambia's President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, who would not attend this week's conference in person, has threatened to pull Zambia out of the Commonwealth unless satisfactory measures are announced.

Although Rhodesia has occupied all of the conference's time

Rt. Rev. Wilfred C. Lockhart Is United Church Moderator

By NEIL LOUTTIT

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP)—The principal of United College in Winnipeg, involved in a controversy seven years ago after his resignation was demanded, today finds himself in a position that is the most controversy.

Rt. Rev. Wilfred C. Lockhart, 59, was elected moderator of the United Church of Canada at the opening Wednesday night of the church's 20th general council. He is the third moderator from Winnipeg.

The 336 voting delegates chose Dr. Lockhart from among five nominees to head Canada's largest Protestant denomination. He succeeds Very Rev. Ernest M. Howse of Toronto who retires after a two-year term.

The other nominees were Rev. Frank L. Myers, Regina; Rev. D. Douglas Smith, Montreal; Rev. George A. Wicket, Windsor, Ont.; Rev. E. Melville Aitkin, Hamilton, and Rev. Elias Andrews, Kingston.

Dr. Lockhart was the centre of controversy at United College after he penned a letter written by Prof. Harry Crowe to another professor.

He was accused by some of his faculty of infringing on academic freedom. He resigned and had withdrawn the resignation.

The controversy resulted in several staff resignations, including that of Prof. Crowe.

In his acceptance speech, Dr. Lockhart said erosion of Christian principles in the modern world is the greatest problem facing Christianity.

The opening conference following his election, he described the principles of union with the Presbyterian Church in Canada as the first joint Anglican-United committee on the union of the two faiths—a "only the beginning."

Commissioners to the general council will vote on the principles later this week. The Anglicans Church approved them last year.

"We must go on to a kind Anglican - United commission," Dr. Lockhart said. "But we must take our time to ensure there are no fringes, we must not leave anybody out on the flanks."

He said impatience would be the wrong attitude but hoped the principles would be accepted by the United Church at this council.

He said the final decision on union to come from church councils rather than individual members or congregations.

Dr. Lockhart also spoke on Canada's divorce laws and the drop-out rate of ministers. He said divorce should include grounds other than adultery and suggested that demands placed on modern-day ministers likely is a large factor in determining the drop-out rate.

In the six public schools, 2,230 registered, a decrease of 50 to 90 from last June's enrolment figure. Thirty more students than expected for kindergarten calls for a revision of planning, public school inspector E. T. Morris said on Wednesday.

Murray Twp. Council Pays Contractor

TRENTON — Murray Township council voted $21,500 to be paid to contractor E. E. Seegmiller for progress payments on the new suburban road, Monday night. Consulting engineers Totten and Simms will be paid $8,500 and the CNR $7,000 for extra work in connection with the overpass bridge on the road.

Meanwhile, council has received two further accounts in connection with the road; $28,000 for Conn Bridge for work on the road between the overpass and highway 401 and $61,700 to Seegmiller for work south of the overpass to highway 33.

Council also voted to pay bills for two weeks' work on township roads for $42,500. Roads have been graded and gravelled and this sum also pays for materials, fencing materials and equipment overhaul.

Council will meet again this Friday to interview some of the 19 applicants for the job of road books' clerk, made vacant by the resignation of Mrs. Wm. Manners who has handled the books for 36 years.

No decision has been reached on the hiring of a new road superintendent, a position made vacant by the resignation of Clifford Wannamaker, superintendent for the past 36 years.

And township assessor Henry McCoil, who also collects dog taxes, reported he had run over and killed three dogs in Trenton last week . . . inadvertently.

Judge Reserves Judgment on Installation

TRENTON — Judgment in a hearing before Ontario Municipal Board Judge Lodge was reserved on Wednesday on the question of whether or not the town will install a 16-inch watermain on Henry Street between Queen and Dufferin.

Residents from the street appeared at the Trenton hearing to protest the installation which would be put in under local improvements.

The utilities commission wants to install the larger main for two reasons: to better water pressure in the area and to

Defence Minister Hellyer Under Conservatives' Fire Over Unification Plans

OTTAWA (CP)—The Conservative party said "in a very junior member of this House and for that one person's attack in two days on Defence Minister Hellyer Wednesday.

The accused him of contempt of Parliament for going ahead with unification of the armed forces before placing any unification legislation before the Commons.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled out of order a motion by Michael Forrestall (PC—Halifax) for an emergency debate on the matter.

The motion said Mr. Hellyer had tampered with the evidence which Rear-Admiral William Landymore had intended to present to the Commons defence committee in June.

It also said the minister is pursuing an improper course without statutory or parliamentary authority in "dictatorially" proceeding with unification despite strong objections.

There was grave danger that Mr. Hellyer's "illegal actions" would be irrevocably completed before Parliament had a chance to debate his policy.

Finally, Mr. Forrestall said, the minister had "created a further serious decline in service morale and a state of widespread concern about Canada's ability to maintain an effective defence force."

Mr. Hellyer said Mr. Forrestall's charges "are so ridiculous that I do not propose to answer them."

Transport Minister Pickersgill interjected that Mr. Diefenbaker was "arrogant and insufferable."

George Hees (PC—Northumberland) said Mr. Hellyer had informed a television audience that unification would be accelerated and all that was needed was legislation to change the name of the unified forces. He meant that, there was great urgency for a debate.

Mr. Lamoureux said adjournment of the regular Commons business to discuss a specific topic can could only when there is an urgent need for debate and when there was concern over a sudden emergency. That was not the case here, he said.

Water Seminar

Water has been very much in the news of late. The United States, in particular, is concerned about its supplies, and every so often there is talk of having additional supplies piped in from Canada. But politics, as well as national need, are involved in this, and Canada quite rightly is putting its own interests first in relation to this vital commodity.

Now Ottawa has been caught somewhat on the hop by the announcement of President Johnson's international conference on water for peace. The conference will be just about the biggest seminar on water ever held, but observers say its rudderlessness may limit Canadian participation. The gathering is still months away — it will be held in Washington from May 23 to 31 — but Canada received its invitation only on August 16, yet Washington is asking that abstracts of background papers be submitted by October 1 and the full papers by January 1.

This is going to call for computer-like speed in preparing papers and for swift consultation with the various provincial jurisdictions which largely control such resources.

The scope of the researchers' task may be appreciated from an Ottawa spokesman's appraisal of the agenda. He described it as "encyclopedic," covering just about every facet of water and water problems in the world. Included are examinations of the economic, social, political, technological, administrative and other aspects of water and its uses on the planet.

Canada, whose prolific water resources are the envy of its neighbor to the south, as well as of other nations, will have much to contribute to such a conference. It is unfortunate that such short notice has been given, but it should not be beyond the competence of researchers to have the necessary material available in the time allotted.

Nat Supersonic—Yet

The day when subsonic air travel goes out and supersonic flight comes in will be one to excite the imagination. Giant airplanes will streak across the sky to distant places reached less remote by the tremendous power plants of the jets. Transatlantic travel for example will be cut to about two hours from the current time of about six hours.

Britain and France have been working jointly on the Concorde, a 1,500 m.p.h. transport, and the United States, which was a little behind its overseas rivals getting into the supersonic design field, is now reported to be working on a comparable model.

But let us not be too hasty. The aircraft are on the drawing boards, but it will be years to come before the travelling public will be riding in them. That is the word from Gordon McGregor, president of Air Canada. And the reason, he says, is that ground aviation facilities are lagging far behind developments in the air.

The Air Canada executive says that with the advent of supersonic jet travel, the time spent getting through an airport could easily double the flight time on an international trip. Indeed, this kind of situation is not unknown today. Delays occasioned by mechanical trouble, by the journeys from the airport to the city, or from one airport to another often add tedious hours to air travel today.

So imagine the problems that might arise with huge supersonic jets arriving at airports around the world, spilling their passenger parts at a time, and with commuter-train frequency. The problems of course involve not only the adequacy of the airports themselves (with regard to runways and radar facilities), but such matters as processing passengers on the ground, restaurant facilities and so on.

Until these ground problems are solved, Mr. McGregor said at a recent CNE directors' luncheon, supersonic jets will not mean a great advance in air travel. Air Canada, he revealed, has no plans to buy them.

As it is, the subsonic jets now in use are pretty handy machines. And six hours or so in one of them, say on a flight across the Atlantic, or across this continent, can be a relaxing experience.

School Bus Law

Parents and children by now should be well acquainted with the new school bus regulations which require motorists approaching a bus from either direction to stop when the vehicle's red lights are flashing.

Ideally, this should ensure absolute safety for children crossing the road. On the other hand, the chances of accidents occurring cannot be minimized. As one mother of school children reminds us, motorists must still be cautioned to look both ways before crossing. And of course this applies in any situation where they are crossing the street or highway, whether on the way to school or not.

In other words, the children should be taught not to rely entirely on traffic being at a complete stop when they start across the road. They can be certain the road is clear only after they have looked both ways.

Judiciary Under Fire

Brockville Recorder and Times

Concern for the image and the future of Canada's judicial system has been the subject of comment by many public figures, as well as newspapers during the past year. In some instances there has been a call for the bar association to take the lead in updating the system and in taking steps to uphold the prestige and thereby the image of the judiciary. Aside from the case of Mr. Justice Landerville, there have been many instances which have caused the respect of the courts to be lowered in the minds of the public. Canada cannot afford to allow this deterioration to continue.

Bachelors Hard to Please

Oshawa Times

A marriage bureau expert has disclosed that 40-year-old bachelors are the most difficult to please when they finally seek experienced help in acquiring life partners. "They're doggedly set in their ways.

Heather Jenner, who has arranged over 11,000 marriages in 25 years has also found that when men are faced with a living example of their requirements they usually complain about "lack of spark".

Both sexes seem to plump for sterling qualities rather than appearance, Miss Jenner stated on a recent BBC broadcast. But the men, the vain things, have the habit of lying dreadfully about their height, when supplying details of themselves.

Marriage bureaux have increased in Britain and elsewhere since the end of the Second World War. This is partly due to the shifting population, with so many young people leaving the country and heading for the big, lonely cities.

The bureaux, persevere, too. "One girl drew a picture of Jenner as a slim secretary was finally matched eight years and many lonesome nights later. By that time the woman was an overweight head-girl working in a remote part of the country.

The Jenner bureaux charges $20 for registration and an additional $30 after marriage. Bureaux have one significant fact going for them. Their matches show fewer divorces than the national average.

Transplanted Tissue Follows Old Rules

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is endometriosis? Can it be the cause of ovarian cysts? Is there any treatment for either except by surgery? — Mrs. A. B.

* * *

These are two different conditions, although both can be present in the same patient. I'll explain them separately.

The endometrium is the lining of the uterus. Sometimes bits of this tissue (which incidentally, is unlike any other tissue in the body) begin to "wander."

This living, you see, is a bit with each menstrual cycle, and a new one forms. In the process of being shed, some of it may escape through the Fallopian tubes, becoming implanted on the outside of the uterus instead of the inside where it belongs.

This tissue is extremely sensitive to certain of the female hormones. That, indeed, is how it comes to be shed each month, followed by reconstruction of a new lining. These hormones "order" it to do so.

Now when some of the tissue has become transplanted, it still follows its original pattern of behavior and activity. But at the right time, some menstrual bleeding. But the bleeding, of course, is in the wrong place, and the location where the tissue has attached itself. This is endometriosis.

The result is menstrual discomfort. It can interfere with fertility, if the transplanted tissue becomes attached to the bowel wall, here can be bowel problems. Endometriosis is to be suspected when a woman past 30 has increasingly painful periods.

There are two ways to combat it. Twelve-e with hormones sometimes can counteract the effect of the ovarian hormones and stop the growth. Otherwise surgery is the answer, either to remove the tissue which has settled in the wrong place, or to remove the ovaries and thus eliminate the ebb and flow of ovarian hormones which affect the tissue. Removal of the ovaries is usually preferred if the woman is past 40 and nearing the end of her child-bearing years anyway.

In any event, endometriosis subsides at the menopause because then the ovaries cease activity.

As to ovarian cysts, there isn't a great deal to be done except surgical removal if they cause enough discomfort to warrant it.

But you will note that removal of the ovaries, in some instances, can be the answer to both problems — endometriosis and the cysts.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am allergic to egg whites, celery, beef and beans and—don't rat them my mouth breaks out in a rash of ulcers. I get relief from these symptoms by taking potassium chloride and ascorbic acid tablets. Is there any harm in this? — Mrs. E. W. S.

There is no harm in use of ascorbic acid. Potassium chloride in hard-coated tablets is known to produce irritation and sometimes ulceration of the small bowel. Therefore if ascorbic acid alone does not give you relief, I suggest using one of the liquid preparations of potassium which do not irritate the intestinal tract.

Dear Dr. Molner: My doctor advises going to a specialist for silicone injections for an unsightly scar on my chin. What is your opinion? I thought dermabrasion was used for such things. — Mrs. F. J.

Dermabrasion (or skin-planing) is effective with many types of skin blemishes and scars, but it also has limitations since it cannot cope with deep or severe scarring. You went to your doctor for advice; he gave it to you. I advise following it.

Young People Out West

Saskatoon Star-Phoenix

In the pioneer days, those who lived in the Canadian West were young, and this was an appropriate qualification in what was referred to as a young man's country. When the past two or three winters are remembered, many residents in those parts are inclined to say the young are welcome to it. Even some of the middle-aged young generation find belowzero weather too hard to take.

With the passing of the years and the aging of the West, it is reasonable to expect that this is the country in which all generations share in terms of numbers.

According to the nose-counting experts, not only is the West the country of the young, but it is the North American continent.

For instance, 50 per cent of the North Americans are 25 years old or under.

In Saskatchewan, 27 per cent of the students now in our high schools will be eligible to vote is Saskatchewan's election if it is held in 1968.

In that same election, 47 per cent of the voters will be 35 years old or under.

In theory at least, the power of the young is immense, so overwhelming that if used en masse, it can turn governments and elect new ones. The young, if effectively organized, can change taste and style, determine consumer trends, and perhaps they can do something about politics.

The point is that the young do not tend to organize effectively or exercise on their own behalf as a solid unit. Although generalizations may be challenged, it seems accepted in a general way that the parental influence is much more powerful in Eastern Canada than is conceded. Intelligent parents influence their offspring in dress, manners, and the way they vote in politics. Presumably this is done by example rather than by edict.

In the opinion of some Saskatchewan parents, the majority of those 27 per cent now in high schools who will be eligible to vote in 1968 are conservative in outlook. They do not accept the beatnik influence. Or, if they have accepted it in the past, they are rejecting it now. But some parents might get quite ar-gument from their sons and daughters about the trend of today's teen-agers to a more sedate style of life.

Icelanders Are Go-Go

Barry Conn Hughes in The Canadian

Iceland is a modern, independent nation with a population of 190,000 and a high standard of living. Nearly 1,000 years ago, Icelanders were writing sagas on their ancient farms; today there are proportionately more books published in Iceland than in any other country. A hundred years ago, most of them got about on sturdy Viking ponies; today every other Icelander takes to the air once a year.

Iceland has no railways, and roads of crushed rock aren't the best, so flying really is the best way to travel around — and to get to the country in the first place.

The Viking horses average only 13 hands and have fine distinct gaits. Once you find the right one, you needn't post; just settle in the saddle and jog along.

Riding down a quiet country road among the mountains, you find yourself taking deep breaths of the purest air imaginable and feeling pretty darn good. And Iceland do.sn't seem so curious after all.

Dollar Volume

St. Catharines Standard

Dr. John W. Kendrick, authority in the field of natio al wealth calculation, writing in the August issue of The Nirgna Guaranty Survey, notes that the same dollar volume of wealth is produced per income in the United States than in the past. At the same time, it is pointed out, a smaller share of the wealth total is being directly used for the production of income. Conversely, a larger proportion is being employed in the direct satisfaction of human wants. What then about the future?

Ottawa Offbeat

"Santa Claus" MacEachen Trying on Pearson's Shoes

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Poor Prime Minister Pearson!

Taking all the knocks for setting the match to the exploding firecracker string of strikes.

When all the time it was Health Minister Allan MacEachen, really, who lit the fuse.

The match that touched off the labor fireworks, of course, was the government-arranged-and-federally-blessed 30 per cent wage increase that sent the striking Quebec longshoremen back to work after five weeks of beatings, blastings, and burning along the St. Lawrence waterfront.

What was good enough for the dockers was good enough for the Seaway workers, and as the 30 percent torp Prime Minister's wage guideline into shreds, it became the magic figure from where other unions "bargained" up.

(And it is up, away up for the Postal Workers who grant 50 percent as their price for not carrying the Christmas mails.)

Almost unbelievably when the railroad unions asked for 43 percent, the critics indicted the Prime Minister for having set such a high style in strike settlements.

LEFT OF LEFT

But while it was the Prime Minister who came to his Centre Block office each day to be told right to announce the inflated price of labor peace along the St. Lawrence and the Seaway, it was Allan MacEachen who had engineered the deal between the stubborn dockers and the reluctant stevedoring companies.

All the Prime Minister had to decide, actually, was to give the tycoons their head in the matter of social welfare and assistance cheques running high, in the multi-millions.

So Allan MacEachen, in the eyes of hundreds of thousands of Federal cheque recipients, is the young Santa Claus of the social welfare-conscious government.

But he has, and is reaching for, even more power.

Money power.

Into the MacEachen power bin of External Affairs, Mitchell Sharp of Finance, Paul Hellyer of Defence, J. W. Pickersgill of Transport and Robert Winters of Trade and Commerce.

But even more now, it is the second string where the action is, with Joe Greene of Agriculture, Edgar Benson of Revenue, Solicitor General Lawrence Pennell, Jean-Luc Pepin of Mines, and the man MacEachen on this "Backup Bench," who call the signals from left of left.

It has been MacEachen who has been mainly responsible for the government concentration on social welfare to the exclusion of any real attention to economics.

Concerned almost exclusively with the labor vote, the administration has given the hosts of its hand to the business and industrial community.

POWER PLAY

A cagily tough operator—although he doesn't look it — Allan MacEachen has kept the ultra-slim minority government as mesmerized with the self-evident political truth that there are more votes to be won than in management, far, far more people is a position to take than to give. And that the taxpayer will forgive and forget.

So it has been social welfare and power politics that is the priorities.

MacEachen works from the Health and Welfare, the Federal department that pumps out the Family Allowance, the Old Age Pension and other social welfare and assistance cheques running high, in the multi-millions.

So Allan MacEachen, in the eyes of hundreds of thousands of Federal cheque recipients, is the young Santa Claus of the social welfare-conscious government.

But he has, and is reaching for, even more power.

Strictly Personal

Is "Hospitality" Lacking

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Twice in the same week, I have heard complaints from foreigners about American "hospitality." Since I have always thought of us as a generously hospitable people, I was uncomfortably surprised to hear these views.

One couple I know entertained an industrialist from India. He told them that, during the two or five weeks in America, this was only the second time he had been asked in most of the evening in an American home.

Another couple, the following night, mentioned having entertained two visitors from France — and these visitors made similar remarks about "coldness."

"In France," they said, "we take business associates home to lunch and dinner; but people we like and want to know better, we invite to our homes."

Part of our seeming ungraciousness, I am sure, comes from our odd sense of time and "entertainment." To most Americans, this means dinner at an expensive restaurant, followed by a night-club show, what is euphemistically known as "doing the town."

It scarcely occurs to us that the home is supposed to be the focus of social life, and that the best and most fruitful "entertainment" can be had while sitting and talking over food and wine.

Food and night-club shows are pretty much the same all over the world; and a foreigner learns little about America from exposure to a constant round of martinis and mambo bands.

The only way to learn is how we think and behave away from the pressures of business and the even grimmer pressures of "making the rounds." He wants, in short, the human and domestic side of us, and we show precious little of it.

Whatever warmth and friendliness I developed in Europe, I came from being asked to sit in the family circle, not from being dragged to sights and scenery. I came to love the Italian people from the atmosphere I felt in their homes, not from the decayed palaces and dank cathedrals.

Amy Robsart, wife of Robert Dudley, was found dead 404 years ago today—in 1560—apparently from a fall. But Dudley was at the time known to be Queen Elizabeth's favorite courtier and perhaps her lover, so many people, such as the Spanish ambassador, were convinced Lady Dudley had been murdered. Rumor promptly linked Elizabeth and Dudley with romcemplating marriage but citizens were generally impressed not saying that the Queen had borne children to him. Created Earl of Leicester, Dudley waited 26 years before marrying again and died in 1588, perhaps of poison.

Cruiser Rides Out Lake Storm

TORONTO (CP)—A missing cabin cruiser reached safety here Wednesday night after riding out two days of storms in a Lake Ontario cove.

But the hunt for an oddly-rigged sailboat with three persons aboard continued.

Both vessels were caught in weekend squalls that whipped Lake Ontario.

The cruiser, carrying Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Gibson of Toronto, trailed into a cove to escape the storms and found refuge in a large water-filled quarry at one end of the cove.

India

along with it" at the last Commonwealth conference in Lagos, Nigeria.

As Haksar stressed that India, with its 450,000,000 people, is lynchpin of the new Commonwealth.

It set the pattern when it remained within the Commonwealth on obtaining independence in 1947. Haksar spoke warmly of how 700,000,000 people have come to independence throughout the Commonwealth in the last 19 years.

The Indians struck the same note as Arnold Smith of Canada, Commonwealth secretary-general, with a statement that the Rhodesian question was not one of black versus white, or Britain versus other Commonwealth countries.

"All of us are in it," Haksar declared.

Asked whether India might leave the Commonwealth in sympathy with a threatened withdrawal by Zambia and some other African countries, Haksar said: "our whole approach is that there should be no break."

He spoke of the "staggering disproportion between the size of the problem and the apparent ineffectiveness" of the vast Commonwealth to deal with it.

Rhodesia's tiny white population of 220,000—many of them British immigrants—were defying more than 700,000,000 people, he said.

WON'T BE TIED DOWN

Asked whether he had specific proposals, Haksar said India felt that at this stage it must let itself down to "cut and dried solutions."

"We have always regarded the Commonwealth as our special interest," Haksar added in stressing that India has no intention of withdrawing.

Asked whether India would contribute if a Commonwealth decision is made to use force, Haksar pointed to his country's record in providing for the United Nations in Korea and Congo.

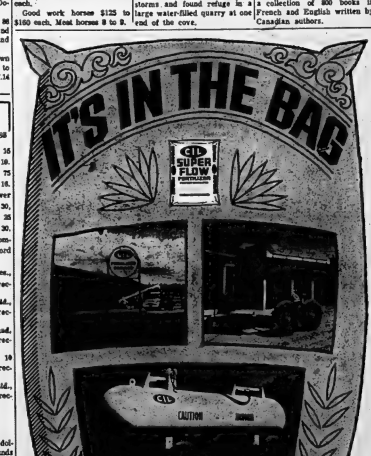
Truck Overturns on City Street



An estimated $1350 in damages resulted from a two-vehicle accident late yesterday afternoon at the corner of Queen and George Streets in the city.

The mishap occurred when a 1962 compact car driven by Maria Rua, 23, of 209 Albert Street collided with a 1964 pickup truck, which was southbound on George Street. Driver of the truck, 44-year-old Vincent James Cassibo of 220-A Colman Street, was uninjured, despite the fact that his vehicle overturned after the impact.

Miss Rua who had been driving east on Queen Street at the time of the accident, reportedly suffered torn ligaments to her left knee, but was not hospitalized.

City police investigated the accident, and charges are pending.

BUTTER TARTS, OIL PASTRY

A friendly call on my neighbor Bessie yielded a delicious dividend - a new butter tart.

Bessie's Aunt Dorothy uses oil pastry for her pie shells and Bessie used that recipe for the pastry for butter tarts but used her own filling. By good luck I wandered into her kitchen when the butter tarts were just out of the oven and she gave me one.

It was remarkably good for the oil pastry makes a crisp thin crust. So unhinhingly I asked for the recipe and graciously Bessie gave it to me.

I went to share it with you.

BESSIE'S BUTTER TARTS (with Aunt Dorothy's Oil Pastry 12 medium-large tarts)

Pastry:

2 cups sifted pastry flour
2 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2-3 cup salad oil
¼ cup cold milk

Butter Tart Filling:

3 tablespoons butter
1 cup brown sugar
1 egg
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup raisins
¾ cup chopped walnuts
½ teaspoon vanilla

To make pastry: Sift flour, sugar and salt into bowl. Measure and combine oil and milk and beat until creamy. Add to dry ingredients and mix. Dough is oily. Pick up a small ball of dough and press into tart tins. You may use standard - size muffin pans or do as Bessie did and use 12 individual foil tart pans which measure 3" at the top and 2" at the bottom. Press dough into tart tins with your finger tips until you have lined them with dough to about ⅛" thickness. Make top edge neat.

To make filling: Cream butter until soft and blend in brown sugar. Beat egg slightly and beat into creamed mixture. Stir in salt, raisins, walnuts and vanilla.

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

THURSDAY

Pan fried baby beef liver, creamed onions, Duchess potatoes, cottage cheese-and-chive-stuffed tomatoes on lettuce; Bessie's butter tarts (see Thurs.); coffee.

SUNDAY

Roast loin of pork; spiced crabapples; pan roasted potatoes; quick-cooked shredded cabbage (see Sat.); chilled marinated bean salad; harvest pumpkin pie; tea.

Spoon into pastry - lined tart tins, filling them 2-3 full.

Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for about 8 minutes. Then reduce heat to 375 deg. Fahr. and bake about 12 or 15 minutes longer, or until pastry is tan and crisp, turning pan in oven at halftime.

Note: 1) Bessie opens her oven door for a few moments to reduce oven heat quickly to 375 deg. Fahr.

2) If you are using the Oil Pastry for a pie shell you can mix the whole business, from start to finish, in the pie plate you are baking the pastry in. A dandy shortcut.

Successful Living

Unreasonable Jealousy Harmful to Marriage

DEAR DORIS: Bill and I are both 28 and planning to be married. I have a very jealous and suspicious nature, and also a great inferiority complex. I believe this stems from my childhood, as I was always second best in everything.

I am not jealous of every female that gets near Bill; only the ones that are flirts and obviously out to entice him. Bill has agreed with me that the girls involved are definitely flirts. One is married, not happily; the other is a divorce. Bill is also a flirt, which he claims is merely play and does not mean a thing.

DORIS CLARK

Each time I feel myself getting annoyed to the point of having an outburst of temper, I try to tell myself: He loves me — only me! (I usually don't hear myself.)

I realize this is a sickness on my part and I very much want to cure it. Bill will not marry me until I can trust him, and I certainly cannot blame him, as I know I would not want to be accused of something I was not doing. — GREEN EYES.

DEAR GREEN EYES: Since most of have moments of feeling less than adequate, jealousy is a familiar emotion. With you it has become a way of life; and the childhood disappointments started it.

An unreasonable jealousy results in the object (Bill) feeling too possessive. We need to be free — or we don't express our best. (I'm assuming Bill has no deliberate intention of taunting you!)

If you could achieve a self-confidence completely apart from anything about Bill, this would give you the poise you need about the girls. A trained counsellor — social worker, psychiatrist — would help you sort this out.

Mutual trust is certifically important to a marriage.

DEAR DORIS — I am 15 and my sister is 16. We have a gossiper across the street who is always telling lies about us. One day when my sister was baby sitting there were some boys next door making a loud racket. The next thing we knew Mrs. X had spread around that these boys were in the house where my sister was baby sitting. She was never asked to baby sit there again.

My mother says that every neighborhood has its gossips and to ignore Mrs. X. We tried to for a little while but got sick of hearing about other lies that she told about us. We can't even bring our boy friend around without her looking at us as if it's a crime.

Please help us, Doris, because pretty soon she'll make us have a bad reputation. — GETTING A BAD REPUTATION.

DEAR GETTING — Disgusting, isn't it? Some people without enough to do spend hours behind the curtains spying on busy, happy teen-agers and trying to make something of it; something scandalous, preferably.

Keep your skirts clean and she'll be the one with the bad reputation. Your mother is right.

DEAR DORIS: I'm not the best cook in the world, and sometimes I think a person would have to be a magician to prepare interesting meals on the allowance I get for food. — HELP!

DEAR HELP!: I'm not a cook either, but in the Lean Thirties I helped dispense what we called "relief" to unemployed breadwinners in Montreal.

At one point my imaginative boss had us conduct a contest, inviting menus and recipes from the homemakers who were making that skinny food voucher stretch to feed a family. We were deluged.

The imagination those women showed was an inspiration. So we made up a cookbook and called it How We Do It. Out of the past I have thus gleaned 15 recipes: ten in the class of savory dishes, five desserts; all good food, inexpensive and tasty.

You and any other desperate Mother Hubbard may have my leaflet by sending ten cents and a stamped envelope, and ask for "Economical Recipes."

* * *

(When writing in, allow Doris four weeks for private reply, which will be sent if a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.)

New Changes Help Nurses Says Director

TORONTO (CP) — Nurses should welcome and aid changes in their profession, Elsbeth Geiger, president of the Registered Nurses Association of Ontario said Wednesday night.

Miss Geiger told a graduating class at the Hospital for Sick Children, where she is director of nurses, that much time spent in indirect patient care will be eliminated by the new technological changes being introduced into hospitals.

Prize winners at the ceremonies included: Ann Debus, Rostock, Ont., general proficiency; Carol Freeman, Sault Ste. Marie, highest standing for three years of nursing, and Mavis Losee, Sault Ste. Marie, for professional development over three years.

Mini-Skirt Models Skip About Stage

NEW YORK (Reuters)—Mini-skirted models skipping to the rhythm of a rock band gave a startling send-off Wednesday to Britain's biggest sales drive in New York.

Woman fashion writers stared open-mouthed as the girls, at modelling latest London gear, danced down the platform in bobed dresses and shifts cut seven inches above the knee.

It was part of London designer John Bates' avant-garde collection, displayed here as a prelude to the Britain Today Fortnight opening next Monday.

The models, all Americans, immediately took to his colorful wardrobe. "Gee, it's great. It's short but I want it shorter," one of them said of a shiny purple skirt she was about to put on.

"Outrageous," "magnificent," "exaggerated," ran the comments from the New York fashion writers as they sat back after the show.

INTERESTS MUST MATCH

VANCOUVER (CP) — It's compatibility of interests and temperament that are the basis for marriage, says Dr. P. M. Middleton of Riverview mental hospital. "Romance and sexual harmony can enter the marriage later, but if you're not comfortable with your partner's temperament and interests right from the start you never will be," he says.

Strained Back Stops Walk

LONDON (CP)—Dr. Barbara Moore, marathon walker, has postponed her planned Canada-to-London protest march because of a strained back.

The 62-year-old health-food advocate said Wednesday she had planned to start the 600-mile walk Sept. 3 "but a tree fell on me and strained my back."

Her husband said his wife was hurt when a branch of a tree fell on her about a week ago.

"But I feel all right now and I shall start the walk in a few days." Dr. Moore said, estimating she can do the trip in about 10 days.

She has described the tramp as "a personal crusade in protest against the inequality in court of lay people who can't afford legal representation."

She recently lost a prolonged battle with politicos in the Surrey town of Frimley over use of a right of way across her property.

Vanilla Still Favored For Ice Cream

OTTAWA (CP) — Vanilla is still the flavor favorite among ice cream buyers.

The consumers section of the federal agriculture department says it's way out in front of chocolate truffle and a host of delectably-named varieties.

The reason appears to be that vanilla can go on top of other desserts or under sauce and still taste good.

Canadians buy a million pints of ice cream a day and they're getting a product with all the important nutrients of milk and 10 grams.

Experts in the consumer section say you should keep it in a zero-cold freezer until you're ready to serve—ice cream left out in a warm room is a favorer. ice breeding ground for bacteria.

When serving, use a dry scoop. If the scoop is wet, they say, the water drops will form ice crystals in the ice cream left over.

ANTIQUING

Hi Su: If you're a modern Cinderella with a coal shuttle hidden away in the basement bring it out and shine it up or paint it with high gloss enamel.

You'll be right in fell swing with-the antique collecting set. Use it inside the house or out as a planter or waste basket, for kindling or barbeque brickets. — Getting the re.

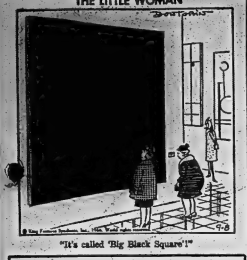
SPOT REMOVER

Dear Susanna: All the way from South Africa comes this emergency ans swure. My friend whose husband is stationed there, described it in a letter. She discovered she could remove a nasty grease spot from light clothing (butter, lard, etc.) if she sprinkled it thickly with either dusting powder or baby powder. It's best to leave it for several hours. Apply the powder immediatly if possible.

When a garment is brushed, presso! Out comes the grease spot. — Miss V. Prull.

FRESH MINT LEAVES

Dear Susanna: Think how pleasant it will be four or five months from now to have fresh green mint leaves on hand.



They are fresh and delectable right now and can be frozen perfectly in flat layers between sheets of waxed paper.

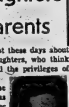
Once they are frozen, store them in a small, tightly sealed plastic container or bag. — B. L. S.

TRY FOREIGN SCHOOL

MONTREAL (CP) — A Swiss boarding-school may solve mothers' problems if they feel North American life is too fast for their 17-year-old daughters. "A girl coming out of a finishing school at 16 will have learned to ski, will speak French beautifully and will have been very, very safe," says Montrealer Joan Storey, who taught at a Geneva school for seven years.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"It's called 'Big Black Square'!"



Ann Landers

Overbearing Daughters Impose Upon Parents

DEAR ANN LANDERS — You hear a lot these days about bearing mothers. How about married daughters, who think are entitled to mother's services and all the privileges of the home they left?

When our daughter was first married she had a habit of helping herself to our Christmas ornaments, linens, pots and pans — whatever she wanted.

Finally I told her I wouldn't touch her things if she agreed not to touch mine. She snapped, "I'm shocked that you would be so petty," and added, "After all, I used to live here."

ANN LANDERS

Yesterday my neighbor came over in a state of shock. Her daughter had telephoned to say she was leaving her children with "Gram" while she and her husband took a two-week vacation. "Gram" told her she was sorry but she and "Gramps" were taking a vacation too, and she'd have to make other arrangements.

Her daughter shouted, "Well, if you don't care about your grandchildren I'll see to it that you aren't bothered with them in the future," and hung up.

Please print this letter and tell mothers what to do. We hate to lose our daughters just because they marry, be we hate to be taken advantage of, to. Wherein the liee? — HONEST INQUIRER.

DEAR HONEST — The line is where a mother draws it. Some girls would leave their kids forever and move out on the whole house if they could get away with it.

It's a safe bet tha the daughter who ran roughshod over her mother when she lived at home will continue to do so after marriage. In such families, the children have trained the parents.

Where there is love, respect and room for honest expression, you will not find the kind of exploitation and emotional blackmail your neighbor is experiencing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — What do you have against unmarried females anyway? In a recent column (you were addressing yourself to a self-pitying wife) you said marriage had given her "respectability." Are you suggesting that without a marriage a woman can't be respectable? Do you believe that all unmarried girls are out cutting around?

You also said "Marriage gives a woman security." If married women are so secure why do so many married women work?

Your last line was a gas: "Marriage is not for everyone". You can say that again. Of the 15 married people in this office marriage means nothing to 9 of them — MISS 20-20 VISION.

DEAR VISION — Since your vision is so good I hope you can see something decent in the world. I saw no evidence from your letter. Thanks for writing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Yesterday my husband took his mother and me to lunch in a restaurant. I picked up an onion ring with my fingers, which I admit was poor manners, but I did it and I am sorry.

My husband glared at me and said, "Put that down and eat with a knife and fork or I'll move to another table. I'm ashamed to be seen eating with you."

I nearly cried. If this had occurred when the two of us were alone he wouldn't have said anything. Why must he always wait until he has an audience to correct me? — HUMILIATED.

DEAR H. — Because he wants to add to your discomfort.

You violated a rule of etiquette, but he did something worse. He violated a marriage vow — the one that reads, "To love and to cherish — till death-do us part."

* * *

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Experts Say Blondes Should Wear Blue

By MARGARET NESS

TORONTO (CP)—Blue is the color for blondes, fashion experts say. So if you're blonde by nature or inclination and born in September, you're double sapphire-prone.

Wear a cornflower blue sapphire and confound the popular saying that blondes are dumb. For sapphires were held by the ancients to be stones of wisdom. They were said to impart the attributes to clear thinking to their September-born wearers.

One September-born woman who fits into this clear-thinking category was Queen Elizabeth I. Another is Carol.

However, all sapphires are not blue. If you are dark-haired you can choose white or near black, as well as green, violet and yellow. But the most highly prized is the blue and this is the color in which synthetic sapphires are made.

These synthetic stones are used in costume jewelry. True sapphires are much too expensive. This fall, for example, you can use pseudo-sapphires for your important dangling earrings and big matching pins. Trifari features all the pseudo-gems in a series of pins in orbital shape, such as shooting stars, bursting rays and star bursts. You can use another eyes for the amusing animal pins that most jewellers like for casual wear or for the tete-a-tete set.

FAVORITE OF ROYALTY

True sapphires have always been popular with kings and princes. The most famous set of sapphires is probably the necklace owned by ill-fated Marie Antoinette. It was rescued and became an heirloom in the French royal family, handed down to the Duc de Guise, the pretender to the throne of France.

Sapphires were the choice of another tragic queen, the Tsarina, a German princess of Hesse. Her favorite diadem, which had been created for an earlier czarina, included several large pear - shaped and oval sapphires.

She also liked jewelled aigrettes. One in the form of a feather was made from thin wires on which were arranged five big sapphires and 75 small ones, as well as diamonds.

When the czarina moved her head, the wire allowed the jewels to tremble and glitter.

Sapphires were popular with the British Royal Family. Two notable ones are in the imperial state crown. One is called the Stuart sapphire and was noted as far back as 1605 as "great blue sapphire" in the inventory of royal jewels ordered by James I.

The other is called St-Edward's sapphire. Tradition has it that this sapphire was in a ring owned by Edward the Confessor and was buried with him in 1066. Later it was removed from his finger, was lost, found again and somehow managed to survive centuries of conflict.

HELD CLOAK TOGETHER

When the Princess Royal married Viscount Lascelles, King George and Queen Mary gave her a sapphire set of tiara, necklace, earrings and corsage ornament in cornflower blue. Edward, then Prince of Wales, presented his sister with a sapphire bracelet.

Probably the most historic of all sapphires was the one used to fasten Lucrezia Borgia's cloak together when

TRUDY

"Can you pass the railroad station so we can give my husband a lift home?"

Why should our son have a newspaper route?

The living is good. Plenty of money, nice home, nice furnishings, another salary raise in sight; we've never had it so good. Why should our son manage a newspaper route?

Most any educator or businessman will tell you why in three simple words: it builds character.

Oftentimes the youngster who grows up in comfortable circumstances and who gets his weekly "handout" from dad never realizes the value of money or the efforts required to make it and manage it, until he's on his own. By then attitudes and habits are difficult to reverse.

But the newspaperboy quickly learns valuable lessons that stick. While making money on a newspaper route is important, the experience of getting-the-job-done-no-matter-what is more important. When through route management, responsibility and self-confidence are acquired at this early age, a newspaperboy has an advantage over other youngsters that no amount of money can buy.

If you're still wondering whether your son would benefit from newspaper route management, ask a community businessman or civic leader, or better still, write our Circulation Department.

Do Earth Ripples Mean Big Quake Is Coming?

By RALPH DIGHTON

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Is a major quake brewing in the bowels of the earth beneath Southern California?

New studies showing storms of tiny tremors along one of the big faults (cracks)—in the earth's crust in this area—and dead calm along another large fault—were reported Wednesday at a meeting of the American Geophysical Union at the University of California at Los Angeles.

"We don't know enough about earthquake prediction yet to say what this means," Dr. James Brune of the California Institute of Technology's seismological laboratory said in an interview.

"There are theories that swarms of these microquakes may precede big shocks. It is also possible that lack of activity along a fault may indicate a strain is building up between the faces of the fault that could result in an earthquake of large magnitude."

Several seismologists in recent years have predicted that Southern California is overdue for a major earthquake. Records indicate big tremors in this area come about 100 years apart and the last one was in 1857.

One theory is that it takes 100 years or so for enough strain to build up to cause a major earthquake, and that this interval may be lengthened by micro quakes relieving the strain. If there are no microquakes, this could mean the fault is locked and strain is building up without being relieved, or it could mean there is no strain in that area.

Hay Fever Sufferers Beware

AREAS FOR HAY FEVER SUFFERERS TO AVOID — Shaded areas of the map are the parts of Canada where ragweed — the major cause of hay fever sufferers' sneezes — is most common. Unfortunately, many of these are also the most heavily settled parts of the country. Figures after major cities on the map show the pollen index. Places with reading over 10 are one for sufferers to avoid. Between five and 10 is fairly good, below five good, and below one excellent. British Columbia and the Atlantic provinces are in the good to excellent categories, except for Nova Scotia's Annapolis Valley, and it doesn't have enough ragweed to cause sufferers much trouble.

Viet Nam Election Candidates Include Great Many Teachers

A Canadian Press reporter in Viet Nani finds that, as in Canada, MANY candidates for the constituent assembly are professional people. The difference is that teachers, instead of lawyers, are the largest group.

By DOUGLAS AMARON

SAIGON (CP) — Qualifications of the 540 candidates in South Viet Nam's Sept. 11 election for a constituent assembly are much like those of Canadians who run for Parliament, with the emphasis on men and women with professional background.

But where candidates with legal background usually top the list of professions in Canada educationists, predominate here. More than 90 professors and school teachers are running; 25 lawyers and judges are in the field.

Businessmen, members of provincial and village councils, civil servants, doctors—including four described as "Oriental medicine practitioner"—and servicemen make up the bulk of the remaining candidates. There are 94 servicemen.

Nine newspaper men, including a publisher, are in the field and there is an interesting assortment of other occupations such as village chief, painter, fisherman, artist, mechanic, printer, nurse, advertiser, policeman, gardener and peasant.

Of the women candidates, half are business women and housewives; most of the others are teachers or in the medical profession. Minimum age for a candidate is 25 and there are five of that age; a landowner and former civil servant share oldest-candidate honors at 72. Average age is 45.

PLAY DOWN POLITICS

Two types of seats are among the 108 at stake—associated ticket and single ticket. In associated - ticket districts—those with the heaviest population—voters elect a slate of from two to six candidates; in single - ticket districts it is man against man. Dailies multiple ridings such as Halifax which conceivably can send one Liberal and one Conservative to Ottawa, oppose in the associated-ticket districts here runs to the slate, not to its individual members, and all those on the winning slate are elected to the assembly.

While politics are not supposed to be a major issue in this election, which is merely to choose the men and women who will determine South Viet Nam's future form of government, many symbols and slogans being used by the slates have political connotations.

Some being used in Saigon for instance are "For the People," "Independence," "Democracy Reconstruction," "Viet Nam's Map," "Labor independence," "South Renaissance," "People in the Nation," "Army People Reconstruction," "Building of Democracy," "Chinese Vietnamese."

Other slates merely use symbols that will help to identify them to illiterate voters — flowers blooming, a hammer, palm leaf hat, dragon, buffalo, torch. These symbols appear not only on posters throughout the districts but also will be on the ballots.

The referendum, incidentally, foots the bill for posters, pamphlets and other printed promotional material so no slate or candidate has an advantage over another in that field of campaigning because of wealth.

Plan State Funeral for Verwoerd

From AP-Reuters

CAPE TOWN (CP)—The body of assassinated Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd was to be flown today to Pretoria, South Africa's administrative capital, for a state funeral Saturday.

Verwoerd's family requested that the body not lie in state, and it was expected that it would be placed in a private funeral parlor.

The South African Press Association reported that the ruling Nationalist party would caucus Tuesday to appoint a new leader who automatically will become the next prime minister.

SAPA said the new prime minister would make his first appearance in parliament Wednesday. Acting Prime Minister Theophilus Dongres, Verwoerd's finance minister, was considered a strong contender, having got the post to Verwoerd by 12 votes after the death of Prime Minister Johannes Strijdom in 1958.

Other likely contenders are Justice Minister Balthasar Vorster and Transport Minister Ben Schoeman.

POLICIES REMAIN

The Nationalist caucus pledged its "unshakable determination" to follow Verwoerd's policies, ending any speculation that his death might result in a weakening of South Africa's stringent racial policies.

Without detailing the investigation of the assassination, Vorster said information "indicates it was the deed of one individual and his actions, and movements are now being investigated in the finest detail."

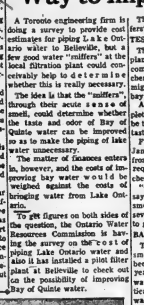
Scores of persons were being questioned about the assassin, Dimitri Tsafendas, a tall, powerful, grey-haired man in his late 40s who had been working as a messenger in parliament for a month. He stabbed Verwoerd to death Tuesday.

A security policeman said Tsafendas had not been charged yet. Vorster promised that "the law will take its relentless course" in dealing with the assassin.

Police investigations into his motives and background pressed ahead, but many of the details were still confusing and conflicting.

Inquiries extended as far afield as Portugal, where Tsafendas was reported to have been held in prison. He was originally due to appear in court today, but was not expected to do so before next week since officials are able to hold him under the law which allows detention for 180 days without court appearance or trial.

PILOT FILTER PLANT at the Belleville Water Purification Plant is being set up to determine if taste and odor of Bay of Quinte water can be improved. Plant manager James Scriven checks the equipment.



Sensitive 'Sniffers' Needed To Help Local PUC Discover Way to Improve Quinte Water

A Toronto engineering firm is doing a survey to provide cost estimates for piping Lake Ontario water to Belleville, but a few good water "sniffers" at the local filtration plant could conceivably help to determine whether this is really necessary.

The idea is that the "sniffers", through their acute sense of smell, could determine whether the taste and odor of Bay of Quinte water can be improved so as to make the piping of lake water unnecessary.

The matter of finances enters in, however, and the costs of improving bay water would be weighed against the costs of bringing water from Lake Ontario.

To get figures on both sides of the question, the Ontario Water Resources Commission is having the survey on the cost of piping Lake Ontario water and also it has installed a pilot filter plant at Belleville to check out the possibility of improving Bay of Quinte water.

FILTRATION PLANT WORKER Alf Rodgers shows how "sniffer" checks treated water for objectionable odors.

That is where the water "sniffers" will come in.

TEST METHODS

The idea of the pilot filter plant is to check out different combinations of filters and chemicals to see what best might improve the quality of bay water.

After the samples are completed, the treated water has to be tested almost immediately for taste and odor.

Filtration plant manager James Scriven says that ideally from four to six "sniffers" are required to get an accurate check on the treated water.

"One 'sniffer' is no good, says Mr. Scriven, "His sense of smell may be too critical, so several opinions are necessary to get an accurate check."

BAD LAST YEAR

This summer the taste and smell of Belleville water hasn't been too objectionable. But a year ago when the bay level was at an abnormal low, practically every local householder was complaining.

But to be a good "sniffer" an especially sensitive sense of smell is necessary and not everyone qualifies. For one thing they must be non-smokers.

For instance there are only two men on the filtration plant staff who can determine the different degrees of objectionable water odor.

The treated water is placed in beakers, heated to 140 degrees fahrenheit and then compared with other samples, one or two of which are completely free from water.

Mr. Scriven says there is no room for guessing and with four to six "sniffers" a more accurate check is possible.

HAS DETERIORATED

There is no question that the quality of Bay water has gradually deteriorated over the years — at one time water from the bay was used without treatment.

Today three different chemicals — chlorine, alum and fluoride — are put into the water in prescribed quantities, while in addition the water is passed through micro - screen equipment to screen out algae and also goes through filter beds.

There are many other chemicals which are used for treatment of domestic water supplies but the cost factor must be considered.

For instance, carbon can be used as a filter to take out odors, but under known procedures the cost for treating large quantities of water would be so high as to make it impractical.

Water Resources Commission officials are inclined to feel that the city is responsible for much of the objectionable taste and odor in the Belleville water supply.

SUSPECT GARBAGE

But Mr. Scriven is not quite so sure and feels that the land fill method of garbage disposal used here might in some measure be responsible.

And he says personally conducted tests taken from various parts of the bay seem to indicate that the water quality is lower at Belleville than, say, at Trenton.

At Belleville the land fill method of garbage disposal has been used on both sides of the Bridge Road. Dykes or berms were placed to prevent seepage into the bay but these may not have come completely up to expectations.

At any rate Mr. Scriven says the land-fill garbage disposal method is not allowed in many other localities where there is even a remote possibility of drainage getting into water supply.

But back to the pilot filter plant and the need for water "sniffers."

WORKING A MONTH

The plant has been installed for about a month but detailed adjustments have been necessary for the addition of completely accurate quantities of chemicals.

Mr. Scriven feels that this has now been accomplished and it is expected the pilot plant will soon be placed on official test.

That is when the additional "sniffers" will be required.

Ideally, according to the filtration plant manager, they would be persons who could be called in whenever testing of pilot plant samples was necessary.

A Conservative attempt to force an emergency debate on service unification was ruled out of order in the Commons.

Michael Forrestall (PC—Halifax) moved for the debate, saying Defence Minister Hellyer was acting "unilaterally" in proceeding with unification without parliamentary approval.

He said the minister was in contempt of Parliament by "tampering with Rear-Admiral William Landymore's letter to the defence committee. Mr. Hellyer said if he acted illegally Mr. Forrestall should lay a charge.

Unification could not be accomplished without amending current laws and this would give Parliament a full chance to debate it.

The Commons continued debate on the bill to redraft transport legislation, deciding to let first reading stand. In principle, was ruled out of order.

The Commons sat four hours past its usual 6 p.m. Wednesday adjournment time in a push to get the bill past second reading. This stage had not been reached at adjournment.

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. EDT to continue debate on the transport bill. The Senate stands adjourned until Oct. 14.

Chinese Talks on Viet Nam Seem to Mean They Don't Want To Go to War With States

By WILLIAM F. RYAN
Associated Press Staff Writer

China's actions and words these days suggest that the men now emerging at the top of the heap in Peking consider Moscow a threat to their chances of sailing down and ensuring their power.

Foreign Minister Chen Yi's statement in Peking about the possibility of talks with the United States on Viet Nam and the statement by the Chinese ambassador in Warsaw, full of belligerence toward the Americans, are not so contradictory as they might seem.

It all seems to mean that the Peking regime does not want to get involved in war with the United States. But it badly needs an outside enemy to excuse its failures, meaning it could hardly do without the United States as an enemy now and apparently is ready to do Soviet Union to its list of opponents for good measure.

MOSCOW TARGET

The latest sequence of events seems to make Moscow the main target of Peking's manoeuvres. First, Chen talked to Japanese visitors about the Nanking talks, which he didn't want to see the United States and China "come to a clash." This sparked hopes in Washington of a change in Peking's attitude toward negotiations on Viet Nam.

Then the Chinese ambassador in Warsaw, Wang Kuo-chuan, after one of his innumerable meetings with U.S. Ambassador John Gronouski, accused the Kremlin of "singing a duet" with Washington about U.S.-Chinese reconciliation. Moscow had been needling China about those talks in Warsaw, the only point of Chinese-American contact for years.

Hopes for a changed Peking attitude faded again.

But there was no real conflict between Chen's remarks and those of Wang. Chen—and Mao Tse-tung—had spoken before about not wanting a clash with the Americans.

The Chinese ambassador would not act on his own. He takes orders. Evidently the idea was to surround Peking's position and defend it from Soviet insinuations that the Chinese, after all, were not all that tough in facing up to the Americans.

Since there has been no real change in attitude, there is no picture of the rise of the Kremlin and all "revisionists" as the main targets of such goings-on. One can surmise that Peking really wants a final rupture and is working hard to prod Moscow's patience to the breaking point.

Canada Has Key Role to Play In Solving Commonwealth Problems Say Archbishop

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada has a key role to play in solving Commonwealth problems, the Anglican Archbishop of Canterbury said Wednesday.

"Canadian wisdom and statesmanship will play a crucial part in helping the Commonwealth in the coming years overcome its difficulties and to develop as a multiracial family of nations," said Dr Arthur Michael Ramsey.

In the main address on secular themes of his current Canadian tour, the archbishop told the Ottawa Men's Canadian Club:

"I see the idea, ideal and fact of the Commonwealth . . . as a great reality in the world toward which Canada has made a very signal contribution.

"I'm quite sure that Canada is going to go on helping in all greatly both in religious reconciliation and in the reconciliation of nations and peoples."

TOURS CANADA

Dr. Ramsey is beginning the second week of a month of travel in Canada, his third visit and first extensive tour of the country.

He spoke of his meeting in March with Pope Paul and noted that he was accompanied there by a Canadian, Bishop Ralph Dean of the Caribou diocese.

An impassioned leader of the movement toward church unity, the Archbishop of Canterbury described his outlook like this:

"I regard the task of Christian unity as rather living in a room surrounded by doors which in different ways are shut — still with the stiffness caused by many historical circumstances which we did not create and which we cannot rapidly cure.

"And my philosophy of unity is that when you find a door that yields a little, push it; and don't mind how many doors you push or how many directions you push them because some of them are very stiff."

External Affairs Minister Martin, acting in the absence of Prime Minister Pearson, greeted the archbishop as he arrived by plane Wednesday from Montreal.

In a service Wednesday night, Ramsey was installed as honorary clergy of five faiths joined a congregation of close to 3,000 in worship with the archbishop.

A congregation of about 1,000 with another 800 overflowing into an adjoining hall, attended at Christ Church Cathedral. After his sermon, Dr Ramsey moved by motorcade to a second Anglican church a mile away to give his blessing to 1,200 personnel who had listened to the cathedral service by loudspeaker.

The main congregation included Governor - General and Mme. Vanier; member of the diplomatic corps; Agriculture Minister Greene and Immigration Minister Marchand representing the federal cabinet and Conservative Leader Diefenbaker.

Rt. Rev. E. S. Reed, Bishop of Ottawa, welcomed bishops of the Roman Catholic church and clergy of the Lutheran, Greek Orthodox, Baptist, Presbyterian and United Churches to the service.

SPORTSLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

Out in Los Angeles the 49'ers are rated one of the best football teams in the country.

At the Bay'ad Quinte Country Club the "49'ers" are a galaxy of gals who have secrets only their hairdressers know and at their annual high jinks put on a show that would make Barnum, Bailey and the reversed Ringling Brothers turn somersaults in their caskets.

They call their annual costumed extravaganza the "Golden Girls Tournament". It was originated last year, I believe by the games committee headed by Betty Walmsley and this year consisting of Betty Ingram, Clair Haywood-Jones and Lois Gill.

A membership "must" is over, around, on or about 40 years of age. No birth certificates are required because — well, gals are gals and whoever heard of a middle-aged madame or mademoiselle fibbing about her age? No?

Yesterday, some thirty of these royal and not so ancient golfing gals sided and abetted by caddying "youngsters" a lot of them eligible for 1967 membership, kicked up their heels in a golf gambol that lacked nothing for color and enthusiasm.

The costume motif as laid down in tournament rules emphasizes oldtimer styles. After all, fifty years is fifty years, but from what I saw yesterday these middle-age mesdames threw Time to the hereback and hid a half century under the colorful cloak of masquerade.

Prior to the tournament and warming-up session at the country club, they paraded in a dozen or so cars through the city in a riot of color and fun. I asked a sidewalk oldtimer what it was all about and he mumbled "looks like a circus. I'm waiting for the elephants."

At the country club they took time out from teeing off for the regulation nine-holes tournament to pose for pictures.

And I saw a half dozen mid-centurian garbed in the habiliments of the Gay Nineties form a chorus line and perform their idea of a Mentanatre "cancan" that may have crushed a bit, but was good.

For sheer originality of costume these fifty-fifty Pierettes, collectively speaking, and their caddies made a gaggle of circus clowns look like rank amateurs.

While, as was noted, the motif called for "oldtimers' costumes" the colorful ensemble ran from a ragged-pants hill-billy to a turn-of-the-century milkmaid complete with accessories of a rubber udder and milk-stool.

Another came as a 1900 golfing "toff" strictly British, y'know with cap, monocle, pipe, grey tweeds and plus fours. Another was a Victorian Fleet Street type with derby, white shirt, black tie, etc.

A "convict" circa, 1900 Wandsworth Prison wore the habitual striped ensemble carrying a small chain with a golf ball attached. Some chose the bathing suit of the Beer Era era with bulging pantaloons, long stockings, full bloomers and "nothing" showing.

When the entire "cast" assembled for a group photograph against the green sheen of a putting green, it looked like a rainbow walking to be put together.

The Golden Girls "Tournament" has proved that it is one of the more colorful highlights of the club's ladies division seasonal activities. Emphasis, it appears to me is placed more on fun color and pageantry and fun of the event rather than what the score cards tell.

Oh yes, they play golf too. As I said, they play nine holes with a trophy going to the winner and prizes to the greater majority of the contestants. They topped off the fun with a barbecue and entertainment.

In this age of pills to combat every ailment from flat-feet in water on the knee or brain, it seems to me, the "pill" manufactured by golf-ball producers, is going a long way in prolonging the spirit and exuberance of these ladies of the links who have reached the half-century mark.

Collectively they had a "ball" — and it wasn't one you blast with an iron or a wood.

Much credit for the success of the 1966 "Golden Girls Tournament" goes to convener Betty Walmsley and her hard-working committee. They staged a tournament "show" yesterday that future conveners and committees will find extremely hard to beat.

Nationals' Play For Pros Broken Up

By STERLING TAYLOR
Canadian Press Staff - Writer

A play by Canada's national hockey team to get three former professional players for the 1967 world championships at Vienna was broken up Wednesday.

Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said in Montreal that all three —Carl Brewer, Billy (Red) Hay and Jack Bownass — are still professionals with little hope of reinstatement as amateurs.

"In order to play for the Canadian national team they must first be reinstated by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association," Campbell said.

"To gain reinstatement, each of them must demonstrate he can no longer make a livelihood out of professional hockey.

To do this, they would have to be waived through all teams in all the professional leagues—not just the NHL. Then they would be eligible for reinstatement."

Their release from professional ranks is the main snag in a plan to recruit them for the world championship Buzz Abearne, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, said in Vienna Wednesday that all three had been declared eligible to play as amateurs.

NO FOUNDATION

Campbell termed the pronouncement "completely unfounded" and meaningless until they are released by their current professional club owners.

Brewer, 27, a former NHL all-star defenceman with Toronto, retired last September after seven seasons with the Maple Leafs. He announced his desire to play for the national team in Toronto Tuesday.

Hay, 30, a centre with Chicago Black Hawks since 1959, retired last June. He denied Wednesday that he had any intentions of playing with the nationals.

"I don't know how the rumor got started," Hay said in an interview from Calgary where he is a geologist with Sedco Explorations.

"All I know is that I talked to Father Bauer (Rev. David Bauer, adviser to the national team) and explained my position, which is simply that I can't afford time away from my job."

NEEDED IME

Hay said when announcing his retirement that he was doing so in order to devote more time to business.

Bownass, 36, is a defenceman who played most of his professional career in the minor leagues. His last professional season was 1963-63 when he played with Los Angeles of the Western League. He had brief stints with Montreal Canadiens and New York Rangers of the NHL.

Campbell gave other and more immediate reasons why the three players will probably not be reinstated.

He said Brewer remains under suspension by the NHL and on Toronto's inactive list, while Hay is still on Chicago's active reserve list. /

"He (Hay) has not signed or executed any voluntary retired papers," Campbell said. "Bownass applied for reinstatement in August of 1965, but did not get ill and worked for New York Rangers in some capacity last season.

HAS NO CONSENT

"He has received no consent for reinstatement and there has been no action taken to restore his amateur status since January of this year."

As Brewer's case, reinstatement is almost an impossibility. Toronto coach Punch Imlach said Wednesday that he will not release the retired defenceman.

"There's no possible way I can put him on the list, knowing that the New York Rangers would pick him up," Imlach said. "It's not me that's going to stop him, it's the whole league."

Imlach placed Brewer on the Leafs' inactive list last year after he left the Toronto training camp and returned to university The move made it possible for another club to draft him.

Emile Francis, general-manager of the Rangers, said Tuesday, however, that he had been trying to get Brewer for the last year and doubted if New York would consent to waive him out of the league.

Aussie Hurts U.S. Hopes

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP)— Australia's Fred Stolle severely damaged America's title hopes with a straight-set victory over third-seeded Dennis Ralston Wednesday and 12th-ranked Clark Graebner of Beachwood, Ohio, emerged as the lone U.S. survivor in the second quarter-finals of the U.S. tennis championships.

Stolle played brilliantly and pulled off phenomenal shots at two set points to crush Ralston, the U.S. No. 1 player, 7-5, 6-3, 9-7.

Stolle was one of five Australians to sweep into the final eight, along with defending-champion Manuel Santana of Spain, the Wimbledon title-holder; Mark Cox, the flashy left-handed Briton, the the dark-horse Graebner.

JOHNSON WINS

The rest of the Aussies included Roy Emerson, two-time winner of this event.

Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., unseeded, won the first set points while leading 5-4 in the third before bowing 2-6, 6-3, 7-5, 6-3.

And the great Santana had his hands full in Chuck McKinley. Santana finally prevailed 9-7, 8-6.

Graebner eliminated Graham Stilwell of England 9-11, 8-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Nancy Richey of the U.S. beat South Africa's Esme Emanuel 6-2, 8-6 while Rosemary Casals won over Peaches Bartkowicz 6-1, 7-5.

In the third round of the women's singles Vicki Berner of Vancouver was eliminated 6-2, 6-1, 8-3 by Norma Baylon of Argentina.

Take Over Cellar Spot

Yanks Look Back-Nobody There

By ED SCHUYLER Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Ralph Houk knows how Frank Chance felt 53 years ago.

Chance, a member of baseball's Hall of Fame who starred at first base for Chicago Cubs' teams, managed New York Yankees in 1913 when they were in last place on the next-to-last day of the season.

Today, Houk's Yankees occupy the American League cellar for the first time in September since that day in 1913.

The Yankees, winners of 29 pennants and 20 World Series, plunged into the basement Wednesday night by losing 3-2 to League leading Baltimore Orioles while Boston Red Sox were edging Cleveland Indians 5-4 and Kansas City Athletics were beating California Angels 6-3.

The loss left the Yankees 28½ games off the pace, a game back of Kansas City and one-half game behind ninth place Boston.

In other games Wednesday, Minnesota Twins dipped Chicago White Sox 6-4 and Detroit Tigers downed Washington Senators 4-0.

The Orioles loaded the bases on a walk, a sacrifice - fielders choice on which pitcher Moe Stottlemyre failed to throw out the man at second and an intentional walk to Frank Robinson.

Brooks Robinson then hit a hard grounder to third base which Clete Boyer bobbled and then attempted to get a double play instead of going to the plate for a force out.

Boston erupted for four runs in the sixth in beating Cleveland. Jose Tartabull's bases-loaded single brought home the first run and broke a 1-1 tie.

Danny Cater was the big man in Kansas City's victory. He doubled home a run in the first and singled home a pair in the seventh. Jack Aker picked up his 24th save for the Athletics, stopping a threat after California loaded the bases in the sixth.

Earl Wilson gained his ninth straight victory and 18th of the season against nine losses for Detroit by limiting Washington to three hits.

Minnesota came up with four runs in the eighth to beat Chicago. Rich Rollins singled home the tying run, and the winning run scored when outfielder Ken Berry scooped up the ball hit by Rollins and threw it into the Chicago dugout.

The Wizard of Candlestick Park did it again.

Just one day after he had extracted a three-hit performance from the previously listless Ray Sadecki, San Francisco manager Herman Franks played presto - chango with his line-up Wednesday and the Giants beat Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2 in 12 innings.

The hidden player trick involved Frank Johnson about whom just a bit more than nothing was known. Until Tuesday, Johnson was spending his days at the Giants' Pacific Coast League farm club in Phoenix, where he hit .315.

With the score tied 2-2 in the bottom of the ninth and a chance to climb to within half a game of the National League-leading Pittsburgh Pirates, Franks put Johnson in left field.

SCORES ON ERROR

Johnson singled to right centre in the 12th inning and Willie Mays scored when Dodger catcher John Roseboro dropped the ball.

In the only other National League games, Atlanta Braves beat Pittsburgh Pirates 8-3 and St. Louis Cardinals edged Houston Astros 6-5.

The Dodgers are now in third, five games behind Pittsburgh.

Bill Woodward's bases-loaded single in the fifth drove in two runs and broke a 2-2 tie sending Atlanta to its victory over the Pirates. It was Pittsburgh's first straight defeat and the Braves' eighth triumph in nine starts.

Tim McCarver hit a two-run homer in the eighth off Mike Cuellar for the St. Louis decision. Dave Giusti had held the Cards hitless through five innings. Mike Shannon homered in the seventh for St. Louis.

Mikita Leads NHL Golfers

MANCHESTER, Vt. (AP)—Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks took a one-stroke lead Wednesday at the halfway mark of the first annual National-National Hockey League players' golf tournament.

Mikita, who has twice led the NHL in scoring, had a 76 for the first 18 holes. Bobby Rousseau of Montreal Canadiens was second with a 78 while Jim Pappin of Toronto was third with 79.

Gordie Howe of Detroit and Vic Hadfield of New York Rangers were tied for fourth, each with a 77.

In Yugoslavia

World Regatta Opens

BLED, Yugoslavia (CP)—The largest world championship regatta in rowing history opens today in this resort near the Austrian border in northern Yugoslavia, with no country expected to dominate the competition the way Germany did at the last meet in 1962.

Thirty - two countries are competing crews in the regatta, held every four years halfway between Olympic dates. The entry list, for seven events, shows 360 boats with 540 oarsmen.

Canada has entered the eights, the four without cox and the pairs without cox and is rated among the leading contenders in all three events.

On the whole, the United States, West and East Germany, the Soviet Union and Italy appear to have the strongest contingents, but there are also highly regarded crews in particular events from France, Britain, Czechoslovakia, Holland, Switzerland, Australia and Denmark.

Heats begin today, leading up to the finals in all events Sunday.

Canada's best chances will probably be gliding through the water with the coxless four from Vancouver's Burnaby Lake Aquatic Association, the crew that won this event at the summer's Royal Canadian Henley regatta in St. Catharines, Ont.

Cementmen City Hotel Tie 3-3

City Hotel kept their hopes for a Commercial Softball League finals berth alive last night by playing a 3-3 deadlock with Point Anne in the cementmen's opener at the CNRA Park.

Point Anne leads the four-of-seven semi-final three games to two and the next game is scheduled for Point Anne tonight, at 6.15.

The clubs played a see-saw battle last night. Each side scored one in the first, the cementmen moved ahead 2-1 then City grabbed a 3-2 margin after five innings. Point Anne closed the scoring to tie it in the sixth.

Ron Maracle hurled three-hit ball for Point Anne and Larry Hull gave him a battle with a four-hitter on the Hotelmen's hilltop.

Maracle struck out nine but walked seven. Hull fanned four and passed only one. Each side had three errors.

Point Anne hits went to Mike Cook, with a double, Ron Maracle, Rick Rossbush and Vern Whalen, each with a single.

City Hotel singles went to Larry Potter, Bob Brooks and Moe Hawkins.

A walk, fielder's choice and Maracle's hit scored the Point-ers' initial tally. An error and two fly balls netted their second. Another bobble and Rossbush's single plated the final equalizer.

Potter's hit, a sacrifice and fielder's choice scored City's first. A walk, base hit and an error got the second home. Two free tickets, a stolen base and a wild pitch closed their scoring.

Joe Namath, New York Jets' $400,000 quarterback, was the American Football League's Rookie - of - the - Year in 1965, but Friday he might only be sophomore-on-the-bench.

Jets' coach Weeb Ewbank says Namath is "physically fine and ready to play," but adds that "it's a toss-up who will start against Miami Dolphins — me or Mike Taliaferro."

Taliaferro directed the Jets through an unbeaten exhibition season after Namath injured his knee in the first quarter of the first game.

The new Dolphins are looking for their first victory after five exhibition losses and a near miss loss to Oakland Raiders in their opener last week.

Fans around the country will see the battle on national television at 7:30 p.m. EDT.

HOW TO HIT A 'SOFT' WEDGE SHOT

A very valuable shot to have in your golfing repertoire is the soft, floating wedge shot that settles quickly on the green.

This shot requires a smooth, even tempo, as opposed to the sharper blow you might employ on a normal wedge shot.

To produce a slow, smooth swing, I find it helpful to emphasize my turning of the shoulders, and to minimize hand action.

In short, I swing with the feeling that my club is moving solely as a result of my shoulder turn. I keep my left arm and wrist firm and extended—as if they formed the spoke of a wheel that is turning around my shoulders.

Barring Playoffs

Series Opens October 5

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner William Eckert announced Wednesday the dates for the 1966 World Series, allowing a day off for travel between site switches and taking into consideration the wind-tunnel reputation held by San Francisco's Candlestick Park.

The commissioner said he had given authorization for four teams—American League leading Baltimore and three top National League contenders, Pittsburgh, Los Angeles and San Francisco—to print series tickets.

Eckert also said that in the event of a playoff there would be an open date between the end of the playoff and the start of the series.

The commissioner said games would start at 1 p.m. local time with two exceptions. The Sunday game in Baltimore would begin at 2 p.m., because of city ordinance and if San Francisco wins the National League pennant the Giants would start all their games at noon.

Eckert said this was to allow for the "wind and traffic" at Candlestick Park, both of which increase considerably later in the afternoon.

Barring a playoff the World Series would begin in the National League city on Wednesday, Oct. 5. The second game would be Thursday, Oct. 6 in the NL city, then Friday would be an open date for travel.

The series would move to the American League city Saturday, Oct. 8, Sunday Oct 9 and Monday, Oct. 10, if necessary. The series then goes beyond that point, Tuesday would be a day off for travel with the series winding up in the National League city Wednesday, Oct. 12 and Thursday, Oct. 13.

Eckert said that ticket prices would be the same as in the past, $12 for box seats, $8 for reserved grandstand, $4 for standing room and $2 for bleachers.

Wayne Farrell Has No-Hitter

Wayne Farrell pitched a seven-hit no-hitter last night to give Mel Barrigan a 2-0 victory over Park Dale in the first game of their bantam baseball playoff.

Farrell struck out 11 Park Dale batters and handed out free passes to two others. He received errorless support from his teammates. Paul Hall was his catcher.

Jim Wood horled good ball in a losing effort, tossing a three-hitter, striking out ten and walking but one. The club erred twice.

Glen Carleton banged out a double with Brian Coughlin and Moe Thompson each getting a single for the Barrage hits.

Second game in the two-of-three semi-finals is at 1:00 Saturday afternoon. In the other bantam series, Farrell Motors and Mead Johnson play at 10:00 Saturday morning. Both games will be played at Park Dale.

Argonauts Pick Up Eagle Day

TORONTO (CP) — Veteran quarterback Eagle Day, released by Calgary Stampeders more than a week ago, was picked up by Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference Wednesday night on a five-day trial basis.

Day, who completed five full seasons with the Western Football Conference Stampeders, lost his first-string job to Fritz Liske earlier this season. The Stampeders had obtained Liske from Toronto.

The Argonauts had turned down several previous offers from the Stampeders for Day and refused an outright purchase 10 days ago.

The acquisition of Day would give the winless Argonauts two quarterbacks. They started the season with rookie Wally Gabler.

Day was the leading passer in the WFC during two of his last five seasons and second once.

Annual Skeet Shoot Commemorates Six-week Elephant Hunt in B.C. in 1926

KIMBERLEY, B.C. (CP)— Every summer, skeet - shooters and marksmen from across Western Canada gather here to commemorate British Columbia's most bizarre sporting event — an elephant hunt.

This year, rifle and gun experts were on hand from B.C., Alberta, Saskatchewan, Idaho and Washington state for the trap and skeet-shooting contests.

It was the 40th anniversary of B.C.'s biggest big game hunt, held in the summer of 1926 when seven elephants broke away from a circus at Cranbrook, 30 miles southeast of this East Kootenays city.

The Selle-Flole Circus was on a summer tour of Western Canada at the time and the group's 14 elephants were becoming increasingly cantankerous as the circus moved into B.C.

They stampeded at Edmonton and again near Calgary but were quickly recaptured both times.

When the circus arrived in Cranbrook Aug. 6, the combination of high altitude—about 3,000 feet above sea level—and thick smoke from nearby forest fires made the huge grey animals even more unruly.

As handlers started setting up tents a small dog got loose among the elephants. Seven of them charged into the bush and the hunt was on.

CANCELLED CIRCUS

Since a trained elephant in those days was worth up to $20,000, circus managers cancelled their bookings and pressed every available man into the search.

Early next morning a message unique in the annals of the CPR was sent over the telegraph to station points in the East Kootenays.

"To all trains east—at Sirdar: Keep lookout for elephants on the tracks. Advise if sighted from first telegraph office, giving location."

The first persons to see the elephants were astonished Indians living between Kimberley and Cranbrook.

Three of the animals, Cicero, Bessie and Virginia, were corralled by a 60-year-old Indian woman—known only as Mary—after they wandered into her apple orchard in search of food. Mary scaled a tree in record time when the elephants lumbered into her yard. She littered the ground with apples, then slipped away unnoticed to get help.

When the circus men arrived some time later, the elephants were still happily munching away and offered no resistance. Marie later received $300 for her part in the hunt.

Frieda was also captured near Cranbrook, but three others roamed northwest to Lake Windermere and Kootenay Lake, more than 30 miles away.

Tillie, one of the wanderers, was not captured until she attacked an Indian in the Jaz Lake area and nearly killed his horse.

Circus trainers rushed some of the other elephants to the area and the promise of commissionship lured Tillie back to her cage.

Another cow, Myrtle, was found emaciated and suffering from bullet wounds. She was given a massive injection of morphine but died of pneumonia before she could be brought out of the woods.

The last elephant to be recaptured, a bull of titanic proportions named Charlie Ed, is said to have been brought to bay by the six hunters' traditional nemesis—a field mouse.

Search parties were scouting around Fish Lake after receiving reports of elephant tracks in the area.

They found nothing and were preparing to leave when they heard terrified trumpetings.

Charlie Ed, hidden in an alder thicket, had apparently been attacked by a ferocious mouse. He seemed relieved to be taken back into custody.

Circus officials estimated the six-week hunt cost about $30,000. Cancelled bookings accounted for about $70,000, while Myrtle's death, rewards and compensation for damages made up the balance.

Imperial Bar Favorite Drinking Place for Canadians in Saigon

In every theatre of war there are favorite places where a man can get a quiet drink and escape the tensions. A Canadian Press reporter in Viet Nam describes the pub preferred by Canadian truce personnel in Saigon.

BY DOUGLAS AMARON

SAIGON (CP)—It's not The Vanishing Heron in Micklam, England, the Beaver Club in Campobasso, Italy, or Le Cerf in Brussels, but to Canadians with the International Control Commission in Saigon the Imperial Bar on Tu Do Street is THE pub.

Drop in there any day after 3 p.m. and you'll usually find two or three commissioned officers or civilian personnel from the Canadian delegation sipping a beer or soft drink and talking French to Francois Bonnelli, the portly "patron" from Corsica who has operated the Imperial for 30 of the 40 years he has lived in Saigon.

This is a bar with a difference. It is cut off from the street by ceiling-high iron lattice work that lets in the air but keeps out the pedlars. No bar girls are allowed on the premises and the only women you see are Mme. Bonnelli or maybe the wife of a French pilot who flies Canadian ICC personnel about the country on their courier runs.

PRICES LOWER

No shoeshine boys, no sellers of dirty pictures, no exchangers of black market money. Just people who drop in for a cool drink at prices far below those charged in the hotels or the bars with their reed-thin hostesses.

Bonnelli knows most of his patrons by name, greets everyone who comes in whether he knows him or not with a handshake and a smile. Waiters, immaculately dressed in white, empty ashtrays, wipe the sweat of glasses off the table almost as soon as it appears.

After a visit or two, Bonnelli may bring out a tattered National Geographic Magazine from 1951 and show you a picture of the bar as it used to be—tables on the sidewalk and the luxury of the Saigon that then was called "the pearl of the Orient."

The iron grill may not be as decorative—certainly the Eiffel tower has been worked into the design on the doors—but it is comforting to have it there in a city where a favorite pastime is tossing hand grenades into bars.

Most of Bonnelli's Canadian patrons are French — Canadians. Many of the Canadians with the ICC were chosen for posting here because they can speak French.

FLIES CANADIAN FLAG

As in any bar Canadian servicemen of all ways have patronized, the Canadians have left their mark. A Royal 22nd Regiment crest has been painted over the bar and beneath it flies a small Canadian maple leaf flag.

There is some doubt about the origin of the crest but the flag came from Staff Sgt. Marcel Veilleux, a stocky service corps veteran of more than 20 years in the army who is on his way home now after 15 months in Viet Nam—three more months than the normal posting.

Veilleux, a native of St. Georges de Beauce, Que., whose family now lives in Winnipeg after moving from Vancouver, not only provided the flag but also turned up a large Expo 67 poster that is prominently displayed on a bar mirror.

The poster, and maybe the Canadians, obviously had an effect on Bonnelli because on his way home to France for a visit next summer he plans to stop in Montreal for a week at the world exhibition.

He has no accommodation yet but is not worried.

"My Canadian friends will look after me," he said.

Canadian Brother Supervises Production of Tunisian Wines

The Roman Catholic Church has had to adapt to new conditions since Moslem Tunisia became independent 10 years ago. A Canadian Oblate priest tells how one order fits in under the new regime.

By PETER BUCKLEY

THIBAR, Tunisia (CP)—You get used to finding Canadians doing unusual jobs around the world but it's still a surprise to discover Brother Romeo supervising production of vintage wines on a remote Tunisian farm.

He is supervisor of the cellars at the Domaine de Thibar, a combination agricultural estate and school 65 miles inland from Tunis, where up to 225,000 gallons of wine are produced annually.

Brother Romeo, from the Eastern Townships of Quebec, is a member of the Roman Catholic White Fathers order which operates the Domaine.

A short man with an infectious smile, greying hair and an unmistakably Canadian accent to his French, he has been in North Africa with the order since before the war, working at missions in Algeria and Tunisia.

He was appointed to work in the cellars when a vacancy arose for an assistant. "I learned the operation gradually over the years and when the former supervisor retired I came into his job."

The Domaine was founded in 1895, a dozen years after France imposed its protectorate over Tunisia. It grew in size and prosperity until, at the time of independence in 1956, it covered some 3,700 acres—handsome green fields and crops set among low hills a few miles south of the provincial capital of Beja.

After 1956, the church in general had to adapt to new circumstances, with its role diminished and altered as the 160,000-strong French colony drained away to 35,000, a fragment of the country's 4,000,000 people.

Christianity has never held much attraction for Arab peoples, and converts have been rare. Although there has been little religious rancor, independent Tunisia felt deeply the too much external evidence of the minority Christian presence—with its inevitable associations with the colonial past —for an overwhelmingly Moslem country where Islam is the state religion.

Church steeples no longer dominate the skylines of Tunisian cities and villages. Shorn to roof level, they are overshadowed by the squared minarets of Arab mosques. With a sharply reduced Catholic population to serve, some churches have been abandoned and others put to secular use. The great cathedral at Carthage now is a museum.

At the Domaine de Thibar about 2,500 acres of largely unused land were removed from the White Fathers' control and the whole estate was nationalized. The religious community was left to handle operations under government supervision.

The dozen priests and brothers of various nationalities at Thibar—assisted by a small community of nuns—have a staff of about 150 Tunisians working full time on the estate. A third of these are under Brother Romeo's direction in the cellars, turning out wine that ranks among the best in a country where wine is a major industry.

TEACH TUNISIANS

Besides the farm there is an apprenticeship school where 80 young Tunisians learn such trades as auto mechanics and carpentry. The sons give girls from the area instruction in rug - making—their designs are in such demand that there is a two-year waiting period for delivery—and other practical arts.

Operations are hampered, however, by a shortage of materials. The country is also wistfully of the need for such basic items as pencils and copy books, not to mention more formidable items such as tractors and engine models for apprentices to work on.

Despite the new regime, the future of the Domaine de Thibar seems secure. Relations stors say their relations with the government have remained excellent and observers in Tunis feel there is no reason for the situation to change.

"The church made mistakes under the protectorate in its relations with the Tunisians," one French Catholic said in Tunis. "Most of the mistakes have probably been corrected, either by government action or voluntarily, and it is mainly a question now of adapting to a new role—a role which perhaps should have been adopted from the start.

"It is a more humble role and in a sense a more satisfying one."

Sergeant, May I Please Yell 'Ouch'?

JOGJAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Anyone in the central Java city of Jogjakarta who feels like letting loose with a loud yell has to get permission first from the local military headquarters.

The official news agency Antara said no more yelling of slogans or general shouting will be allowed in the university city, a centre of continuing political unrest in Indonesia.

In addition, assemblies of more than five persons must have special permission.

The strict measures are part of a military clampdown in central Java in hope of restoring political tranquility. Assaults and knifings, although on a small scale, still continue.

Steelworkers Postpone Vote on Ratification

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP)—A meeting of steelworkers at the Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd. decided Wednesday night to postpone until Sept. 20-25 a ratification vote on a proposed three-year contract scheduled for today and Friday.

The contract, agreed to by all parties at conciliation talks in Toronto Sept. 2, would provide Algoma workers with pay equal to employees at the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. in Hamilton under a new contract accepted there last month.

About 3,000 members of the 6,400-man Local 2251 of the United Steelworkers of America attended the meeting but more than half of them had left by the time a show-of-hands vote was taken on the postponement amendment.

Local President John Ferris said he was disappointed with the action "as it creates an atmosphere of uncertainty for our members and the community as a whole."

RECOMMEND APPROVAL

He said the apparent intention of the move is to give the membership more time to study the proposals. He added the local executive is "definitely recommending" acceptance of the contract.

Details of the contract, which were released Wednesday, call for wage increases from 31 to 37 cents hourly depending on job classification. Lowest paid workers would receive $2.31 an hour by Aug. 1, 1968 while the highest paid class "would get $4.51.

All workers would receive a 13-cent-an-hour increase retroactive to Aug. 1 when the old contract expired. A life insurance policy offered to married workers would be increased to $10,000 from $7,000 with $1,000 additional for each dependent.

Stelco workers are entitled to $8,000.

Mr. Ferris said the company was notified of the union's decision after the meeting.

Company officials were not immediately available for comment.

Middle Age Shocks System, Like Swimming in Cold Lake

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—What is middle age?

To many it is the longest, darkest tunnel of life, a barren stretch between first and second childhood.

Actually, of course, it isn't all that dreadful. It's more like swimming in a cold lake —shocking to the system at first, but not too bad after you get used to it.

An odd thing about being middle-aged is that you notice it in others before you do yourself. But make no mistake about it, man, you're in the silver years if—

You like Elvis Presley better than the Beatles because he wears a more sensible haircut.

You can remember when Shirley Temple wore curls.

In your wardrobe there is at least one double-breasted suit with wide lapels.

You realize you need new glasses but insist you're not ready for bifocals.

FEEL SLOPPY

You buy executive - length socks now because anklets make you feel sloppy.

The waiters at your favorite restaurant never have to ask what you want for lunch. They automatically bring you what they know you're supposed to have.

If a strange girl winks at you on the bus, you wonder if she's got a cinder in her eye.

Every time you hear a band play September Song you feel haunted the rest of the evening.

It's OK with you if your wife decides to have a cat as a pet. Isn't that less trouble than having to walk a dog every evening?

When you reminisce about how you won the war, the younger fellows ask, "Which one?"

Everything teen - agers do today seems to you illegal, immoral or unnecessary.

When lured out on a dance floor, you start to put your arm around your partner's waist instead of waving your hands wildly and stamping around like an Indian on the warpath.

You still have to hum a tune by Victor Herbert or Stephen Foster.

There are more used pipe cleaners than old love letters in your desk.

When you drop a coat, you still think it's worth bothering to pick up.

You want to leave a cocktail party before your wife does.

200,000 Immigrants Expected This Year Report From Minister

HALIFAX (CP)—Canada this year expects some 200,000 immigrants—one for every 100 residents, Immigration Minister Marchand said Wednesday.

One - third more than last year's 146,758, the 1966 figure is "close to ideal," Mr. Marchand told the annual meeting of the Canadian Good Roads Association.

He termed it an indication of "Canada's success in attracting newcomers, despite a worldwide competition for skills."

Of post - war immigration, 1966 will rank second only to the 1957 figure of 282,164. Even higher was the post-year flow before the First World War. The all - time record of 400,870 was registered in 1913.

Canadian attitudes towards increased immigration, skilled or unskilled, "must undergo a change."

NEED TRADESMEN

Mr. Marchand told the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion had found one in every two Canadians apprehensive about increased immigration. At the same time other surveys show that Canada's shortages of skilled tradesmen and technicians number in the thousands.

"We should welcome skilled newcomers and help them become successfully integrated into our communities with as little difficulty as possible," the minister said.

Too often there was a tendency to overlook the immigrants' "enormous" contribution to Canada's growth, economic expansion and prosperity, particularly in the post-war years when 2,500,000 came to Canada.

Every third architect, draughtsman, mechanical engineer and physical and occupational therapist registered in the 1961 census was an immigrant.

One in every four civil and electrical engineers and physical scientists and one out of every five chemical engineers, medical doctors and economists came from abroad.

ESTIMATES COST

It would have cost Canada "more than $150,000,000" to train these immigrant professionals, Mr. Marchand said.

"Without the skilled workers that immigration provided, Canada's post - war development would have been crippled.

"Despite the growth of apprenticeship trades training, increases in training and upgrading of adults, and new highs in the number of skilled workers coming from abroad, Canada has not been able to meet the unprecedented demands for skilled workers in many occupations across the land."

Selection of immigrants had become more careful, since, in the last few years, there had been developed significant unemployment among the unskilled and uneducated, and increasingly serious shortages of skilled labor.

This greater care in selection would protect both the immigration and the community.

Anthony Newley to Pursue His Second Movie Career

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — No more Broadway for Anthony Newley, who directed and starred in Stop The World—I Want To Get Off and The Roar Of The Greasepaint—The Smell Of The Crowd.

Newley is here for his first Hollywood film, Dr. Doolittle with Rex Harrison and Samantha Eggar, and he plans to stay at least two years to pursue his second movie career.

This may well be considered a blow by the London and New York theatre, since Newley has been one of the more promising architects in the construction of a new form of stage musical. Not that his efforts have been completely successful. But he has attempted innovations in an art form that has long been tied to tradition.

"That was the trouble," Newley says. "What I was doing was pretty conceited for an avant garde. Because of that, the offers for work in other fields simply did not come. I decided I had to get out of the theatre in order to be able to do other things."

MOVED FAMILY

So he chose Dr. Doolittle, in which he and his fellow stars are up to the elbows in mud. Filming is all on Newley has moved his wife, actress Joan Collins, and their two young children to California, and he intends to stay.

"Like all actors, I harbor the urge to direct," he says. "And the amazing thing about the film business today is that producers are willing to take chances. I had an idea for an adult fantasy which I wanted to shoot in the Big Sur country. I had no trouble getting the backing for the film, and I will be directing it next summer."

Dr. Doolittle is his first Hollywood film, but Newley is a movie veteran. He made his debut at 14 in England and appeared in 40 movies, his most memorable performance as a boy being The Artful Dodger in Oliver Twist.

His stage debut was in Cranks, which he played in London and New York. Later he starred in the 1964 with Leslie Bricusse on Stop The World and Roar Of The Greasepaint. The pair has a knack for producing hit songs; among them: Who Can I Turn To? and What Kind Of A Fool Am I?

"Leslie and I are writing for the theatre; right now we're turning out a musical of Syrano for the composer for David Merrick," says Newley.

After Twenty Drinks Mishap Is Even Money

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

If you drive after taking six drinks, there's a 1 - in - 20 chance you'll be involved in an accident. . . . But if you fly to drive after 20 drinks, says the American Insurance Association, it's a 50-50 gamble whether you and the car will get home safely.

The late American newspaper magnate William Randolph Hearst was a man who didn't like to be crowded. . . . When he went to the theatre alone, he always bought two seats—one for himself, the other for his hat.

Some octopuses are better quick - change color artists than chameleons. . . . In the twinkling of an eye they can switch from chocolate brown to milky white or brick red.

Quotable quotables: "Nothing in life is to be feared. It is only to be understood."—Marie Curie.

You probably never have seen an oyster eat corn on the cob, and you probably never will, but . . . it has been found that small amounts of corn-starch in water help growing oysters put on from 30 to 40 per cent more meat.

PAY TRIBUTE TO DOG

Odd claims to fame: Lassie, the canine film star, has had a room named in her honor in the 100,000,000 - year - old Meramec Caverns in Missouri.

A sight for sore eyes: If you're looking for a surprise gift for the man who has almost everything, why not buy him a subscription to the Klinische Monatsblatter fur Augenheilkunde? . . . It's a well-known German ophthalmological magazine.

Worth remembering: A Russian proverb advises: "Going to sea? Pray once. Going to war? Pray twice. Going to marry? Pray three times."

Folklore: Don't go bring bad luck to anyone by turning his picture upside down. . . . If your house burns down and you build another in the same spot, it will burn down, too. . . . Girls with long fingernails are likely to be spendthrifts. . . . Eating bread crusts will make your cheeks rosy.

OLD NEED FOOT CARE

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The annual meeting of the American Podiatry Association was told 1,266 elderly people were surveyed to find out the state of their feet. Exactly 2,240, 90 per cent, had some sort of foot ailment.

The Monroes Should Inherit Big Audience This Season

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Two more programs of ABC's new series have shown Wednesday night and both gave indications that they might develop into pleasant if routine entertainment.

The Monroes, an hour long, is the story of five youngsters, the oldest a boy of 18, who are orphaned a short distance from the Wyoming valley in which their father, an Illinois farmer, wanted to settle.

In the opening episode, it was important to show how the children lost their parents. At the beginning we saw the happy family riding along in their 1875 covered wagon. Suddenly, both mother and father and the baby's cry were swept away in the swift current of a river they were crossing.

The survivors met up with a friendly Indian and some rough characters who wanted to hustle the little family out of the territory.

AS ITS POINTS

"All this sounds rather old hat but The Monroes has a number of good things going for it. First, the young actors playing the five Monroes are attractive and personable. Second, the series has been shot on location in the Jackson Hole country of Wyoming and the scenery and backgrounds are not only impressive but a nice change from those old fake rocks on the studio back lots.

In addition to establishing warm family relationships, there is enough fighting, shooting and general rough stuff to satisfy most audiences. Besides, it comes right after Batman and should inherit it's big audience.

The Man Who Never Was, which followed the western, also had its start from the beginning. It had to ask the audience to believe that a U.S. secret agent on the run in East Berlin had the luck to run into his exact double—a no good American millionaire — at the time he needed him most. The millionaire, in fact, took a fatal bullet intended for our hero who at the end of the first episode was stepping into the dead man's shoes.

The series obviously has not the slightest relationship to a book of the same name, which was a Second World War spy story. Robert Lansing, looking as intense and dour as ever, plays the spy.

Added Public School Space Given Approval by Council

PICTON (Staff) — Picton town council this week gave tentative approval of the public school board's $600,000 request for added public school accommodation, and decided to apply to the Ontario Municipal Board for the debenture issue in that amount.

Board Chairman W. W. Evans said the new accommodation would be completed by September 1968. If the annexation of 150 acres of Hallowell Township with the town of Picton goes through it will definitely mean an increase in accommodation for Picton's public schools are now at their maximum.

The board proposes to build an addition to the still fairly modern Queen Elizabeth School. The addition would replace the 12 rooms outdated at Mary and York Street schools. It would also provide special learning rooms, shop work facilities and library and house economic rooms.

The project is the latest event in a number of new public building projects in Prince Edward County. The first central township school was in Sophiasburgh and the township of Sophiasburgh completed its new school last year. A new public school "Keele" is nearing completion in Ameliasburg and construction is expected to start in the near future on new central township schools in Athol and North Marysburgh. Hallowell is in the process of planning a new central school to serve the township and the village of Bloomfield and new accommodation has been discussed in the joint Wellington-Hillier school area.

Meanwhile municipalities in Prince Edward District High School area continue to withhold approval for the addition to the high school here. This would provide for eight added classes at the collegiate because of lack of accommodation.

The Rural Scene

A silage corn day sponsored by the Quinte District Soil and Crop Improvement Association in co - operation with the Ontario Department of Agriculture, will be held on the farm of Harold and Don Hough, Sillsville, on Thursday, September 16th starting at 10 a.m. The Hough farm is located 8 miles south and 4 miles west of Napanee. The program has been planned to cover all phases of silage corn production, new ideas in growing, harvesting storing and feeding will be discussed and demonstrated.

Plots have been planted to compare the various maturity dates, planting dates and plant populations. Soil test fertilizer recommendations will be compared in general recommendations and on fertilizer. There will also be plots to show the different methods of weed control.

Speakers on the program will be Dr. Dave Mowat, Dept. of Crop Science, University of Guelph, Gladney MacIlveen, Brantford, a well known farmer with experience in growing grain corn.

Machinery companies will have the latest in corn planting and harvesting equipment on display. Corn forage harvesting demonstrations will be featured in the field. Fertiliser, weed spray and corn companies will be on hand during the day to give information on their products.

Farmers wishing advice or engineering assistance on farm buildings, drainage, water supply etc. are advised that Gordon Tobey, Engineering Extension Specialist will be at the Ontario Department of Agriculture Office, Picton, on Tuesday, Sept. 14. Anyone wishing an appointment with Mr. Tobey is advised to phone the Agriculture Office not later than 10 a.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 13th.

Members of the Milford 4-H Calf Club will hold their Achievement Day at the Milford Fair on Wednesday, Sept. 14th.

Growers of pumpkin and other vine crops should be on the look-out for the white mold. The appearance of mildew for it is showing up in many fields at this time.

The heavy dews of the past several weeks have been ideal for its spread. Growers should not enter their fields while the leaves are wet.

If a field becomes badly infected with mildew a grower will have to weigh the advantages against the disadvantages of spraying. Certainly several sprays at 7 day intervals should check the disease spread but no doubt some injury will the caused to the equipment passing over the vines.

If the disease is confined to a small area, this can be left and the rest around the area should be sprayed or dusted heavily several times to bring the mildew under control.

Labor Govt. Regains Lead In Popularity

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain's Labor government has regained its national popularity lead over the Conservative party, the latest Gallup poll said today.

The poll, published in The Daily Telegraph, showed Prime Minister Wilson's administration 2½ per cent in front.

Fire Chief Gets Order to Enforce Bylaws

PICTON (Staff)—Picton residents have been alerted by town officials to keep a watchful eye for signs of new fires or other unusual circumstances during the night hours.

In the past year in Picton alone over one dozen fires occurred under peculiar circumstances and the Ontario Fire Marshal's office has had to be called on each one. Chief Duane Foshay said that there, is positive evidence that many of these were definitely set and if a firebug is still loose it is in the interests of every citizen to keep alert and turn in any alarms immediately.

Two men have been arrested for arson here and yet mysterious fires continue to plague the local fire department. The hot, full-time firemen have adjusted their normal sleeping hours to be dressed awake and ready to go on any alarm during the time when most fire calls have been received. Within the past 18 months there have been 17 fires and total damage where a building is concerned has now come close to the $30,000 mark.

Fire committee chairman, Alderman Jarvis, reported to the regular meeting of council Tuesday night that the fire chief is empowered to enforce the town's fire control by-laws in the cases of some residents. He sought the support of council in the matter and council passed a motion supporting the enforcement of such by-laws through the fire chief.

The fire chief has suggested that those building or altering their hazards should be cleaned up to make it more difficult for fire to be started or encouraged.

Hopes of Banner Attendance At Fair Dashed by Rain

NAPANEE—Hopes of a banner attendance year at the Napanee Fair were dashed by Tuesday's rain coming just at the wrong time. Slightly more than a third of Monday's crowd braved the threatening skies and brief periods of sunshine. Wednesday brought out more people, and it was expected that the Hell - Drivers would attract many people to the grandstand during the evening.

As rain Tuesday upset the judging program, many results were not yet available for Wednesday afternoon. One from Monday's judging of arena exhibits was made public on Wednesday. Mrs. Okel Drew of Moscow was the grand prize winner for her flower display carrying off the silver tray awarded by Simpson - Sears. She was awarded a total of 74 points for her prize-winning entries in baking, canning, and needlework.

BLACK AND WHITE DAY

Tuesday was Black and White Day, but some of the judging had to be postponed until Wednesday because of the rain, but results were available by afternoon. Robert Brown of R. R. 6, Napanee, carried off three trophies and four special prizes in addition to those won on the regular list. He won the trophies given by Rockwell Parks for the best uddered female in the Ward and Box trophy for the two best head bred and owned by the exhibitor; and the Irene and Clarence Baker trophy for the grand champion cow. His prize prizes included those for the best female, any age; for the best female bred in milk bred and owned by the exhibitor; the best Holstein in milk, two or over; and the best uddered female by the Quinte sire..

Ernest Huyck of R. R. 2, Bath was another heavy prize winner, taking home the Mayhew trophy for the junior get of sire, three animals bred and owned by the exhibitor; the Farrell trophy for the premier breeder; and special prizes for two animals, the progeny of one cow; and for four animals bred and owned by the exhibitor, two of which must be females.

Special prizes were won also by Robert McFarlane of R. R. 1, Napanee, for yearling heifer; by Donald Hough for heifer calf; and by Harold McCool of R. R. 5, Napanee, for bull any age, and for junior bull. Mr. McCool, at one time a heavy exhibitor, and secretary of the Lennox Fair for years, resumed exhibiting this year after a long interval. He is a vice - president of the Canadian Holstein - Friesian Breeders Association.

WOMEN'S SECTION

There was an increase of exhibits in some sections, especially in the women's work, and farm machinery. The midway, also was an improvement over last year's.

The horse drawing contests have proved so popular that they were held this year for the third time. The lightweight and middleweight contests were held Monday afternoon and the heavyweight contest in the evening. Most of the contestants were from Eastern Ontario and Quebec. The twelve teams which entered the heavyweight contest in the evening were reduced to two in the fourth round, with Norm Stewart of the Gatineau area, Quebec, owner of the winning team pulling a load of 7,200 pounds.

POPULAR EXHIBIT

One of the most popular exhibits at the Fair has been that of four pens of nutria from the Sunny Acres Nutria Ranch owned by Wallace Hodgeboom. One, an albino mother and her four two-months-old kits, has been especially popular. A female breeder of this color is valued at $1,500 and a male at $1,000. They are docile animals, and can be handled freely. They are of the beaver family, with webbed feet webbed and front feet which almost resemble hands, in which they hold such things as apples and carrots when feeding. A stole of palomino gold was greatly admired.

Plan to Clean Up Ugly Area in Napanee River

NAPANEE — Tuesday's meeting of the Napanee Town Council was a long and difficult one, with two unpleasant matters coming up for discussion and action. One concerned the police and the other the Fire Department.

One of the pleasant matters concerned the granting of a comparatively small sum, $250, for the purpose of clearing up an ugly area in the Napanee River just beneath the falls, known as The Willows, or The Island. Willow trees managed to take root there many years ago, and at first it was an attraction. Of late years debris coming over the falls has been caught and held there and now it has become an eyesore. Donald Reid, a member of the parks committee, had obtained an estimate of the cost of removing the trees, the debris and the boulders, and a guarantee from a firm that the work would be completed by the end of this week.

The project received the hearty approval of the Council, who expressed their pleasure that Springside Park would benefit, and that the landscaping done by the Gibbard Furniture Shops this summer on the bank opposite the park would now be seen better.

This is part of the Greenbelt project, which aims at the eventual establishment of park land both sides of the river from Highway 401 to the western outskirts of the town.

THURSDAY MEET

At many members of the Napanee Town Council as possible will meet Thursday morning to inspect the sewer and watermains beginning at Highway 401, following the Palace Road through Clarkeville, and connecting with the town sewer system on the north side of the river. Both were installed primarily, to serve the Imperial Oil station and restaurant on Highway 401, with the company paying all the expense to the town limits, and 25 per cent of the cost inside the town.

Liberals Get Big Majority In Nfld.

By IAN DONALDSON

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Elated by his "greatest victory since Confederation" Premier Joseph Smallwood emerged from Thursday's Newfoundland election with a whopping majority, a pile of work facing him and a stated determination to step down before the next election.

The 65-year-old premier, who led Newfoundland into Confederation in 1949 and has been its premier ever since, saw his Liberals reduce the opposition to just three men—an instant group in any Canadian legislature.

Victims of the Liberal onslaught included Progressive Conservative Leader Dr. Noel Murphy and New Democratic Party Leader Calvin Normore.

It was the sixth election victory in a row for the never-beaten Newfoundland Liberals and the first since 1962 that the man who says he'll vacate the leadership and "get off Newfoundland's back" before the next election, probably in four years.

Final standings:

Liberal gains from the Conservatives totalled five seats because the lone Independent elected in 1962 later switched to the Conservatives and was defeated by a Liberal Thursday.

SADDENED BY LANDSLIDE

Both Dr. Murphy and Mr. Normore expressed disappointment at the Liberal landslide.

Dr. Murphy, who levelled the toughest verbal attack on Mr. Smallwood since pre-Confederation days, repeated that too many voters in Newfoundland supported the Liberals through fear.

During the campaign Dr. Murphy described Mr. Smallwood as a tyrant and a dictator. He said in an interview Thursday night in Corner Brook that the electors "didn't vote for us because of fear."

Mr. Smallwood was also interviewed at his headquarters in Corner Brook, where cheering supporters did their best to drown out the words of a man who is rarely shouted down.

"It's a sobering victory because I'm not going to measure up to such overwhelming confidence?"

Referring to a group of young new cabinet ministers, whom he calls "kiddies' corner," Mr. Smallwood said: "I've got a bunch of young men . . . and

Hope Bill Will Not Be Used

By JIM NEAVES

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan government's compulsory arbitration bill was given royal assent Thursday after a two-day, 23-hour special legislative session. But Premier Ross Thatcher said he hoped he would never have to proclaim the bill law.

Introduction of the bill in the legislature, called after members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, went on strike against the Saskatchewan Power Corp. evoked a strong denunciation from trade union leaders across the province and was opposed by the CCF Opposition in the legislature.

About 1,300 gas division workers, represented by the OCAW, went on strike a week ago when negotiations on a new contract broke down. They asked for an eight-per cent increase and the SPC offered four.

Mr. Thatcher said Thursday outside the legislature he hoped it would not be necessary to proclaim the bill, the Essential Services Emergency Act, as law.

He said he planned to call the new negotiating committee to a meeting today, in a last-ditch effort to end the strike. Failing an agreement, he would proclaim the bill law by order-in-council.

The cabinet, under terms of the legislation, could then proclaim a state of emergency which would mean all strikes by the affected employees would be illegal.

Pearson Urges Britain Give Rhodesian Negroes Stronger Guarantees

By CARMAN CUMMING

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson today urged Britain to give the Rhodesian Negro majority stronger political guarantees but did not fully support African demands for majority rule before Rhodesia is given legal independence.

The Canadian leader also declined to give full support to African demands for immediate mandatory United Nations sanctions against Rhodesia, saying only that this should be considered if further pressure to make existing voluntary restrictions work did not succeed.

He ruled out the use of force, arguing that this might hurt the people the Commonwealth is trying to help, apparently a reference to the unarmed Rhodesian Negroes who would bear the brunt of white revenge.

Cancel Gemini Flight

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — A pinhole leak in the foot system of the Titan II booster rocket today forced a postponement of the flight of Gemini 11.

The leak was discovered just three hours before astronauts Charles Conrad and Richard Gordon were to start preparations for a three - day mission.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said a new launch date would not be set until the seriousness of the problem was determined. While there was an outside possibility of a Saturday launching, officials said it more likely would be two or more days.

The launch crew immediately began dumping the 151 tons of fuel so they can purge the leaks before technicians get in for a closer look.

If the leak can be repaired by "simple quick" operation from the outside, the rocket could be ready to go in a day or so, officials said. But if the top of the oxidizer tank has to be removed and a man lowered into the trouble area, a delay of several days is likely, he added.

Conrad and Gordon were to have blasted off in pursuit of the Agena satellite at 10:26 a.m., aiming to catch and capture it in the first orbit, setting a record for space rendezvous.

Failure of the Agena would trigger three demanding dips in space that would include —Two space excursions by Gordon—a 107-minute stroll outside and a 140 - minute stand-up, sticking the upper half of his body through an open hatch to photograph selected stars in a scientific experiment.

By JAMES BROWN

LONDON (Reuters)—Two British High Court judges ruled today that the 1965 constitution introduced at the time of Rhodesia's unilateral declaration of independence—and the present government set up under it—are not lawful.

But the judges ruled at the same time that the regime of Prime Minister Ian Smith was the only effective government of the country.

The judges were giving reserved judgment on a constitutional test case hearing in which the legality of the government and the "constitution were challenged.

Two men—a white lawyer and an African nationalist—applied for release from detention on the grounds that the emergency regulations under which they were detained were illegal and unconstitutional.

While ruling the present constitution illegal, the judges said today that in order to prevent chaos the court should give effect to such measures of the effective government as could lawfully have been taken by the lawful government under the 1961 constitution.

TIES STILL BIND

In their 150-page judgment the judges said the present white - minority Rhodesian government would not become the lawful government until the ties of sovereignty were severed either by consent or by Britain's abandoning its attempt to end the breakaway.

The self - governing colony seized its independence from Britain Nov. 11, 1965, and proclaimed its own constitution, replacing the one of 1961.

The extension of the state of emergency in the country and the emergency powers regulations were measures falling in the category of measures of the effective government, the judges said.

As a result, the two applications for release from detention must fail, the judges ruled.

The two detained men — a Rhodesian lawyer, Leo Baron, and the African nationalist, Daniel Madzimbamuto—were detained under the emergency powers extended in February.

Living Costs Move Up

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer price index took another step upward in August to 144.9, an increase of six-tenths of a point from July and 5.5 points from the level of August, 1965.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics said Thursday the record level, representing growth on 1949 prices equalling 100, could be blamed mainly on food costs.

The food index alone climbed 2.1 points during the month to 148.1 with higher prices for most basic items, including all dairy products except processed cheese, meat, cereal products as bread and flour, and most meats.

The housewife also paid more for eggs, butter, margarine and many fruits and vegetables—including bananas, apples, strawberries, onions, cabbage and tomato juice.

The food index last August stood at 137.8.

STUDIES WAGES

Although there is no index of wages for each comparison, the DBS makes a study of weekly industrial wages based on 1961 averages equalling 100. This index stood at 123.4 in April, latest month available.

It was the 12th consecutive rise for the index, main barometer of living costs in Canada. It is compiled by making a price survey of 300 goods and services most generally purchased by urban families on low-to-average incomes.

Food is one of seven categories that make up the main index.

Among others there were fractional increases for housing, health and personal care, and recreation and reading. The index for tobacco and alcoholic beverages remained unchanged in August while the clothing and footwear index fell to a new lower.

Within housing, which gained .4 per cent, the rise in rents, there were higher prices for shelter, utensils and equipment, and household supplies. Prices were a little lower for home furnishings, floor coverings and household textiles.

The clothing index declined to 134.6 from 135.2.

A small rise to 161.5 from 161 for health and personal care included price increases for drugs and such supplies as toothpaste, face cream and powder, cleansing tissues and razor blades.

The transportation index also dropped to 150.6 from 151.2, mainly on lower prices for automobiles.

The recreation and reading index rose to 138.6 from 136.3.

Baby Budget Part of Curb On Inflation

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians must take a dose of higher taxes as a remedy for inflation, Finance Minister Sharp said Thursday.

They must also temper expectations of wage and salary increases and must drop any hope of coverage next year under a new government medical care program.

"Higher taxes are cold comfort to those troubled by higher prices," Mr. Sharp conceded in a Commons speech packed with sober news about the measures forcing up prices in Canada.

"But they can help prevent prices going up more and more."

The tax increases will probably come in a baby budget in late October. The minister said the budgetary deficit of $150,000,000 he predicted in his budget speech last March now is expected to double to $300,000,000.

He also announced that Veterans' pensions will be increased and noted that the government has promised to bring in supplementary increases in old - age pensions for the needy, guaranteeing a minimum income of $105 a month.

Rail Bill Approved By House

OTTAWA (CP)—Round one of the Commons transport-reform debate is over with round two scheduled later this month.

Without a formal vote, the government's 24,000-word bill to revamp the railways system and create a super-board to supervise all transportation was given second reading—approval in principle — Thursday afternoon.

Details of the bill are to get close scrutiny when the Commons transport committee convenes late this month, a week or so before Parliament concludes its interrupted recess that is expected to be resumed later today.

Transport Minister Pickersgill concluded the four-day debate with a spoke to entertain opposition amendments in committee and an announcement that the CPR has agreed to voluntarily give up its 86-year-

One-Year Freeze Clamped On Govt. Medicare Plan

OTTAWA (CP)—The government Thursday clamped a one-year freeze on Health Minister MacEachen's medical care program and Mr. MacEachen refused non-committal replies to questions about spreading reports that he might quit as health minister.

Finance Minister Sharp announced that as an anti-inflation measure the government had decided to set back to July 1, 1968, the effective date of federal payments to provincial medical care insurance programs.

Mr. MacEachen, who had repeatedly endorsed the original target date of July 1, 1967, was absent from the chamber when Mr. Sharp announced the cabinet's decision.

Reporters said Mr. MacEachen would consider in the next few days whether he can remain in that post. He probably would make no decision until Prime Minister Pearson returns Oct. 1 from a Commonwealth prime ministers conference.

Was there any question of his resignation?

"I'm not making any comment on any of this at this moment."

Mr. Sharp said he has been a strong advocate of a national medical care program and appreciates

United Church Council To Vote on Union Issue

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP)—The General Council of the United Church of Canada will vote today on the vital issue of union with the Anglican Church but the proposals have been greeted with apparent indifference.

Commissioners attending the week-long council showed little reaction Thursday when the principles of union were introduced. Some said the proposals lacked excitement, others described them as "dull."

Some clergymen assessing the session said other persons opposed to the union are reluctant to be heard. If the principles are approved today, it means the United Church has officially committed itself to work towards organic union with the Anglican Church.

The document was approved last year by the Anglican Church. It was described Thursday as a "marriage of both faiths," by Dr. A. B. Moore of Toronto, co-chairman of a joint committee studying church union.

Rev. Roy F. Wilson of Fort William, who spoke briefly on the proposals, said they were like "partners in a pre-arranged marriage."

IS A BASE

In outlining the principles, Dr. Moore said the report is not a complete formula for union, but a base from which further negotiations can start.

He said the new church must be based on the scriptures and traditions brought into a relationship with the scriptures.

"There is the principle of freedom and authority in the faith," he said. "The episcopal and presbyterial orders of the churches are setting out the principle of corporate and personal ministries."

He said the bishopric is no longer to be understood as a form of autocracy in which an incumbent exercises arbitrary authority.

Dr. Moore said liturgical and free worship would characterize a new church. Provisions are also made for bringing together ordained ministers of both faiths.

"Finally, the ministry of the church is clearly affirmed, as belonging to the whole church," he said.

Dr. Moore considered acceptance of ordained women in the new church, a practice that is not part of the existing Anglican Church, imperative for union from the United Church's point of view.

"It is a very serious obstacle," he said, "but according to Prof. E. R. Fairweather, a leading Anglican scholar, there is no theological reason why women could not be ordained in the Anglican faith.

Opposition Sharply Criticizes Approach to Curb Inflation

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition party spokesmen reacted coolly Thursday to Finance Minister Sharp's anti - inflation speech, charging his anti-cost, anti-profit methods of failing to grasp the problem.

Mr. Sharp, in a lengthy speech to the Commons, announced a year's postponement of a start on national medical care insurance to July 1, 1968 and cutbacks in government spending. He said the economy cannot stand wage increase averaging more than five per cent annually.

He said there will be no increases now in financial aid to the provinces for the programs. The program will be deferred, research grants will be restricted, and the scholarship plan announced by Mr. Hamilton (PC—Qu'Appelle) said the government's fiscal policies have increased dangers of a 1967 recession and accused the Liberals of employing outdated measures to fight inflation.

By curbing education and research spending the government is harming the measures that can help the nation fight these problems in the long run, he said.

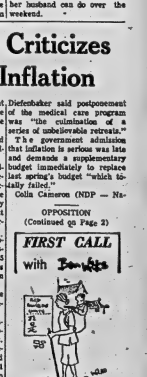
This was using the "outdated technique of cutting what's vulnerable" to curb spending.

He said postponement of medical care insurance had "destroyed" Health Minister MacEachen and the finance minister's speech ended any ambitions Mr. Sharp might have for the Liberal leadership.

Mr. Hamilton rapped the Liberals for forcing two unnecessary elections in 1962 and 1963 and said the government is heading towards another in 1967.

"little people" should be given an opportunity to fight inflation, he said.

Workers should be given incentives to save rather than being walloped with higher taxes. Senior workers should be recalled to the work force and women between the ages of 21 and 45 should be encouraged to take jobs.



In an interview outside the Commons, Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said postponement of the medical care program "is the culmination of a series of unbelievable retreats."

The government admission that inflation is serious was late and demands a supplementary budget immediately to replace last spring's budget "which totally failed."

Pearson Urges Britain Give Rhodesian Negroes Stronger Guarantees

By CARMAN CUMMING

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson today urged Britain to give the Rhodesian Negro majority stronger political guarantees but did not fully support African demands for majority rule before Rhodesia is given legal independence.

The Canadian leader also declined to give full support to African demands for immediate mandatory United Nations sanctions against Rhodesia, saying only that this should be considered if further pressure to make existing voluntary restrictions work did not succeed.

He ruled out the use of force, arguing that this might hurt the people the Commonwealth is trying to help, apparently a reference to the unarmed Rhodesian Negroes who would bear the brunt of white revenge.

Cancer Gemini Flight

By JAMES BROWN

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — A pinhole leak in the foot system of the Titan II booster rocket today forced a postponement of the flight of Gemini 11.

The leak was discovered just three hours before astronauts Charles Conrad and Richard Gordon were to start preparations for a three - day mission.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said a new launch date would not be set until the seriousness of the problem was determined. While there was an outside possibility of a Saturday launching, officials said it more likely would be two or more days.

The launch crew immediately began changing the 151 tons of fuel so they can purge the titanium before technicians get in for a closer look.

If the leak can be repaired by "in-situ" methods — operation from the outside, the rocket could be ready to go in a day or so, officials said. But if the top of the oxidizer tank has to be removed and a man lowered into the trouble area, a delay of several days is likely, he added.

Conrad and Gordon were to have blasted off in pursuit of the Agena satellite at 10:25 a.m., aiming to catch and capture it in the first orbit, setting a record for space rendezvous.

Dr. Moore considered acceptance of ordained women in the new church, a practice that is not part of the uniting Anglican Church, imperative for union from the United Church's point of view.

"It is a very serious obstacle," he said, "but according to Prof. E. R. Fairweather, a leading Anglican scholar, there is, no theological reason why women could not be ordained in the Anglican faith.

Living Costs Move Up

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer price index took another step upward in August to 144.9, an increase of six-tenths of a point from July and 5.5 points from the level of August, 1965.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics said Thursday the record level, representing growth on 1949 prices equalling 100, could be blamed mainly on food costs.

The food index alone climbed 1.2 points during the month to 148.1 with higher prices for most basic items, including all dairy products except processed cheese, such cereal products as bread and flour, and most meats.

The housewife also paid more for eggs, butter, margarine and many fruits and vegetables—including bananas, apples, strawberries, onions, cabbage and tomato juice.

The food index last August stood at 137.8.

STUDIES WAGES

Although there is no index of wages for an entire economy, the DBS makes a study of weekly industrial wages based on 1961 average equalling 100. This index stood at 122.4 in April, latest month available.

It was the 11th consecutive rise for the index, main barometer of living costs in Canada. It is compiled by making a price survey of 300 goods and services most generally purchased by urban families on low-to-average incomes.

Food is one of seven categories that make up the main index.

Among others there were fractional increases for housing, health and personal care, and recreation and reading. The index for tobacco and alcoholic beverages remained unchanged in August while the clothing and transportation indexes were lower.

Within housing, which gained one-tenth of a point to 145, there were higher prices for shelter, utensils and equipment, and household supplies. Prices were a little lower for home furnishings, floor coverings and household operation.

The clothing index declined to 124.6 from 125.0.

A small rise, to 161.2 from 161.0 for health and personal care included price increases for drugs and cosmetic supplies as toothpaste, face cream and powder, cleansing tissues and razor blades.

The transportation index also dropped to 150.6 from 151.2, mainly on lower prices for automobiles.

The recreation and reading index rose to 139.6 from 139.2.

Baby Budget Part of Curb On Inflation

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians must take a dose of higher taxes as a remedy for inflation, Finance Minister Sharp said Thursday.

They must also temper expectations of wage and salary increases and must drop any hope of coverage next year under a new government medical care program.

"Higher taxes are cold comfort to those troubled by higher prices," Mr. Sharp conceded in a Commons speech packed with sober news about the pressures forcing up prices in Canada.

"But they can help prevent those going up more and more."

The tax increases will probably come in a baby budget in late October. The minister said the budgetary deficit of $150,000,000 is predicted in his budget speech last March now is expected to double to $300,000,000.

He also announced that Veterans' pensions will be increased and noted that the government has promised to bring in supplementary increases in old - age pensions for the needy, guaranteeing a minimum income of $105 a month.

Rail Bill Approved By House

OTTAWA (CP)—Round one of the Commons transport reform debate is over with round two scheduled later this month.

Without a formal vote, the government's 24,000-word bill to revamp the railway system and create a super-board to supervise all transportation was given second reading—approval in principle — Thursday afternoon.

Details of the bill are to get close scrutiny when the Commons transport committee convenes late this month, a week or so before Parliament concludes its interrupted recess that is expected to be resumed later today.

Transport Minister Pickersgill concluded the four-day debate with a pledge to entertain opposition amendments in committee and an announcement that the CPR has agreed to voluntarily give up its 26-year-

One-Year Freeze Clamped On Govt. Medicare Plan

OTTAWA (CP)—The government Thursday clamped a one-year freeze on Health Minister MacEachen's medical care program and Mr. MacEachen returned non-committal replies to questions about spreading reports that he might quit as health minister.

Finance Minister Sharp announced that as an anti-inflation measure the government had decided to set back to July 1, 1968, the effective date of federal payments to provincial medical care insurance programs.

Mr. MacEachen, who had repeatedly endorsed the original target date of July 1, 1967, was absent from the chamber when Mr. Sharp announced the cabinet's decision.

He had earlier said Mr. MacEachen would consider in the next few days whether he can remain in that post. He probably would make no decision until Prime Minister Pearson returns from a Commonwealth prime ministers conference.

Was there any question of his resignation?

"I'm not making any comment at any of this at this moment."

He said he has been a strong advocate of a national medical care program and appreciates

United Church Council To Vote on Union Issue

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP)—The General Council of the United Church of Canada will vote today on the vital issue of union with the Anglican Church but the proposals have been greeted with apparent indifference.

Commissioners attending the week-long council showed little reaction Thursday when the principles of union were introduced. Some said the proposals offered nothing others described them as "flat."

Some clergymen assessing the session said other problems opposed to the union are mistakenly to be heard. If the principles are approved today, it means the United Church has officially committed itself to work towards organic union with the Anglican Church.

The document was approved last year by the United Church. It was described Thursday as a "marriage of two faiths," by Dr. A. B. Moore of Toronto, co-chairman of a joint committees studying church union.

Rev. Roy F. Wilson of Fort Frances, Ont., who spoke briefly on the proposals, said they were like "partners in a pre-arranged marriage."

IS A BASE

In outlining the principles Dr. Moore said the report is not a complete formula for fusion, but a base from which further negotiations can start.

He said the new church must be based on the scriptures with traditions brought into a relationship with the scriptures.

"There is also principle of freedom and authority in the faith," he said. "The episcopal and presbyterial orders of the churches are setting out the principle of corporate and personal ministries."

He said the bishopric is no longer to be understood as a form of autocracy in which an incumbent exercises arbitrary authority.

Dr. Moore said liturgical and free worship would characterize a new church. Provisions were also made for bringing together ordained ministers of both faiths.

"Finally, the ministry of the church is clearly affirmed as belonging to the whole church," he said.

Dr. Moore considered acceptance of ordained women in the new church, a practice that is not part of the uniting Anglican Church, imperative for union from the United Church's point of view.

"It is a very serious obstacle," he said, "but according to Prof. E. R. Fairweather, a leading Anglican scholar, there is, no theological reason why women could not be ordained in the Anglican faith.

Opposition Sharply Criticizes Approach to Curb Inflation

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition party spokesmen reacted coolly Thursday to Finance Minister Sharp's anti - inflation speech, charging his words would cancel out the methods of failing to grasp the problem.

Mr. Sharp, in a lengthy speech to the Commons, announced a year's postponement of a start on national medical care insurance to July 1, 1968 and cutbacks in government spending. He also said the economy cannot stand wage increase averaging more than five per cent annually.

He said there will be no increases now in financial aid to provinces for the schedule of programs will be deferred, research grants will be restricted and the federal forestry programs will be allowed to lapse next March.

Arthur Hamilton (PC—Qu'Appelle) said the government's fiscal policies have increased dangers of a 1967 recession and accused the Liberals of employing outdated measures to fight inflation.

By curbing education and research spending the government is harming the measures that can help the nation fight these pressures in the long run, he said.

This was using the "outdated technique of cutting what's vulnerable" to curb spending.

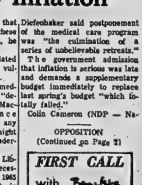
He said postponement of medical care insurance had "destroyed" Health Minister MacEachen and, the finance minister's speech ended any ambitions Mr. Sharp might have for the Liberal leadership.

Mr. Hamilton rapped the Liberals for forcing two unnecessary elections in 1962 and 1965 and said the government is spending towards another in 1967.

The "little people" should be given an opportunity to fight inflation, he said.

Canadians should be given incentives to save rather than being walloped with higher taxes. Other workers should be recalled to the work force and women between the ages of 21 and 45 should be encouraged to take jobs.

In an interview outside the Commons, Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said postponement of the medical care program was the culmination of a series of unbelievable retreats."



The government admission that inflation is serious was late and demands a supplementary budget immediately to replace last spring's budget "which totally failed."

Want Council To Clean Lot, Charge It Back

TRENTON — A solicitor's advice will be sought as to whether or not the town could clean up the premises at 80 Crown Street, occupied by plumber Robert Weller, and charge it back in taxes, with impunity.

Neighbors who signed a petition read out at the town council meeting last night, asked the town to do something about the "unsightly, unsanitary mess," and enclosed photos to back their point.

Councillor Rose Burtt questioned the legality of the town setting foot on private property for the purpose of cleaning it up.

A rider to the petition, to the effect that a town-owned lot next to Mr. Weller was in much the same state, caused a few chuckles to be raised at the meeting.

Council took a more ticklish problem when Mr. William Street where an irate resident reports a neighbor using a vacant lot (owned by the CNR) for outdoor toilet facilities.

The tenant of one house without facilities has permission to use the toilet in an adjoining house during the day, but at night the door is locked against all comers.

Council decided to write to the owner of the toiletless house and point out that sewer facilities were in the neighborhood and that facilities should be installed before further rentals are considered.

Seven Truck Drivers Charged For Big Loads

TRENTON — Truck drivers passing over Trenton bridge on Wednesday were in for a rude awakening.

Police asked several to fall out of traffic and weigh their load on scales borrowed from the Dept. of Transport. One truck was 18 tons overweight; another eight tons over. In all, seven drivers were charged and will make a court appearance.

The weighing will be carried out at intervals with the hope of lightening the load on the 50-year-old structure.

Councillor Paul Tripp would like to see a sign on the bridge restricting the gross vehicle weight. He said at council last night that the sooner the public would hardly be interested in paying for major repairs to the bridge ten years from now.

Mayor James MacDonald demurred. He said the chief engineer with the Dept. of Highways had ruled the Trenton Bridge one of the most substantial in Ontario.

Councillor Tripp said it might be hard to explain to Trenton-ites in 1974 that a chief engineer of 1966 was responsible should a major repair job be needed on the bridge.

200 Farmers Attend Land Use Day

TRENTON —More than 200 Northumberland County farmers attended a Major Land Use Day at the farm of Oscar Davey, north of Cobourg, yesterday.

Practical demonstrations included directions for a 6-annex pile system draining four adjacent farms; reclamation of swamp by means of drainage; "contour" or "strip" planting on hills, (100 feet of corn, an "erosion" crop would be alternated with grass for grain, non-erosion crops); removal of stone piles and fences on which the government pays a 50 per cent subsidy; reforestation of stoney land through planting of trees; and the construction of farm ponds on which the government pays a 50 per cent subsidy.

Farm ponds must be of 4,000 square foot size and ten feet deep. Stone piles or fences may be removed by burying or carting away. In the case of rough, stoney pastures, grass should be killed by chemicals first then treated planted.

Ralph H. Lane of the soils department, University of Guelph, spoke to the assembled farmers after dinner and said that He said proper tile drains expected to last for their through yield within two to five years.

The program commenced at 10:30 a.m. with a wagon tour of the 185-acre Davey farm. This part of the program was directed by Agriculture Jack Hagarty. Tile drainage equipment and bulldozers for fence removal were in use on the farm for demonstration purposes.

Will Sponsor Phone Messages

TRENTON — Starting Monday, Sept. 12, if you are troubled or in doubt that life is really worth while, you will be able to hear a brief message of encouragement and help as well as a prayer offered on your behalf by dialing 392-1255.

This unique public service, known as "Daily Manna" is being sponsored by Bethel Temple, 77 Herman Street and the inspirational hint (a different one each day) will be given by the pastor, Rev. David Minor of the "Good Samaritan."

The messages are taped, and the equipment for this service was installed in the Bell Telephone Company. Two separate messages will be available to callers by one number, so that if the first telephone is engaged another caller will be automatically switches you over to the other telephone.

The service will be available to telephone users in Trenton, Frankford, Wooler, Brighton, Colborne, Cobourg, Deseronto on the free dialing system.

Mr. Minor says this device will be a sign on the Bethel church on the west coast. This new concept of religious and spiritual communication has been used throughout Canada and the U.S. In Montreal, several Pentecostal churches sponsored the service and as high as 21 lines were installed with messages given in English, French and Italian.

In Toronto, the Salvation Army has used a similar counselling service for those needing help.

From Monday on, those wishing personal counselling may telephone Mr. Minor at 392-3742 to arrange an interview.

Several Town Officials Ill

TRENTON — Trenton's town officials are very much "under the weather."

Clerk Comptroller O. W. Larmer is away from work through illness.

Town solicitor, Rodgrick Campbell has asked for the month of September off, without pay, because he is in hospital.

H. S. Pate, chairman of the Board of Health and sanitary inspector, has also been hospitalized.

Council last night appointed Wm. G. Watson and Robert Gersly to do law business for the town on a fee basis during Mr. Campbell's absence.

MOH Dr. E. W. Dow will be asked to appoint health board member E. D. Topping to carry out Mr. Pate's duties as sanitary inspector until Mr. Pate is well enough to resume his duties.

Town Will Accept Cash For Park Land

TRENTON — Dufferin Development Co. Limited principals are Frank Miron and John Wiggers, will be advised by the town that five per cent (5%) of the contract price for their land, ($19,000), would be acceptable in lieu of a five per cent land grant for parks' purposes . . . provided the "contractor" price is the right evaluation in the eyes of the planning commissioner J. Allan Smith.

The town has no need of a park near the new development which is part of the Downs-Coulter complex, and adjacent to Hanna Park.

REFUSED REQUEST

James Miyanski of the Canadian Forces Base will be disappointed to learn that town council will not honor his request to open the door to coin operated amusement machines in the municipality. If council did, it would be contravening a by-law.

Mr. Miyanski wanted to put German made football machines in the establishment.

C. Plachta may be luckier. He wants to install gas pumps at the corner of Trenton and Davis Streets.

The town's governing by-law calls for 20 sets of pumps — but owing to annexation of parts of Murray and Sidney Township, there are now 30.

Whether the existing by-law should be rescinded and rewritten, whether it is the by-law was already not in order . . . Mr. Plachta should be permitted to go ahead, will be decided by a lawyer.

Hockey Season Will Be Off To Early Start

TRENTON — The hockey season will be off to an early start in Trenton this year with the Belleville Senior A's scheduled to start practice sessions in the arena on Oct. 1.

And the Trenton Apple Kings will start practice early in October.

Arena manager Ron Thornton said today the ice would be put in the arena before the end of this month.

Exhibition games will be held here Oct 7, 11 and 14.

2nd Generation Artificial Kidney Tested in Kingston

OTTAWA (CP) — A second-generation artificial kidney developed in Canada will provide a new lease on life soon for Canadians who might otherwise die from kidney failures.

Details of the device, tested in Kingston were presented to a conference here by Fred Simonsen, vice-president of Kingmed Limited, the Kingston-based developers.

Artificial kidneys already are in use in many hospitals, taking over the vital job of cleansing the blood when the human kidney fails.

But the machines can handle only a limited number of patients. This raises the delicate moral problem of deciding which patients should benefit from the lengthened life span.

Most patients require two treatments a week. With present equipment, each takes between 12 and 14 hours, limiting severely the number of patients each can serve.

COST REDUCED

In a recent nine-month test at Kingston General Hospital the new device cut the time for each treatment to six hours and reduced the operating cost per patient to about $3,500 per year, half of the cost with present equipment.

He said the government should face the United States with a "full accompli" by abolishing tariffs. If the U.S. didn't react within five years, quotas on U.S. imports might have a salutary effect.

Price controls should be established on such basic commodities as steel, copper, aluminum and pulp and paper to control inflation.

It was "useless to deny" that wage increases in basic industries have at times set off an inflationary spiral.

In these cases collusion between labor and management was at fault.

Hasty Pees Offer Many Attractions

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment starts an intensive fall and winter training program tomorrow.

The schedule will begin with a day's participation in patrol work at Point Petre in Prince Edward county. It will be supported by aircraft from the Canadian Armed Forces Station Trenton.

Lieut. Colonel H. D. F. Willcocks, commanding officer, is desirous of having as many young men as possible take advantage of the new training.

Among many new attractions this year will be basically par parades instead of the customary twice-a-year events.

The summer training course proved an unqualifying success, according to a regimental spokesman.

That it met with the approval of parents of the young soldiers in seen in the fact that seven parents of ten discussed the training with Colonel Willcocks and stated that it was highly satisfactory to them.

The consensus was "it was an excellent thing for the boys and did not interfere with other activities."

The regiment consults with high school officials of the city with regards to non-interference with studies or examinations.

No training periods will be held during the examination days.

The regiment has a proud record in military training and is rated one of the best in this part of Canada.

"We would like to see a large number of young men turn out with us this year," said the spokesman. "We will make the training as interesting as possible. We are sure recruits will find it that way."

Hopes Fade For Finding Three Alive

TRENTON, Ont. (CP)—The search for a 25-foot sailboat missing since Sunday with three men aboard swung to eastern Lake Ontario and the upper St. Lawrence River Thursday as hope faded for finding the men alive.

The duty controller at the Canadian Forces search and rescue station here said Thursday night Lake Ontario has been searched "from end to end with aircraft and we think we would have them" if there were any sign of their there.

The three - manned converted lifeboat, which carried an auxiliary 18 - horsepower outboard motor, was last seen Sunday afternoon when she left Toronto on the four - hour trip to St. Catharines.

On board were the boat's owner and skipper, Wayne La Flamme, 27, of St. Catharines and his cousins Stephen Hancock, 20, and Lee Hancock, 23, both of Niagara Township.

LaFlamme's father, Thomas, of St. Catharines, said from his home Thursday night that authorities "have pretty well abandoned the search in the south shore" of Lake Ontario from the Niagara River to Hamilton.

The search and rescue controller here said the search is being conducted along the lake's north shore on the theory that the boat or its wreckage would have been blown by the southwest, winds which have prevailed since the boat was reported missing.

Trenton Wants Murray Twp. Included in County Planning, Otherwise Is Not Interested

TRENTON —Trenton council voted last night to ask a resolution to the Minister of Municipal Affairs, Hon. W. J. Spooner, to the effect that the town had no interest in joining the proposed Hastings County Planning Unit, unless the County of Northumberland and in particular Murray Township were included in the unit.

The move was instigated by Councillor Paul Tripp, who said council should speak its mind before inclusion in the Hastings unit was "imposed" on the town by the province.

Councillor Tripp said that the town of Trenton was to the northwest, and that, other than washing Hastings well, the town had no real interest in a county planning set-up with Hastings.

Under any plan with the adjoining townships, Trenton would want to retain its own planning board, the councillor said. Linked with Hastings, the cost to the town would be increased, he said, and participation in the proposed county planning council's powers "it would be virtually impossible for Trenton to retain any decision made by a county board," Councillor Tripp said. The town's existing official plan would be "scrapped."

If arrangements can not be made to include Murray Township in the proposed county plan, Trenton should opt out of the plan entirely, in the councillor's opinion.

Council also voted not to join the Hastings County and City of Belleville Health Unit at this time. Trenton has a good health unit, the council said, and considering increased costs and other factors, it would be fetter to wait at least until 1967 before committing the town to participation in the county health scheme.

And the Trenton Apple Kings will start practice early in October.

Exhibition games will be held here Oct 7, 11 and 14.

Rail Bill

old exemption from municipal taxes on its main line on the Prairies.

WILL END IN STAGES

Mr. Pickersgill read a letter from Ian Sinclair, president of the CPR, saying the exemption will lapse in three stages beginning the first Jan. 1 after the railways bill has been passed by Parliament.

An historic 1880 agreement gave the privately-owned railway perpetual exemption from municipal taxes on the main line and this later was applied to the publicly-owned CNR.

The transport minister said the CPR is an example of "good corporate citizenship" voluntarily agreed to forgo the constitutional exemption.

Mr. Sinclair's letter said that the transport minister had informed the company that the exemption ignored a financial burden on the affected municipalities that is not carried by other sections of the CPR system.

Mr. Pickersgill said the government will instruct the CNR to make payments to municipalities as though it is liable. For some years the CNR has made grants in lieu of taxes.

OUTLINES POLICY

The railway legislation, besides establishing the big board called the Canadian Transportation Commission, outlines a national transportation policy and is designed to give the railways freedom to compete with other forms of transport.

A freeze on freight rates imposed by the Diefenbaker government will be gradually withdrawn and the railways will be permitted to abandon some uneconomic branch lines.

Although the bill passed readily on second reading 174 to 27 vote, some opposition MPs called "on division," signalling their objection to the discrimination against the Maritimes, Western Canada and Northern Ontario.

"Are we going to hand over to the tender mercies of the CPR and the CNR the right to say this is what we are going to charge?" Mr. Diefenbaker asked.

"I cannot accept this."

Govt. Action Would Mean Little to City

The Federal government proposal under the terms of the new transportation bill for the CNR and the CPR to pay full municipal taxes in the future would not mean a great deal in Belleville unless assessment regulations were also changed.

At least this is the opinion of one city hall official who said today that the railways already pay taxes on buildings.

"They pay taxes on the railway owned buildings in Belleville on which taxes are not paid," said City Assessment Commissioner Leighton Thompson.

He said, however, that if regulations were changed to allow assessment of trackage and other properties it could mean something to the city.

Man Fined $100 In Driving Case

Gerald Charles Vickers, 25, of 65 Montgomery Boulevard in the city was found guilty on a charge of dangerous driving by magistrate's court this morning and fined $100 and costs. Magistrate F. W. Wills also prohibited Vickers from driving a motor vehicle for a period of six months.

Vickers, who pleaded not guilty to the charge, was chased by police patrol car through city streets at speeds estimated up to 90 miles an hour. Police testified that during the evening in question, that of August 28, a vehicle driven by the accused and occupied by another passenger travelled at excessive speeds through a number of stop streets and for some time showed no lights.

DISCUSS NEW LEGAL AID LEGISLATION — In Belleville yesterday to discuss provincial legislation on legal aid which will soon be enacted was Andrew M. Lawson, Toronto lawyer recently appointed Director of Legal Aid for Ontario. Shown with him at the Hastings County Court House are two members of the Hastings Bar Association, R. W. Cass Q.C. (left) Bencher of the Ontario Law Society, and B. W. Hurley, president of the Hastings Bar Association.

New Legal Aid Program Will Provide Assistance For Those Unable to Pay

New provincial legislation will soon be enacted that will go a long way towards erasing the adage "there is a law for the rich and a law for the poor."

Bill 120, an act of the Ontario Legislature respecting legal aid, received third reading in the legislature June 28, and will be proclaimed as a law of the land sometime before the first of the year.

The Legal Aid Act is designed to improve the existing method of providing legal assistance to persons whose financial status serves as a barrier in this respect. It will be administered by the Law Society of Upper Canada, the governing body for lawyers in this province, and the new legal aid program will be subsidized by the provincial government.

The history of the act dates back to the formation in May of 1953 of a Joint Committee on Legal Aid. Members of the committee, including representatives from the government and law society, were appointed by F. W. Cass, then Attorney-General of Ontario.

HEARINGS HELD

Following a tour of the province, during which the 'big bold' hearings, the committee members visited the United States to study the Public Defender system of legal aid, and also travelled to Great Britain to observe English practices in this regard. The committee's report was tabled in legislature in March, 1955, and the Legal Aid Act subsequently drafted was based on the recommendations of this report.

The legal aid scheme stipulates that it will be put into effect by a Legal Aid Program Committee of the Upper Canada Law Society, of which G. Arthur Martin, Q.C., is the chairman (Mr. Martin will be representing Gordon Prescott in his upcoming trial.)

Mr. Andrew M. Lawson was chosen as Director of Legal Aid for this province, and asked by the Committee and the Attorney-General to tour the province to make recommendations concerning the division of Ontario into areas to facilitate the administration of the act.

Mr. Lawson, in Belleville yesterday on one of 46 stops he will have made in the province by October 6, told the Intelligencer that he will be recommending that the area encompassed by Hastings and Prince Edward counties be designated as a area under the provisions of the Legal Aid Act.

AREA DIRECTORS PROPOSED

An additional task of Mr. Lawson's is the recommendation to the Law Society and the Attorney-General of individuals for appointment as area directors of the program. Mr. Lawson met with members of the Hastings County Bar Association yesterday afternoon to discuss the new legislation, and its ramifications, and to ask the area bar to recommend an area director.

"All aspects of charity have been removed from legal aid in Ontario by the new bill," said Mr. Lawson. "The Act envisages there are some people who can pay nothing, some who can pay something, and others who can make a more substantial contribution towards the cost of any legal assistance they might incur."

The present arbitrary means test, whereby an applicant for legal aid earning more than $2,500 per annum, plus $300 for each dependant is refused legal aid, will be replaced by a "needs" test. This does not mean that an applicant will receive professional legal counsel, long free of charge — rather that his contribution to a legal aid fund will be determined by an officer of the Department of Public Welfare.

CHOOSE OWN LAWYER

Once the financial contribution has been determined by the welfare officer, a Legal Aid Certificate may be issued, in some cases by an area director, and in others by an area committee. (An area committee would consist of a number of lawyers and senior civil servants from that area.)

Once an applicant has received a certificate qualifying him for legal aid, he has the right to choose his own lawyer from those serving on one or all of the three panels set up under the legal aid scheme — criminal, civil, criminal, and legal advice. Since, as Mr. Lawson says, "the Law Society feels that every lawyer in the province will volunteer to serve on a panel," this should mean that a applicant for legal aid could choose a lawyer in Ontario for his counsel. Some of the top names in the legal profession have already volunteered to assist in providing legal aid under the program.

Under existing provisions for legal aid, lawyers are usually appointed, and never receive remuneration for their services. Now that an accused person will have the right to select his own lawyer for a trial, says Mr. Lawson, "no accused will ever be able to say he was not aware of his legal rights."

ADD DUTY COUNSEL

As might be expected, the plan necessitates a change in present court procedure structures. In magistrate's courts, where there is no time for an accused to process for a legal aid certificate, a duty counsel will be added to the court staff to be legal aid on the spot if the accused wishes him to do so. The duty counsel will speak for reduced charges, and once the preliminaries are over, the accused can process for his legal aid certificate through the proper channels. If the accused wishes to plead guilty, the duty counsel can speak to sentence and will inform the accused of his rights of election.

An Advisory Committee on Legal Aid will report to the Attorney - General annually on the administration of the program by the Law Society, in the form of a report tabled in the legislature. This "public watch-dog" group will consist of a high court judge, a county or district court judge, a magistrate, two members of the provincial bar association, a welfare officer, and such other persons as the Attorney-General deems fit to appoint.

The new Act will give the Law Society a broader base of operations from which legal aid provisions can be distributed. The present scheme is operated by local bar associations. The new program will span the province, but have a central source of authority to give legal aid uniformity in Ontario.

The act will also be an incisive one, dealing with matters from Division to Supreme courts from indictable offences to summary convictions, and following appeals through to the Supreme Court of Canada.

One flagrant discriminatory practice inherent in the present legal aid system will be eliminated under the new scheme. At present, if an accused has a previous criminal record, it is up to the discretion of the local legal aid director as to whether or not the accused will receive legal aid. Once the new act is put into effect, it means that an accused has a previous record in no way will effect his rights to a legal aid certificate.

FILES FOR DIVORCE

FREDERICTON (CP) — Divorce papers were filed Tuesday by Mrs. Henry G. Irwin of St. Andrews, N.B., wife of a former education minister in Premier Louis J. Robichaud's Liberal government. Mr. Irwin, first elected to the New Brunswick legislature in the 1960 general election, was dismissed by Premier Robichaud April 8 as education minister and a member of the executive council.

Possibility of Resignation Of Health Minister Renews Cabinet Crisis Atmosphere

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—The possibility of the resignation of Health Minister MacEachen renews the crisis atmosphere that has surrounded the Pearson cabinet.

Regarded by some Liberals as a potential successor to Prime Minister Pearson, Mr. MacEachen today was considering Thursday whether to resign his portfolio following the cabinet's decision to put off medical care insurance coverage until July, 1962.

Reliable informants said the 46-year-old Nova Scotia bachelor had drafted a letter of resignation, but would decide later whether to give it to Prime Minister Pearson, now in London for the Commonwealth conference.

Only last March, Justice Minister Cardin precipitated a major crisis in Liberal ranks when he handed his resignation to Mr. Pearson after the prime minister overruled Mr. Cardin and established an inquiry into the George Spencer security case.

SHOOK GOVERNMENT

Four or five Quebec ministers told Mr. Pearson that they, too, would resign if Mr. Cardin left. A French - English split threatened the Liberal party and the Canadian Pearson government.

Mr. Cardin announced March 9 he had withdrawn his resignation. Four days later, seven of them charged that their reputations had been harmed by the resignation of Mr. Cardin. Both had been severely criticised for buying furniture on easy credit from a firm that later went bankrupt under mysterious circumstances.

HIT BY REPORT

In July, 1960, Guy Favreau resigned as justice minister after his judgment was criticized in the Dorion judicial inquiry report and moved to the figurehead portfolio of Privy Council president.

William Benidickson resigned as mines minister for health reasons and was appointed to the Senate.

Still another French Canadian minister, Yvon Dupuis, was dismissed as minister without portfolio by Mr. Pearson after the Quebec race-track franchise affair. He was convicted this year of dishonesty charges and is now appealing.

In early 1964, three ministers resigned for various reasons. They were Justice Minister Favreau, now high commissioner in London, Postmaster-General Arthur Maheu, now senator, and Senator Rene Monette, now in the government lobby.

GIVES LOANS TOTAL

OTTAWA (CP)—Loans totalling $1,000,000 to a total of 21,272 students under the Canada Student Loans Plan during the year ending June 30, the finance department announced Wednesday. During the first year of operation, now in its third year, loans totalled $26,000 to some 4,000 students. The plan provides government-guaranteed bank loans to students for full-time studies beyond secondary school.

Five Children Are Missing From Home

TORONTO (CP)—Police said Saturday night five children are missing from the Warren-dale home for emotionally-disturbed children.

The reported runaways followed the takeover of the home earlier Thursday by the Ontario health department.

The former staff of the centre resigned after the executive director, John Brown, was dismissed last month by the board of directors.

Baby Budget

pensions "we will be able to review our general fiscal position," Mr. Sharp said.

He also announced that the target date for the federal medical care insurance program will be set back one year to July 1, 1968.

A number of minor federal programs would be scrapped for the time being. And, in a jarring note for the provinces, Mr. Sharp said Ottawa cannot meet their requests for more tax revenues.

The finance minister said the measures must be taken because the economy is overworked and demands on it must be cut.

Without calling them his own, Mr. Sharp also set out a guideline for annual wage increases of four or five per cent. Anything higher would contribute to inflation because it would exceed the increase in productivity, he said.

"These facts of economic life are not a guide to demands which Mr. Sharp promised to keep by tax increases to a minimum by deferring or dropping several minor programs, although it appeared that none of the programs would have involved much federal spending in 1967.
